"The layman who calls at a home with a pledge card must go there to share a personal conviction with a fellow Christian. This is not to say he must submerge the needs of the operating budget and missionary quotas, but rather that he is impatient to share a great conviction with someone he holds in high regard."

In this diocese the Every Member Canvass is gradually becoming less of a seasonal drive, and more of an all-year-round attitude. This is the Division of Stewardship's idea of a meaningful program:

" . . . A courageous, well-planned and executed, Church-centered stewardship program goes far beyond the purpose of raising dollars. It marks the beginning of a better understanding by the individual of his relationship to the Church; it provides individual motivation for the assessment of this relationship; and it accomplishes a commitment which is meaningful and enduring for the individual and the Church . . .

" . . . On any other basis than this, the demand for dollars bears no relationship to the Christian cause . . . "

The Bishop's Message

Once again the call goes forth, through the Every Member Canvass visitation, for the support of the Church. This is our common privilege, responsibility, and opportunity. The annual appeal now being presented in your congregation enables you to participate in the total mission of the Church. Your response will in great measure determine whether or not the Church will go forward in the fulfillment of its divine task.

As members of the Church, our bounden duty is "to follow Christ, to worship God every Sunday in his Church, and to work and pray and give for the spread of his kingdom." Contributing only to the support of your own congregation is not giving "for the spread of his kingdom." Our Lord's command to his disciples was, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

We are, of course, obliged to uphold and strengthen the work of our own congregations, but as committed Christians we are also responsible for the maintenance and extension of the Church's ministry in urban and rural communities of our own Diocese of New York, in areas of our country, and in lands overseas. The Every Member Canvass gives you an opportunity to participate in the world-wide mission of the greater Church.

I urge you to make a prayerful, thoughtful, sacrificial response that your congregation, your Diocese, and your Church may be enabled to move forward with power.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

SPIRITUAL HEALING

MODERN MYTH

OR

ANCIENT GIFT?

A tape recorded interview with
Dr. Alfred Price, Warden,
International Order of St. Luke the Physician

Spiritual healing.

A delusion? A fake? Quackery? A return to superstition?

Time magazine conceded recently: "A faith healer, as loyal TV watchers know, is likely to be a hot-eyed spellbinder, his eye cocked to the collection plate and his theology about as solidly grounded as his gospel tent."

But then the magazine described a healing service where "a retarded girl of about six and an old man with an ugly facial growth received a blessing as dignified as the setting: 136-year-old St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Philadelphia." Time quoted the rector, the Rev. Alfred W. Price: "This is no hocus-pocus. This is a sacrament you are about to receive . . . "

For many Episcopalians all over the nation, healing services are no hocus-pocus. In this diocese, 29 churches have them regularly. In many others there are formal prayers for the sick, who are mentioned by name. But many people have questions about the Church's part in curing physical ills. Is this just a new fad? Does it really work? Why do you need a special service?

Dr. Price is perhaps the best known proponent of spiritual healing in the Episcopal Church today. He began this work in 1942 and now travels all over this country and abroad. He visited St. John's, Larchmont, this year. The Bulletin was there and asked him if he would answer some especially loaded qustions. Dr. Price said he would. Here are the results:

What is "spiritual healing," Dr. Price?
A. I would define spiritual healing as we define the word "salvation." Healing of the total personality — body, mind and soul.

Q. What is a healing service?
A. Well, strictly speaking (in the context of the above definition) the Episcopal Church is a healing Church, and our liturgy is a healing liturgy. As clergymen, our job is to relate our liturgy to real, down-to-earth problems. To get this relation across to people, we feel that we do need special services. And a healing service is given that name so that every person will recognize it as a service dealing with the problems of people. Unless we have such a special service, people will have no idea that the Church is concerned with healing, or that it has any therapy.

I must say that in one of the very obvious services of healing in the Church — the service of Holy Communion — I've counted 24 references to healing. A few of these are probably very familiar to you: "Cleanse the thoughts of our hearts . . . that we may perfectly love thee." "Direct, sanctify, and govern, both our hearts and bodies . . . that . . . we may be preserved in body and soul." Our vocabulary has very definite references to healing throughout all the services of the Church.

Q. What does a clergyman do at a healing service? Anything out of the ordinary?
A. In the Episcopal Church, where we're used to the sacramental approach, we can more or less see through the material to the spiritual, and a healing service doesn't create a picture of magic or hocus-pocus. We encourage people to come up to the altar rail and kneel humbly for a healing blessing, just as we do in Holy Communion, Confirmation, and all the other sacramental acts within the Church.

Q. Are there any special qualifications for conducting a healing service? Must the person who conducts it be a priest? Or can he be a layman?
A. One of the outstanding men in the ministry of healing in the Anglican Communion was a layman by the name of James Moore Hickson. About 1910 the Lambeth Conference gave him a green light, and as a layman he conducted healing services in America and elsewhere. No, a man doesn't have to be a priest.

However, we do feel that the clergy have a definite responsiblity in this type of service because they are set apart, we believe, in ordination, to do this. We believe in the priesthood of the people, but certain things will not be done if men are not set apart and ordained to baptize and celebrate the holy mysteries — preach, teach, heal, and do all the other important things we associate with the on-going of the Christian Church.

Q. In some denominations people just sort of take it into their heads to go out and hold healing services. Oral Roberts, for instance. Could such a thing happen in the Episcopal Church?
A. Well, a person holding services would usually be invited by the clergy and church officials to do so. Some people have definite gifts — carisma, it is called. St. Paul called it that in his Epistle. Some people are "called" to be administrators, some have gifts of preaching, some have gifts of healing and so on. The Church has always recognized these gifts and tried to make use of the people who have them.

Q. Are there many of these people at present in the Episcopal Church?
A. Well, not too many. No.

Q. What would you say the difference is between our concept of spiritual healing and the teachings of Christian Science?
A. Well, where Christian Science—Mary Baker Eddy—sticks closely to Quinby's metaphysics, of course she's on solid ground. I would say this: that the orthodox churches have neglected this ministry, which is one-third of our Gospel and our commitment, and created a religious vacuum. Mary Baker Eddy and her followers have come in to fill this vacuum. The orthodox churches have turned their backs on one-third of the Gospel, whereas the others have turned their backs on two-thirds. Our concern is to get them both together. God is the source of all these good and perfect things — help, healing, all the rest. And he has definite gifts for his obedient children. We've got to put this back into its proper place. Not over-emphasize it. It's important, but not all-important. But it leaves this very serious vacuum, with the neglect that we've had over so many years.

Q. Why, if a person prays to God to be healed, must he go to an intermediary, or a minister, in the healing service? Does this imply that the priest has more influence with God than the afflicted person?
A. No, in our experience just as many people are healed at a distance through the prayers of the faithful as those who come directly into the service themselves. No, it doesn't mean that the individual needs the help of the clergy. But when we face up to things in a realistic way, we find that we are not meant to do these things alone. We need the help of others. It is the fellowship of the Church that really is the healing fellowship.

Q. If the ministry of healing is centuries old, why has it become popular only in recent years? Why the long period without it?

A. Well, it's true that after the fourth century there was a certain amount of neglect. But never in the 2,000 years of Christian history has this ministry been entirely neglected. We still have in our books of church history the actual prayers that were used by the bishops and early leaders of the Church. The Church Fathers and the leaders of the Reformation all believed and practiced spiritual healing. The records of Wesley, Fox, Zwingli, Knox, Luther — all bear evidence that they experienced healing in their own problems and encouraged the clergy to use these healing services.

In our day I would say the interest in spiritual healing has to do with the general change that has come over people and the recrudescence of religion — people coming back to the Church after many years of sterility. My generation was brought up in the heyday of what we call Humanism — the idea that God helps those who help themselves, and that through education and elimination of so-called religious superstition we can have a peaceful world and the brotherhood of man. But the promises of Humanism have failed. Miserably. So that people are now coming back to the Church chastened. The whole attitude has changed. They are accepting the great miracle of the Incarnation — God coming down to earth in Christ — feeling that only God has the answer. In humility they're coming to the Church with open minds, receptive to the full teaching of the church.

Q. Are there medically proved cases of spiritual healing?

A. Yes. We get an average of 80 unsolicited letters of testimony a week at St. Stephen's in our modest ministry. Books of case histories of authentic healings exist. These healings are inexplicable as far as modern science is concerned. The Roman Catholic Church has a great body of evidence from Lourdes, where the cases are carefully scrutinized and the Church's standards very severe. In these cases there's absolutely no medicine involved. Lourdes has managed to get perfect case histories — which are very difficult to get, by the way.

Now, there are very few disciplined experiments going on, so we don't have too much evidence in this country. We don't keep case histories at St. Stephen's, although our files are open to anyone who is interested. But there is evidence. These services have been going on for 20 years, and most of the people come because they run into other people who have been helped. We feel that there must be something very definite and down-to-earth in this ministry, or these services would not continue over any length of time.

We call our work "spiritual healing" rather than "faith healing" because we do not see anything inconsistent in a person using all the resources available in the material world of science. Our idea of faith is inclusive — everything God has put on the earth, material and spiritual. But we are not to leave God as the last resort as so many people do. He is to be the first resort, and we feel that in many cases if God had been put first, the operation would not have been necessary. If an operation is necessary, the surgeon is able to do a much better job when the person has put God first in the problem, with the knowledge that God is the source of all healing.

God heals directly through prayer or faith, or indirectly through the doctors or medicine, the nursing care, and all the rest. But it's all of one piece. It's all from God, so that to win perfect harmony, cooperation is necessary with the doctors and surgeons and everyone who is involved in his healing ministry.

Q. But why can't we get healings out of the realm of hearsay and down to case histories?

A. Well, we do get them down to case histories. There's a big book by Ruth Cranston, a Protestant woman who went to Lourdes and recorded what she found. But these case histories, instead of being read, are gathering dust in our libraries.

Sometimes, in talking about the statistics at Lourdes and other places, people will say, "Well, the proved healings are so few." (Only two per cent of the people at Lourdes fall into the category of absolute and complete healing without any material aid whatever.) But that's a very unfair statement, because if one healing happens, it's scientific. The fact that it doesn't happen more frequently does not at all disqualify that as unimportant. If a chemist on Monday puts two chemicals together in a test tube and they give a blue color, they'll give that blue color on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and so on. Forever. If it doesn't happen the second time the chemist doesn't throw that out as inconsequential. He knows that something happened Tuesday. Some condition wasn't met on Tuesday. The tubes perhaps were not cleansed properly or the chemical elements were not exactly the same as they were on Monday. If a thing happens once, it's scientific. Now, that is why we need more disciplined experiments and more work done in this field — so that the percentage will be raised. We feel that if God can heal one cancer, for instance, he can heal all cancers. If he can straighten out one alcoholic, he can straighten out all alcoholics. In other words, the possibility of one is the potentiality of all, you see.

Q. Can you, yourself, cite any specific cases of healing during your ministry? Mrs. X had a healing of . . . ?

A. Oh yes. In 20 years at St. Stephen's Church, Philadelphia, where we've given one day a week to this ministry every Thursday, rain or shine, we have seen every type of organic, functional, mental, spiritual disease healed at our altar, from colds to cancer, from earache to epilepsy, from arthritis to chronic alcoholism, from mental depression to mental derangement.

At the same time, we've experienced, naturally, many, many failures. Not everyone is healed. Sometimes we know why. Many times we do not know why.

But as far as intercessory prayer is concerned, about 40 per cent of the people who write to us for help in prayer seem to get the "yes" answer. We have a group of people — 125 in all — who received healing of a major problem at our altar. In gratitude for what they have received, they have disciplined themselves to give a special time each day for prayers for others. We have people getting up at two, three, four or five in the morning. We have busy people in the business world who have their telephones disconnected for certain periods each day for this prayer. We have this continuous prayer 24 hours a day. We have, as I say, on the average of 80 unsolicited letters of testimony a week. Perhaps more people are helped but do not write.

And we're very humble about this. We feel that we haven't arrived, by any means. We're very conscious of failures and inadequacies, but we do feel that this is the direction in which we must go. As we go, God will reveal to us his secrets as we pay the price in spiritual discipline.

Q. Do you know of any persons who have been healed a number of times? Also, could a person just think he is cured and not be?

A. Well, yes to both questions. In this lifetime we go through one crisis after another. I do feel that when God does heal, and the cause of this sickness is healed, that there's no further trouble along that line. But many times, in doctors' work as well as in our own, people get relief from their symptoms and feel that they have a cure when the cause is still there. And then the trouble comes back later on because they were not really healed in the first place. So many people are looking just for help for the symptoms and not facing up to the cause and coming to terms with that. There's no miracle about healing. The body is natural. It should be in health and harmony as God created it and intended it to be. Something comes in to disturb the harmony. We call it dis-ease. You see, dis-harmony. Now we try to find the cause, remove that cause and the body returns to its natural, normal state, which is health and wholeness and healing.

There are two diagnoses which are important — the material, which is the doctor's responsibility, and the spiritual, which is ours. These TWO are very important. Authorities tell us that among many people suffering serious ailments the cause is not organic; it's functional. Psychosomatic, they call it. No disease attacks the body without a cause; and the scientists are telling us over and over again that the cause is more within than without — these terrible tensions under which people are living today, these crisscross currents, the resentments, "the wear and tear of the soul on the body," as Dr. Richard C. Cabot, one of our great scientists, put it. You see, the Church is in its element in this business. It's not the fifth wheel. We are dealing with the total personality — body, mind and soul.

Q. Is it true that some scientists today believe there is a possibility of all disease being psychosomatic?

Here's the Amazing New Hospitalization

This unique plan for non-drinkers pays you $100.00 cash (tax free) for every week you are in the hospital . . . from the very first day . . . even for life!

IF you do not drink, here is an opportunity to save up to 40% on your hospital insurance!

Gold Star Rewards You

If you carry ordinary hospitalization, you are naturally helping to pay for the accidents, illness, and hospital bills of drinkers. Alcoholism is our nation's No. 3 health problem, ranking immediately behind heart disease and cancer. Statistics show that those who drink are sick more often, and for longer periods. Until now, your insurance cost as much as theirs. Now, with rates based on the superior health records of non-drinkers, Gold Star rewards you instead of penalizing you for not drinking by offering you more coverage at a lower cost.

LEADING AMERICANS SAY:

THE REV. CANON ALBERT J. duBOIS, Executive Director, The American Church Union: "The low cost plan which DeMoss Associates has introduced seems to have real merit. As non-drinkers are considered less of an insurance risk than those who use alcoholic beverages, it seems fair for special insurance rates reflecting the savings to be made available to those who qualify."

THE REV. DR. SAMUEL SHOEMAKER, Rector Emeritus, Calvary Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania: "At last someone has come along with a practical, low-cost hospitalization insurance plan for non-drinkers. There has been a preferential rate for auto-drivers who don't drink, so why not a hospitalization insurance for those who do not indulge? The Gold Star has my blessing."

UPTON SINCLAIR, Pulitzer Prize author: "I think your idea of giving people the insurance discount which they earn by not shortening their lives with alcohol is a brilliant one, and I am glad to be counted in on it."

Gold Star is the only hospitalization plan voluntarily endorsed and recommended by over fifty nationally known leaders!

Only You Can Cancel

And the present low rate can never be raised as you grow older, or have too many claims, unless there is a general rate adjustment up or down for all policy holders! Moreover your Gold Star policy can never be cancelled by the company, no matter how long or how often you are sick. Your protection is guaranteed for life. Only you can cancel!

It Could Happen To You

Remember, one person in every two families will be hospitalized this year. A sudden fall, a spell of illness, or an operation could put you or one of your loved ones in the hospital for weeks, perhaps months, and could cost you hundreds, even thousands of dollars.

Don't Take Chances

Can you afford a long siege in the hospital, with costly but necessary doctors' bills, expensive drugs and medicines? Many people lose their savings, their cars, even their homes trying to meet these ever-increasing costs. Don't take chances with your financial security, or your future. Remember—once the doctor says it's your turn to enter the hospital, it's too late to buy coverage at any price!

Tax-Free Benefits

With Gold Star you gain not only good dependable protection, but also peace of mind, freedom from fear and worry, as well as assurance of financial security. If you can qualify for the Gold Star Plan, you will receive $100.00 a week, in cash, TAX FREE, from your first day in the hospital, for as long as you are there . . . even for life!

Plan Folks Everywhere Are Talking About

NO SALESMAN WILL CALL! DIRECT-BY-MAIL TO YOU!

COMPARE THESE GUARANTEED BENEFITS:

NO AGE LIMIT. Same liberal benefits whether you are 1 or 100!

GUARANTEED RENEWABLE. Only YOU can cancel your policy. Your protection continues as long as you live!

NO WAITING PERIODS. Full benefits go into effect noon of the day your policy is issued. And Gold Star pays from the very first day you enter the hospital.

NO SALESMAN WILL CALL. Policy is mailed to your home. Claim checks are sent air mail special delivery, directly to you, and can be used for rent, food, hospital, doctor bills—any purpose you wish!

GOOD ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD. Gold Star has satisfied policyholders in all 50 states and in many foreign countries.

YOU PAY ONLY FOR PROTECTION. No policy fees; no enrollment fees; no membership dues!

ADDITIONAL GOLD STAR BENEFITS

Pays $2000.00 cash for accidental death.
Pays $2000.00 cash for accidental loss of one hand, or one foot, or sight of one eye.
Pays $6000.00 cash for accidental loss of both hands, or both feet, or sight of both eyes.

ONLY CONDITIONS NOT COVERED

Every kind of sickness and accident is covered, except hospitalization caused by use of alcoholic beverages or narcotics, preexisting conditions, mental or nervous disorders, any act of war, or pregnancy. Everything else IS covered!

Happy Policyholders Write:

Mrs. N. L. Kolb, Rochester, New York: "I am most grateful for the hospitalization I received through the DeMoss service to non-drinkers. It was the only insurance I found covering my age of 86 years. Almost before the ink was dry on my policy, I fell, cracked a bone in my leg, and received payment for every day I was in the hospital."

Mrs. Adaline T. Hall, Treadwell, New York: "Thank you again for the second draft. This is beyond my hopes. Little did I expect to use it so soon, but sickness is no respecter of persons. God Bless you and all your staff of workers."

L. Newton Hayes, Plattsburgh, New York: "Thank you for your very prompt payment of the claim for Mrs. Hayes' accident. Your Gold Star Policies deserve widespread and enthusiastic requests for coverage from those qualified to enjoy them."

Mrs. Harry Mattison, Corning, New York: "Your check couldn't have come at a better time! With three small children to care for, we didn't know how we could have managed the doctor and hospital bills without it. All I could say all that day was 'Praise the Lord!' May God bless you all."

Josephine B. Smith, Flushing, New York: "How grateful I am to you for having such a wonderful company—I took out your insurance not knowing that very soon thereafter I'd be hospitalized. If I could, I would tell you how much that $300 check means to me."

Oh, What Those Termites Did at St. Margaret's!

Center: This is what termites can do! A close-up of the foundation beams at St. Margaret's, showing how they were nearly ground into powder.

Don't mention termites either to the congregation at St. Margaret's Church, Bronx, or to the Department of Missions, which is footing the bill for the damage these pesky insects did.

At one time last summer, St. Margaret's had a roof and a floor, but no walls! Not that the termites ate the whole structure, but they did such a good job with the beams, that rebuilding the walls was the only solution. The picture on this page shows how the church appeared when contractors had shored up the roof and were reconstructing the walls. They used a fine-textured building block for the interior and brick for the outside.

The termites were discovered as far back as 1958, when a two-phase reconstruction program was authorized. A new parish house, costing approximately $200,000, was opened in 1961. Immediately, the altar was moved from the church into the parish house gymnasium. That is where services are now being held. The church is expected to be finished around Thanksgiving. It will cost $216,000.

In addition to St. Margaret's, the Department of Missions has projects under way at three other mission churches: At St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, a new parish house. At St. David's, Manhattan, waterproofing and renovation work in the undercroft. At All Saints, S. I., a new church to replace the building which burned on December 26, 1958.

The parish house at St. Edward the Martyr actually has been on the books since 1960, when the Department of Missions was authorized to hire an architect. But roadblocks of all kinds have impeded progress. Various pieces of property in the neighborhood of 109th Street and Fifth Avenue were inspected, but none were available at an agreeable price. Finally, the owner of two tenement houses adjacent to the church offered to sell them. Relocation of the 32 families in the tenements took eight months. Demolition of the buildings was started, but a strike interrupted the work. At last plans were approved, and the construction contract was signed last March. By late October, the brickwork was finished and interior work was well under way. When finished, the parish house will be a 1½ story building of cinder block and brick. It will cost $227,430.

Annual Share Our Surplus Drive Starts Nov. 18 Throughout Nation

Thanksgiving is the time to be grateful for national abundance, but it is also the time to reflect on the needs of the sick and hungry, especially those overseas. It is the time for the annual Share Our Surplus drive in churches and communities.

The Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center is at Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Church groups wishing to meet there may call the manager, Mrs. Ellen Shea, at ELmwood 1-4651.

St. Thomas Church. Nov. 24-25.

Provincial Secretaries for College Work, National Council. Nov. 26-29.

Division of Evangelism, Interchurch Center. Dec. 8-9. ■

The Share Our Surplus program is the cooperative endeavor of 27 major Protestant, Anglican and Eastern Orthodox churches to provide help for as many as possible of the world's hungry and undernourished.

SOS foods are contributed by the United States government from its surplus stocks. In addition, foods required in overseas feeding programs, but not available from surplus supplies, are purchased. All food is distributed on the basis of need alone, without question of race or creed. In the Episcopal Church, part of the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief goes to SOS.

On November 18, the Sunday before Thanksgiving, the 1962-63 SOS program will be launched at an interdenominational National Service of Thanksgiving in Washington, D.C. Many churches in this Diocese are planning services and prayers around that time.

By the end of 1962, more than 300 million pounds of free food will have been distributed through the SOS program to more than 10 million persons. Gifts to SOS literally reach the ends of the earth.

A contribution of $1 makes available nearly 300 pounds of government surplus food, the dollar paying for shipment. Individual and parish gifts should be addressed to The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, and sent to Lindley M. Franklin, treasurer, 281 Park Avenue South, New York, 10, N. Y. ■

Niebuhr Lectures To Be Published

The lectures presented at the Reinhold Niebuhr colloquium last fall at the Cathedral will be published in book form this month. The book, edited by the Rev. Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor at the Cathedral, is called REINHOLD NIEBUHR, PROPHETIC VOICE IN OUR TIME.

The contents include three lectures, Dr. Niebuhr's response to these lectures, and an introduction by Canon Landon. The lecturers were Dr. Paul Tillich of Harvard University, a scholar who is recognized as one of this generation's great theologians; Dr. John C. Bennett, Dean of the Faculty and Reinhold Niebuhr Professor of Social Ethics at Union Theological Seminary; and Dr. Hans J. Morgenthau, Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center for the Study of American Foreign and Military Policy, University of Chicago.

Dr. Tillich's topic was "Sin and Grace in the Theology of Reinhold Niebuhr," Dr. Bennett, "Biblical Faith and Social Ethics in the Life and Thought of Reinhold Niebuhr," and Dr. Morgenthau, "The Influence of Reinhold Niebuhr in American Political Life and Thought."

Seabury Press is the publisher. The book will be available at the Cathedral Exhibit Hall at $2. ■

Bishop Donegan observed the 15th anniversary of his consecration as a Bishop in the Church of God on October 28, the Feast of St. Simon and St. Jude. The anniversary occurred while the Bishop was attending the meeting of the House of Bishops in Columbia, S. C. He observed it by celebrating Holy Communion in the Church of the Good Shepherd, Columbia.

Brotherhood To Meet

The convention will convene at 2:00 P.M. The guest will be the Rt. Rev. Stuart Wetmore, Suffragan Bishop of New York. Officers for 1963 will be elected. ■

Do you think all illness could be cured by spiritual means?

A. Well, one highly respected medical expert feels that rheumatoid arthritis is caused by the inner tensions which over-stimulate a series of glands, which, in turn, pour out too much adrenalin into the system, thus eating up the natural cortisone of the body, bringing on this very stubborn and painful malady. Another authority makes the very general statement that all disease is due to inner tensions. He bases his opinion on the operation of glands which produce vital hormones. He feels that when a person drives himself, becomes the victim of inner tensions, these glands do not produce the hormones to the proper point, resistance is lowered, and the person becomes a candidate for all kinds of disease.

But we live in a dangerous world. All sorts of terrible things can happen to us without our disobeying any of these spiritual laws or being consciously involved in tension. However, God has anticipated many of these things and has put within us so many healing, remedial agents that will take care of these disorders that we've got to learn more about that — how to help God help us in these areas where we are innocent, really, of any wrongdoing or mishandling of emotional situations.

And the more we know about it, the more wonderful we find God's creation and his love. God has no favorites. We're all his children. He has a purpose for everyone born into the world. We go back again and again to the kind of God we worship. Not, "Is there a God?" But, "Is God like Jesus?" And if God is like Jesus, we feel we're on firm ground. That is the Gospel — that is the Good News: That God is concerned with every area of our life, even down here in this material side — the bodily problems as well as the spiritual. ■

At St. David's the Diocese will spend $15,000. This will pay for a new roof, which already has been installed, new leaders and drains, electrical work, waterproofing, new aluminum windows, new stairway, new plumbing, and a new wire fence around the property. All this work is expected to be finished before the end of the year. Then contractors will bid on refurbishing the church windows.

Since All Saints Church burned down, the congregation has been holding services in various temporary quarters, including a former Methodist Church, Sailors' Snug Harbor, and a Seventh-Day Adventist Church. In June, 1961, plans for a new church were completed. The design calls for a building seating 125 persons, modern in feeling, with long, low lines. Bids were received on August 1, 1962, but only two contractors filed estimates. The project is being rebid. ■

ELNY Members Probe Ways Of Linking Church to Job

Suppose the man at the desk next to you in the office is cheating the company. What do you do? Suppose you're the foreman of 15 men and the boss tells you to fire five. They're all nice men with wives and kids. Which five do you fire?

Thirty men from Westchester considered problems like these during a five-hour session at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center in Tuxedo on September 23. The topic was "The Church's Job in the Business World." The meeting was planned by the Westchester Convocation, Episcopal Laymen of New York. The leader was the Rev. David G. Jones, Executive Secretary, Leadership Training Division, Department of Christian Education, National Council.

All kinds of pressures were discussed — personal ambition, moral decisions, the obligation to do as you're told, company policy, responsibility to your family and children, the temptation to accept bribery, the trend toward conformity. Except for five clergymen, all 30 men were junior or senior executives in business or industry. The professions were not represented. In age, the men ranged from forty to seventy.

They discussed ways in which people generally meet these occupational pressures, and then tackled the difficult question: How ought we to meet them?

In daily life people rationalize, the men conceded. "Everybody else is doing it." "If I don't do this, somebody else will." Sometimes people ignore pressures and hope they will go away. Sometimes they use a relative morality: "I'll hurt fewer people this way." Sometimes they get ulcers. Sometimes they give up. Sometimes they take things out on somebody else. Sometimes they just feel guilty.

The conference was the fall program for the Westchester Convocation of ELNY. W. Bruce May, Jr., of St. Barnabas, Irvington, is president. The Rev. Kenneth E. Mackenzie, Rector of St. John's, Larchmont, is Dean of the Convocation. ■

Memorial Service Held For Telephone Workers

A memorial service for those killed and injured in the New York Telephone Company boiler blast was held in the Great Choir of the Cathedral at 4 P.M., October 11. The building, at 213th Street and Broadway, was the accounting, traffic, sales, plant, and commercial office which served the Cathedral. Some of its employes had worked with Mrs. Marguerite Hanley, Cathedral operator, and her staff, over a period of many years.

One of those killed was a repair engineer who came to the Cathedral frequently. Two of the seriously injured serviced the Cathedral. The Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean, and the four Canons officiated at the service. The Cathedral choir sang. Attending were a number of Telephone Company officials, fellow employes of the blast victims, their families and friends, and members of the Cathedral and diocesan staffs. ■

St. Mary's Opens Rebuilt Church At Bishop's Visit

St. Mary's Church, Cold Spring, will never forget the fourteen months between July 27, 1961 and September 23, 1962.

On the first date, fire virtually wrecked the building. It demolished the roof, charred the walls, and left the whole interior a shambles.

On the second date, the Bishop of New York officially reopened an almost completely reconstructed building. Actually, the historic, gray granite church is more impressive and beautiful than ever before.

Rebuilding of the huge slate roof, painting of the interior, and restoration of the burned-out stained glass windows are the most obvious changes. The nave looks larger and brighter because of the light-toned woodwork and paint. And the architect, Walter Cooke Jago, had an ingenious idea for the chancel. Instead of replastering the walls, he left the stonework exposed. It looks modern, and at the same time it looks ancient.

In addition to this, the project included a new organ. The whole nave had to be replastered. There is a new steeple. There are new lighting fixtures. Electrical and heating work was extensive. The pews were sandblasted and refinished. So were the choir stalls. There are new kneeling cushions throughout the church. The frontals were replaced, and all of the brass candlesticks and vases were refinished. The undercroft was completely renovated.

The cost was $133,250. Chief engineer for the project was Newell S. Covert, churchwarden at St. Mary's. The contractor was the Putnam County Construction Co. James Lovell, a parishioner at St. Philip's, Garrison, is its president.

Naturally the congregation raised a good portion of the money. But aid for St. Mary's came all year long from far and wide. The Episcopal Laymen of Dutchess County helped. So did many individuals who sent checks to the rector, the Rev. John G. Mills. Some $15,000 came from churches in the Dutchess Convocation. One of the first groups to help was the Cold Spring Fire Department (many of whose members are Roman Catholic.) They set up a big bazaar on St. Mary's grounds and turned in $3,000.

Attending Bishop Donegan at the service were the Rev. Paul Collins of St. Mary's Convent, Peekskill; the Rev. Lloyd Ballinger of Poughkeepsie, the Rev. William S. Reisman, Rector of St. Philip's, Garrison, and Father Mills. The combined choirs of St. Mary's and St. Philip's sang.

The Sisters of the Community of the Holy Spirit, Manhattan, were special guests at the service. ■

Synod to Meet in Haiti

Bishops and clerical and lay delegates from the Diocese of New York will attend the 37th Synod of the Second Province to be held in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, from November 15-19. This will be the first time that the Provincial Synod meeting has been held off the continent. Except for a meeting in Mexico, previous Synods have met in the United States.

Bishop Donegan is president of the Second Province, which includes the Dioceses of Albany, Central America, Central New York, Dominican Republic, Haiti, Long Island, Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, Rochester, Virgin Islands and Western New York. The 45th Provincial meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen will be held at the same time. ■

. . . in brief

■ STUDENTS at St. Ann's Convent, Kingston, baked bread and sold it in the downtown shopping district as a project to raise money for a new Episcopal High School in the Philippines.

The bread was sold each Thursday at the Artcraft Camera Center in Kingston. The new school is being built at St. Francis Mission, Upi, on Mindaneo Island.

■ WE'RE SORRY that in last month's issue the name of Miss Pearl Ertel was inadvertently omitted from the list of staff members at the Summer Camp for Older People at Ivoryton, Conn. These staff members were not mentioned by name in the report written by Esther Stamats, and when they were added to the story by the editor, the list consulted did not include Miss Ertel. As director of arts and crafts, Miss Ertel contributed greatly to the success of this camping program.

■ TWO MEMBERS of St. James', Manhattan, have been elected to the board of directors of the New York City Mission Society. They are Congressman John V. Lindsay, representative from the 17th Congressional District, Manhattan; and Mrs. Thomas Marshall Green of 200 E. 66th Street. The New York City Mission Society is a non-denominational agency serving the metropolitan area.

■ ASTRONAUT Walter M. Schirra, Jr., who circled the earth six times in a Sigma spacecraft recently, is the second Episcopalian in the nation's space program. Schirra is a native of Oradell, N. J. He went to Sunday School in the thirties at the Episcopal Church of the Annunciation in Oradell. Special services were held at Annunciation on October 3, the day he went into orbit.

The first Episcopal astronaut was Malcolm Scott Carpenter. ■

ECW Convocations Begin New Season

Episcopal Churchwomen throughout the Diocese began their 1962-63 season during October by attending fall meetings in the Convocation where their Branch is located.

In general, the speakers focused attention upon one or the other of two major subjects selected for special consideration this year: "The Christian Mission on the Rim of East Asia," — the theme for foreign study, and "The Ministry of the Laity and Persons of Special Need,"—the theme for parish-oriented programs.

Following a precedent established last year, the Ramapo ECW combined its meeting with that of the Convocation on October 21 at Christ Church, Piermont. The Rev. Donald E. Bitsberger, Assistant Secretary of the Overseas Department, National Council, spoke on "Critical Opportunities Before the Church Today." He concentrated on the problems of the Church in Japan, where he served for some years.

A color film, "On the Rim of Tomorrow," was shown at the ECW meeting at St. Margaret's, Bronx, on October 22. A discussion followed.

The Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral, who spent considerable time in the Far East last summer, addressed the Manhattan group on October 24 at St. James'. His topic was "The Church's Mission in East Asia."

The challenges — and joys — which come with maturity were described for two ECW groups by Miss Esther C. Stamats, Director of Services for the Aged, diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations. She spoke at Church of the Ascension, S. I., on October 2, and at St. Mary's, Cold Spring, Dutchess Convocation, on October 17. The latter was a morning meeting, beginning with Holy Communion.

Hudson Convocation also started its meeting with Holy Communion on October 18. The speaker, at St. George's, Newburgh, was the Rev. George Hann, Chaplain at Wallkill State Prison.

An article on the Westchester meeting, at which Lady Fisher was the speaker, will appear next month. ■

Church Invites Community To Thrash Out Hot Issue

Episcopal Churchwomen at St. Paul's, Spring Valley, believe that a church should provide community leadership. That is, when people get stirred up about an issue, the church should take the initiative and get all the pros and cons thrashed out.

That is what the ECW did when the question of Medicare was arousing such controversy. The results were such an unqualified success that more programs of this type will be held.

The Public Affairs Guild of St. Paul's ECW invited two doctors, a Congressional candidate and a political party representative to an open meeting in the parish house. Citizens of Spring Valley (population 6,500) jammed the place. Mrs. Walter I. Morrow, ECW President, opened the meeting. Mrs. Nancy Soderberg of the Public Affairs Guild was the moderator. It was carefully explained that the church's purpose was not to take sides on Medicare but to get the facts clarified for the benefit of the community.

After the formal talks, the panel answered questions, some of which generated considerable heat. Radio station WGNY, Newburgh, taped the program and broadcast it later.

Actually, ECW interest in serving the community this way was started last spring when the group invited Mayor John Balogh to explain the growth and management of a village such as Spring Valley. The Rev. Frederick Johnson, rector of St. Paul's, is strongly encouraging these education forums. "Sometimes churches shy away from this sort of thing," he admits. But he doesn't believe they should. The ECW plans another public information program shortly after the first of the year.

The Bishop's Christmas Message

When we celebrate a birthday we think of the life for which it stands. So, on Christmas Day we remember the tremendous truth revealed by the whole life of the Lord Christ.

The most important knowledge man can have is knowledge of God. The report of man's experience with God is varied. Earnest people have said that he is righteous; others that he is just, and even more, that he is all-powerful. The meaning of Christ's life includes that truth but leaps immeasurable distances beyond it. By his words, still more by his deeds, and most of all by his present indwelling, Christ convinces us that God is love. God's gift of Christ is the evidence of his love; it is the deepest meaning of Christmas Day.

This assurance is the confirmation of intimations which come to us in the supreme events of human living. When a parent keeps on loving a child who has caused endless disappointment and grief we know what human love can be. When a man forgives the one whose perfidy has wrecked his career we know what human love can be. Christ lived and died, and rose again, to show us that such love is not only the most potent factor in the life of man but also that it is the very key to our knowledge of God himself. The highest intimations of man's love point to a love still greater. God's love is a central fire from which the best human loving is as a spark.

Christ on Christmas Day entered the world in love, and, henceforth, knowing him, we know that God is more loving; he is love. Mysteries and problems still abound, but the central question is answered: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, to the end that all that believe in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

May God bless you this Christmastide, and guide and protect you throughout the coming year.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

The Archbishop of Canterbury's

The arrival of the Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, on October 12 signalled the beginning of five historic and momentous days for the Diocese of New York. Although Dr. Ramsey had visited America three times previously, this was his first trip since he became the 100th Archbishop of Canterbury. He was accompanied by his wife and by his chaplain, the Rev. John Andrew.

The Archbishop was met by Bishop Donegan, the Rt. Rev. John B. Bentley, Director of the Overseas Department of the Episcopal Church; and the Hon. Alan M. Williams, the British Consul General. Dr. Ramsey went straight from his transatlantic jet into the airport news room, where batteries of news and television writers and photographers were waiting. He greeted the press with a wave of his hand and the broad smile that was to become so familiar.

Asked about the Ecumenical Council in Rome he said: "Perhaps it will achieve certain modifications with a promise for unification." He added, "It is unrealistic to expect a fundamental change in the Roman Catholic doctrine, but there might be a shifting in proportion of basic issues." He said Pope John XXIII "is a new symbol of genuine friendliness among all Christians throughout the world." But he could not see "any hope for the unification of the Christian churches in our lifetime."

After the press conference the Archbishop and his party were whisked by limousine to the Bishop's House on Cathedral Heights—their home during the entire New York visit. The following day, Saturday, was devoted to personal visits and a taping for use on a network radio program. Dr. and Mrs. Ramsey were guests of honor at a dinner given by Bishop Donegan Saturday night.

On Sunday the Archbishop visited historic St. Paul's Chapel of Trinity Parish. More than 1,200 worshippers crowded Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall Street, to see and hear him preach. He told the throng that the Church in England is working toward a plan where Methodists will accept the Episcopacy and will integrate with us, and yet maintain many of their own, particular customs. "We live, thank God, in an age when the dominant forces of Christendom are for unity . . . For unity we work, and for unity we pray," he declared. The entire service was telecast later that day in a special hour-long program.

'Scholar, Theologian' Describe Only One Side of the Archbishop

At 4 o'clock on Sunday more than 8,000 persons jammed the Cathedral of St. John the Divine as Bishop Donegan officially received the Archbishop at the great bronze doors. The long and impressive procession of clergy included the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Presiding Bishop, and many Bishops from the Second Province, of which Bishop Donegan is president.

"And they devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers," was his sermon text (Acts 2:42). "What can we do better for the renewal of our faith and witness than to ask that our hold may be made more sure upon these four great realities?" he inquired. "Let every parochial congregation see to it that it is truly a Christian family, bearing one another's burden so people will say, not in irony, but seriously: 'See how these Christians love one another . . .' "

He spoke eloquently of the heritage which Christians today share with the Church of the first century, but he issued a sober reminder that we, like the Church of the apostolic age, live in a world which does not know Christ.

On Monday, the Archbishop greeted 500 clergy at a "quiet day" held in Scholar, theologian. These two awesome words have often been applied to the 100th Archbishop of Canterbury, so often in fact, that one is hardly prepared for the delightful discovery that the "scholar, theologian" is also a truly warm human being.

The Most Rev. and Rt. Hon. Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England and Metropolitan, is as impressive as his titles. A huge man with a rim of white hair, eyes set deeply under tremendous eyebrows, he gives the impression of being even taller than his height of 6′ 1″. (One New York reporter described him as a "majestic figure standing six feet, five inches tall.")

Clad in the gaiters that he wears on the street, or in the cope and mitre that he wears for liturgical services, the Archbishop of Canterbury looks every inch the Archbishop of Canterbury.

But then there is the man Arthur Michael Ramsey. It was the man himself, even more than the high office he holds, that deeply impressed the people he met while in New York.

First to be impressed — by his composure under bedlam conditions and his direct and yet friendly manner — were the press and television people who interviewed him upon his arrival at Idlewild October 12. Be-

Mission Society Woman's Council Holds Third Anniversary Luncheon

The Woman's Council of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society held its third Anniversary Luncheon on October 22 at the Savoy Hilton Hotel with Bishop Donegan, President of the Society, as guest of honor. Nearly 250 of the Council's 400 members attended.

The main address was given by the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, newly appointed Director of the Society.

Taking her place at Bishop Donegan's left was the new Chairman of the Council, Mrs. Gurney Williams, of Westchester. Mrs. Williams, for six years President of the Episcopal Churchwomen, Diocese of New York, has succeeded Mrs. Thomas F. Vietor of Manhattan, founding chairman. Mrs. Vietor is now a vice president of the Society. Mrs. Williams recently was elected to the Society's Board of Managers.

At the Bishop's right was Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., new President of the Episcopal Churchwomen.

In another organizational change, Mrs. Donald K. Stevenson, Vice President of the diocesan ECW for three years, has become Chairman of the Council's Manhattan Committee. She succeeds Mrs. Thomas Clark Pollock. ■

Westchester Women To Attend Quiet Day

Women throughout Westchester are invited to a Quiet Day at Church of the Ascension, Mount Vernon, December 7. Conducting the meditations will be Miss Estelle Carver, who has a wide reputation as a devotional leader not only in the Episcopal Church but among other denominations. Miss Carver, a native of Jamaica, West Indies, is resource person on retreats, quiet days, and Bible study for the Diocese of Western Massachusetts. The Ascension Churchwomen are sponsoring her visit to Westchester. The day will begin with Holy Communion at 10 A.M. ■

Bishop Receives Interfaith Award

The 1962 Interfaith Award, for distinguished service in the field of human equality, fellowship and brotherhood, has been presented to Bishop Donegan.

The award was part of the annual Interfaith Day observance, celebrated nationally by resolution of the United States Senate, and sponsored by the Interfaith Movement, Inc. The organization was founded 25 years ago by State Supreme Court Justice William Harmon Black and is pledged to a nationwide effort to eliminate barriers among peoples. ■

St. Clement's Starts Project

Renovations expected to cost between $25,000 and $30,000 have been started at St. Clement's Church, Mount Vernon. It is the first project of this kind since the church was built in 1926.

The improvements will include painting both the inside and outside of the building, installing new electrical fixtures, vinyl and asbestos flooring; baseboard heating in the nave and chancel, modernizing the kitchen, repairing the roof, gutters and drains; installing more closet and storage facilities, installing some new windows and repairing others, constructing pews, installing new guard rails on the outside steps, and repairing the entrance doors. Other work will be done in the rectory and garage.

The project was a goal of the church's 50th anniversary fund-raising program in 1960. This year marks the 10th anniversary of the rector, the Rev. Dudley DeC. Cobham. He was named vicar of the church, then a mission, in 1952. Two years later, it became self-supporting. ■

the DIOCESE

And your parish...

How many times has someone in your church said, "Let's ask someone from the Diocese to help us!"? As the result of that call for help you might have gotten — New ideas for Sunday School or Released Time instruction.

— A speaker for an important meeting.
— Ideas for a stewardship campaign.
— Guidance in plotting your church's stand on an important social issue.

You know, of course, that calls like this are answered by the five Departments of the Council of the Diocese of New York (offices in the building called "Diocesan House," shown on our bird's-eye-view photo last month.) But what else do you know? Do you know how these departments function? Who their staff members are? What they are trying to accomplish — for you?

Read these next few pages for the answers.

THE DIOCESE OF NEW YORK . . . is one of the 75 dioceses and 12 domestic missionary districts of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America. It covers some 4,763 square miles, and includes Manhattan, Bronx, Richmond, Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess, Orange, Rockland, Sullivan and Ulster Counties. Within this territory are 206 parishes, aided parishes and missions, with over 90,000 communicants served by 444 clergy and 363 lay readers.

Each parish is an autonomous unit. Its rector is elected by a vestry with the approval of the Bishop. A mission church or aided parish functions with a clergyman appointed by the Bishop and responsible to him.

Drawing all of these separate parishes and missions together is a legislative body known as the Convention of the Diocese of New York. To its annual meeting, in May, the parishes and missions send both clergy and lay delegates to transact whatever business is necessary. Between these annual meetings, a body known as the Council of the Diocese of New York exercises all powers of the Convention.

THE COUNCIL OF THE DIOCESE . . .
was created in 1952. Before that time there had been several departments, such as Christian Education, Missions, and so forth, each going its separate way. As Bishop Donegan pointed out in his message to Convention in 1951, the Diocese had grown more or less without any particular plan since 1785. Each time Convention faced a new need, another organization was established to deal with it.

Many dioceses throughout the country had successfully adopted a diocesan organization consisting of an executive council with the Bishop at the head. This was the type New York decided to use.

The Council has 23 members. Five clergymen and five laymen are elected by Convention. Five other persons, both clergy and laity, are appointed by the Bishop, who is, by virtue of his position, Council president. Also members because of their positions, are Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore, Archdeacon Brätt, Archdeacon McEvoy, Theodor Oxholm, treasurer; the Rev. George W. Barrett, president of the Standing Committee; and Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, president of Episcopal Churchwomen. The Departments are: Missions, Christian Education, Christian Social Relations, Finance, and Promotion.

The Bishop is Chairman of the Department of Missions, and he appoints the chairmen of the other four departments from among Council members. All council members serve in one of the Departments. Membership also includes both clergymen and laymen who are not on the Council. Department members are not paid. They are selected for specialized knowledge which they may have in particular fields — such as psychology, teaching, publishing or building construction. Those who do get a salary are the staff members in each Department who work to carry out the program and aims of the Council — and therefore of Convention — in which the interests of every parish and mission are directly represented.

MISSIONS What it does . . .

Bishop Donegan

Brings the services and sacraments of the Church to people in all parts of the Diocese. It does this by

1. Establishing new congregations and building new churches.
2. Budgeting funds for existing city, suburban and rural churches which are not self-supporting.

The word "missions" as used in the title of the Department means "churches" which need financial aid, and it means the act of carrying the Gospel to people. The Department of Missions budget for 1962 is $419,066.

The Department was incorporated in 1912 under the name: Board of Managers of the Diocesan Missionary and Church Extension Society of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York. As a corporate entity, it holds, buys, sells, or otherwise manages both real and personal property in whatever manner best carries on the missionary work in the Diocese.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION What it does . . .

Promotes Christian education. It does this both through its own work in the Diocese and by cooperating with departments of the National Council and other Episcopal organizations. The Department is divided into six Divisions — Children's Work, Youth Work, College Work, Adult Work, Leadership Training, and Boarding and Day Schools. The Department

1. Provides guidance — upon the request of any congregation — in Church School administration and curriculum development.
2. Sponsors training sessions for Church School teachers and officers in area meetings.
3. Holds summer conferences for young people.
4. Promotes the work of the Church among students and teachers in colleges and universities.
5. Sponsors mission study, Vacation Church Schools, released time classes, and maintains a growing film strip library.

The budget for 1962 is $54,763.

Department has three main functions: public relations, stewardship, and publication of THE BULLETIN. PR and BULLETIN under Director of Promotion; Stewardship under Director of Stewardship.

PUBLIC RELATIONS: Internal program includes parish counseling, information center, speakers' bureau, booklet publication. External includes publicity and other PR work for Church and Diocese, placements of people on radio and TV, answering questions from publications, authors, script writers.

Rev. John Harper

STEWARDSHIP: Program is designed to assist in bringing about a better understanding of the responsibilities and privileges inherent in church membership. While some literature is used, the primary effort is through seminars, consultations and stewardship missions. BULLETIN: Diocesan magazine, free to all families who are reported as contributors to a church in Diocese of New York. Circulation, 43,000. In 1962, named best diocesan magazine in the nation. ## FINANCE What it does . . .

Studies and evaluates the budgetary needs of the Departments, and makes recommendations for the apportionment of income. The Convention, which meets once a year, approves a Council Budget for diocesan work. The task of drawing up this budget is the Finance Department's responsibility. Funds are included to operate the five departments, plus appropriations to affiliated agencies such as the Episcopal City Mission Society and Seamen's Church Institute. The Department also recommends personnel policy for all five departments, establishes salary scales for all except executives, and standardizes record procedures. In carrying out its financial responsibilities the Department of Finance coordinates its work with that of the treasurer of the Convention.

Who does it . . .

Boudinot P. Atterbury, Department Chairman, and eight other members of the Department. They function without a paid staff, but the Department budget helps to pay for diocesan accounting services. This year that budget is $3,000. Mr. Atterbury is vice president, secretary and counsel of James Talcott, Inc. He was formerly a federal prosecutor for the New York Office of the United States Attorney. He is a trustee of the McAuley Water Street Mission and Flower-Fifth Avenue Hospital. The other members of the Department of Finance are H. Rogers Benjamin Jr., Charles F. Bound, Harry M. Brookfield Jr., William M. Evarts Jr., John F. Geer, Marc Haas, William Howard Miller and Edmund W. Pugh Jr. These members, all laymen from the business and professional world, meet as often as necessary to perform the duties assigned to the Department.

B. P. Atterbury

MISSIONS —

Archdeacon Brätt

Is responsible for mission work in the suburban and rural areas. Rector of St. Paul's, Ossining, 1934-48. Dean of the Westchester Convocation for six years. Appointed Archdeacon in 1948, in charge of both urban and rural areas. Responsibility divided in 1959 between him and

Archdeacon McEvoy

For 15 years Rector of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan. Previously chaplain to Episcopal students, State University of Iowa. Member, Department of Church Planning, Protestant Council of the City of New York. Articles by him have appeared in well known church publications.

Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Convention

Is also Treasurer of the Department of Missions. After a successfull career as business administrator, Dr. Oxholm was appointed assistant treasurer by Bishop Manning in 1941. Elected treasurer at the 1953 Convention, his responsibilities far exceed the original concept of the work. He was responsible, in large measure, for the formation of the Department of Church Planning and Research, Protestant Council of the City of New York. The 175th Anniversary Fund was a direct result of studies made by Dr. Oxholm and the Protestant Council. He is assisted by

David George Adams, Asst. Treas.

Frederick I. Emery, Asst. to Treas.

Mr. Adams has served as assistant treasurer since 1954. Previously senior accountant and general assistant in the office of the Treasurer. Associated for 20 years with St. Thomas Parish, Manhattan, as general secretary. He kept the accounts, had charge of the maintenance of the buildings and acted as business manager and director of St. Thomas Camp, Lake Kanawauke.

Mr. Emery, a staff member since 1959, is in charge of building construction and maintenance. Acting as "owner's agent," he obtains bids and follows closely the performance of all major improvement contracts. He is architectural liaison for new work sponsored by the Department of Missions.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION —

Miss Irene Henderson, Associate Director

Since October, 1961. Graduate of Biblical Seminary. Fifteen years of experience in the field of Christian Education. Director of Christian Education, Federation of Churches of Rochester and Vicinity, 1954-1961.

PROMOTION —

Mr. Martin's background includes Public Relations, Nitrogen Division, Allied Chemical, 1952 - 59. Served consecutively as employee newspaper editor, supervisor plant-community relations, manager of public relations. Other diversified experience in public relations, editing. With Diocese since 1959.

Eric E. Ley, Director of Stewardship.

Named executive director, 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign in 1958, he subsequently became Director of Stewardship, a field in which he has had 20 years of experience. Before joining the Diocese, financial advisor and consultant to churches in all major denominations. His efforts to inject personal stewardship into budget raising led him eventually to give up a successful management engineering practice to devote full time to stewardship teaching.

Ruth Weber, Managing Editor, THE BULLETIN

Newspaper reporter and editor 15 years, specializing in religion and education. For 10 years with Macy Westchester Newspapers, a chain of dailies, as reporter, feature writer, and religion editor. Former assistant women's page editor, The Binghamton Press. Joined diocesan staff April, 1961.

Here's Something for the Girls to Do!

Right after Confirmation this year a group of girls at the Post Chapel, West Point, began to learn how to arrange the altar for the mid-week Communion service. Mrs. G. D. Heisser and Missy Johnson are shown arranging the chalice veil. Carolyn Perkins, Heather McNeil and Betsy Spragins watch from the left. Another member, Nancy Ann Snow, was not present for the picture.

A boy can be an acolyte after Confirmation, but what can a girl do? In searching for an answer to that question, Chaplain Gordon Hutchins of the Post Chapel at West Point may have started something.

Part of his instruction for the girls in his 1962 Confirmation class was a brief survey of what an Altar Guild does. What he hoped would happen did! Soon after Confirmation was over, several girls asked to learn more about preparing the altar for services. Under the direction of Mrs. G. D. Heisser, chairman of the Chapel Altar Guild, they began regular lessons after school.

Scouting, ballet lessons, swimming classes, and finally summer vacation did not diminish their enthusiasm. One girl who later became a member joined because of a friend's enthusiasm. Two mothers joined the Altar Guild so they could work along with their daughters. ■

Francis French Was Just One Man . . . But —

People at St. Mary's-in-Tuxedo will never again say, "But I'm just one person — what can I do?" They will think of Francis Ormond French. In fact, in future years, his story might even be told as a drama in three acts, like this:

First act, scene one: Interior of St. Mary's, at the youth service, June 3, 1956. The Rev. Fenimore E. Cooper is preaching. He describes the "desperate need for an educational building to relieve our jammed-up confusion each Sunday when we try to hold eight classes in buildings never designed for them." Population in the community is booming, he adds. "We need a nursery badly."

Scenes two and three: Same place, same plea at youth services in 1957 and 1958.

Second act, scene one: Close-up of Francis French in his pew at youth service, 1959. For years Mr. French hadn't gone to church much. But recently he's come back Sunday after Sunday. Today his attention never wavers either from the liturgy or the sermon, which is about "The Power of Prayer." He gets out his pocket note pad and jots down something.

Scene two: Mr. French and the rector in the study at Mr. French's home, two years later. During these two years, Mr. French has written literally hundreds of letters, all in longhand. He's actually conducting a one-man campaign to get funds for the educational building St. Mary's needs so badly. Each letter is carefully composed. It's an honest, personally directed letter. Often his follow-up is a phone call. "The money is coming in, Frank," the rector is saying. "The building will be up before you know it." The cost will be $60,000.

Francis O. French

St. Mary's new educational building, French House, cost $60,000, and the project took six years from the idea stage to reality. But it was completely debt free on Trinity Sunday, 1962, when it was dedicated. This achievement was largely the result of one man's perseverance.

Scene three: A hospital room, later the same year. It is snowing outside. Mr. French is in bed. He knows he is seriously ill. But he is still working on his letters and phone calls. Now he is receiving a visitor, the rector. Sometimes Mr. Cooper has come just to chat, but today he has news. "I can hardly believe it, Frank," he says. "We're only $1,000 away from getting that building completely paid for by the time it's opened." He pauses, "It's everything you've dreamed about — stone and mahogany — shingle exterior with a slate roof, three spacious classrooms, pleasantly painted; adjustable tables so that youngsters as well as older people can use the place . . . We're setting the dedication for June."

Third act, scene one: The interior of St. Mary's, Trinity Sunday (June 17), 1962. Archdeacon George F. Brätt, representing the Bishop, is walking in procession with the clergy, acolytes and choir. The atmosphere is festive, as the ceremony of candle lighting and blessing progresses. At its close, as the congregation fades offstage, two vestrymen remain.

"Too bad Frank couldn't be here."

"Sure is. You know he died this morning. You heard?"

"Yes, I heard. Funny that he should die this morning."

"Symbolic, in a way. I guess his work was done. I was over there when the rector told him that the last $1,000 had come in. You should have seen his face. I never saw a sick man so happy."

"This building meant a lot to him. All those letters he wrote. He was just one man, but look what he did. French House. This is a real memorial, you know?" ■

THE CHRISTMAS CRÈCHE

Who hasn't at one time or another stopped to admire a créche? Perhaps it was a reproduction of the stable at Bethlehem in minature, with figures of the Holy Child, the Virgin Mary, Joseph, and the animals made of delicate Meissen porcelain. Perhaps it was a large, outdoor créche, with live animals, as at St. George's Church, Manhattan.

But whatever its figures look like, the créche is one of the most popular ways of giving tangible form to the Christmas story. And it is probably one of the oldest ways.

Americans borrowed the name créche from France (it rhymes with "mesh" and literally means "crib" or "manger." But the créche really comes from Italy, and in Italian it is called presepio.

St. Francis of Assisi is often given credit for originating the presepio, but actually the idea goes as far back as the festival of Christmas itself — which, incidentally, began to be celebrated not in the days of the Apostles, but about the middle of the fourth century.

Pope Liberius, sometime between 358 and 366, founded a church — Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome — and this church was intended as a special home for the new festival of Christmas.

An important part of the early Christmas ritual there was the celebration of Mass over a "manger" in which the Eucharistic loaf was laid — just as the body of the Christ Child had been laid in the crib at Bethlehem.

In the eleventh century, another rudimentary form of the crib turns up in a liturgical drama where a manger (they called it praesepe) was placed behind the altar as the center of action.

St. Francis of Assisi introduced live animals. In 1224, he celebrated Christmas at Greccio; and he asked a friend — a nobleman — to create a Bethlehem scene which included a live ox and ass. A medieval writer describes it this way:

"Thus Simplicity was honored, Poverty exalted, Humility commended and of Greccio there was made as it were a new Bethlehem. The night was lit up as day, and was delightsome to men and beasts . . . The woodland rang with voices, the rocks made answer to the jubilant throng."

By the fourteenth century, the manger scenes in Milan, Parma and Modena, Italy, apparently looked much like the groups of figures we have today. A presepio carved in 1478 is still in existence. But, of course, most of the figures in museums and private collections are of a later date.

Some of these do not even attempt an authentic portrayal of the Christmas story. One créche, from Munich, shows the adoration of the shepherds in a sort of ruined castle. Another, from Naples, places the Holy Family among the remains of a classical temple.

Some time during the eighteenth century, the Ursuline nuns of Innsbruck made a set of figures dressed in contemporary costume. Imagine the angel wearing a wasp-waisted red velvet dress with heavy gold embroidery, a powdered wig, and a hat trimmed with big feathers!

But in twentieth century New York, it was St. Francis' idea which caught the imagination of its sophisticated citizens.

St. George's Church, on East Sixteenth Street and Stuyvesant Square, has become famous for its life-sized manger scene with live sheep.

In 1948, through a special gift, St. George's purchased a set of life-sized cast iron manger figures. They were found in the attic of a Greenwich Village artist who had bought them from a Lutheran church in Germany many years before. The New York Zoological Society's Farm-in-the-Zoo lent four or five Dorset sheep, and the unique outdoor display was set up on the lawn of Pierce House, which is between the parish house and the church.

That year and every year since, the manger has attracted a "jubilant throng" far outnumbering anything St. Francis ever dreamed of. An authentic shepherd watches these sheep. Almost every year there's a black sheep in the lot!

Churches in many other cities have copied the manger at St. George's, which was one of the first on the Eastern Seaboard.

In most churches, of course, the service at the manger has become part of the regular Christmas festival, and many mangers are bought for use at home.

cause Dr. Ramsey's plane was late, the television newsmen were in a dither over making their schedules. So Dr. Ramsey submitted to four separate interviews — NBC, CBS, ABC and BBC — in a total of 13 minutes. Then he was interviewed by reporters from the wire services and from ten newspapers and magazines.

Wherever Dr. Ramsey went on his three-week visit in this country, he sent notes of appreciation not only to his hosts but also to the staff members of each household.

Another indication of this side of the man was his reaction to an incident — or rather an accident.

Mrs. Charles Powney, a native of Bristol, England, was hurrying to see the Archbishop pass by the Cathedral Exhibit Hall, where she works. In her haste, she fell and broke two ribs. Dr. Ramsey heard of the accident and sent her an autographed copy of the new biography "The 100th Archbishop of Canterbury." Mrs. Ramsey sent a nosegay of flowers.

In speaking to priests and seminarians — his favorite audiences — Dr. Ramsey stressed the need for contemplation, for "slowing down."

"The priest who never pauses is a peril to himself and to his people," he cautioned.

Heeding this maxim himself, he zealously guards the few moments of his daily schedule set aside for solitude, for uninterrupted thought. Seminaries are of special interest to Dr. Ramsey. He visited three: General, Virginia and Seabury-Western. Realizing that faculty members and students don't always look at things in the same way, he met with them separately.

When he met with the students— for an hour and a half— he asked that someone be posted at the door to make sure only students entered. He didn't give a speech, only answered questions and encouraged the students to state their own views.

We talked to a group of students at General after Dr. Ramsey had met them. They literally could not find words to describe the experience.

The Archbishop is skillful with quips. One of them was published in newspapers all over the United States. In accepting a degree from Columbia, he noted that the university's predecessor, King's College, was chartered in 1754 by King George II. Then came the quip:

"Were I to stand on legal technicalities, I might claim some jurisdiction here."

Naturally, there were many pictures taken of Dr. Ramsey during his three-week visit. A large percentage of those published are extreme closeups of his face. One portrait will reveal a church dignitary with a serious, thoughtful expression. Another will reveal a warm human being, his head thrown back in hearty laughter. Both are the 100th Archbishop of Canterbury. Both are Arthur Michael Ramsey. — J.B.M. ■ the Cathedral. Addressing them as "my brothers," he said, "We are busy, busy serving God, in the organizing of public worship, in a ceaseless stream of activity. We need to pause, to go into retreat, to cease serving God in order to let God serve us."

That afternoon Dr. Ramsey received an honorary Doctor of Sacred Theology degree at General Theological Seminary.

Columbia University conferred an honorary Doctor of Sacred Theology degree on Tuesday. Then the Ramseys left for Princeton, N. J., first stop in an itinerary which included the Midwest, California, and Columbia, S. C., where the Archbishop addressed the House of Bishops. They returned to England on November 2. ■

Bishop Asks Blessing On Courts of Justice

Trinity Church, nestled in the canyons of New York's skyscrapers, was the scene of an impressive service on October 10, to invoke God's blessings on the Courts of Justice in the coming year. In what has become an annual observance sponsored by the Protestant Council of the City of New York, robed judges, lawyers and laymen gathered for the service. Bishop Donegan presided. ■

BULLETIN Wins Nationwide Award As Best Magazine

The BULLETIN of the Diocese of New York has been judged the best Episcopal diocesan magazine in the nation.

The award was the result of a competition open to all diocesan magazines and newspapers of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. There were four prizes—for the best magazine, best newspaper, and the magazine and newspaper which showed the most improvement. The contest was sponsored by THE EPISCOPALIAN, the Church's national monthly magazine.

The award, a plaque bearing the Church shield and a citation, was conferred by the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, at the annual meeting of the House of Bishops in Columbia, S. C., on October 31.

It was received by Bishop Donegan on behalf of the BULLETIN staff: Joseph Martin, Diocesan Director of Promotion and Editor; and Ruth Weber, Managing Editor.

The publications which entered the contest were judged on the basis of technical and editorial excellence, layout, illustrations, writing, originality, and extent of service.

A board of five judges was headed by Hugh Curtis, Dean of the School of Journalism, Drake University. The OLYMPIA CHURCHMAN, published by the Diocese of Olympia, Wash., received the award for best newspaper. THE SHEAF, District of North Dakota, won the award for most improvement among magazines, and THE IOWA CHURCHMAN, Diocese of Iowa, most improvement among newspapers. ■

Five-year Study On Confirmation Out in Book Form

The report of the Commission on Preparation for Confirmation, presented at Convention last May, is now available in book form. It is entitled READY AND DESIROUS and may be obtained at the Cathedral Exhibit Hall or from the publisher, Morehouse-Barlow Co. The price is $2.50.

A general description of the report was presented in the June, 1962, issue of this magazine. READY AND DESIROUS is the result of five years of study, research and analysis by the Commission and is the first report on Confirmation ever to be prepared by an official commission in this Diocese. It may be the first of its kind in the Church. ■

■ CHURCH PEOPLE concerned with helping the alcoholic must change their "pious" attitudes toward sin and sickness before they can hope to succeed. They must not feel "holier than thou." This was the advice given by Dr. Howard J. Clinebell, professor of pastoral theology at Southern California School of Theology, at a national seminar on alcoholism recently.

The seminar, first of its kind to be called by the National Council of Churches of Christ, was attended by clergymen, educators, social workers and doctors of medicine. Dr. Clinebell warned that alcoholics are extremely sensitive to "unvoiced criticism," and pointed out: "Their only remaining refuge from rejection is another drink."

■ FOR CHRISTMAS greetings that would be especially meaningful and in the true spirit of the season, the American Bible Society is suggesting a small enclosure in every Christmas card envelope. It's a reprint, in large, clear type, of the Christmas message from the Gospel of St. Luke. Entitled "Unto You . . . A Saviour," the booklet is about 3 by 4½ inches, and weighs only half an ounce—so no additional postage is needed.

The price is 3 cents each, in any quantity. The booklet is available in either King James or Revised Standard Version. The Society offers to send a sample copy of the booklet to anyone on request. Address the American Bible Society, 450 Park Avenue, N.Y., 22.

■ AN AUDIENCE of 1,800 attending the Orchestral Society of Westchester concert at County Center on October 24 heard an old friend in a new role. The Rev. George French Kempsell, Jr., Rector of St. James the Less, Scarsdale, was the narrator for "A Lincoln Portrait," a powerful musical tribute to freedom by the contemporary composer Aaron Copeland.

The applause Father Kempsell received testified to his success as narrator. The performance added another item to an already long list of extra-clerical activities. The rector is known as a water skier, Bach enthusiast, jazz pianist and tennis player — as well as a persuasive preacher who has a wide interest in community affairs. As chairman of the Orchestral Society's board of directors, he has guided the organization through a period of amazing growth.

■ ANOTHER church vestry has voted to abolish pew rents. At St. Philip's, Garrison, the old custom of pew rental will end on December 31. The Rev. William S. Reisman is rector of this historic church in the Hudson highlands. It was founded in 1772. Other churches which have discontinued pew rents during the past year or so include St. Thomas, Manhattan; Christ Church, S. I.; and Transfiguration, Manhattan. ■

Churchwomen Hold Province Meeting

Barred by the Cuban situation from holding their 45th Provincial meeting in Haiti, Episcopal Churchwomen of the Second Province voted that, if they could not visit Haiti as planned, they would at least send their money.

The meeting was held at Hotel Thayer, West Point, simultaneously with the 37th annual Synod.

Delegates from the eight Diocesan boards agreed to underwrite a special gift of $100 each, subject to the approval of their boards at home. The $800 will go to the Sisters of St. Margaret who work in four Haitian institutions.

ECW members joined Synod delegates for a joint session, for Evensong, a reception and dinner, and a celebration of Holy Communion. The women held two separate sessions conducted by Mrs. Cyrus M. Higley of Norwich, Provincial President.

In a report at the joint session Mrs. Higley reviewed the Provincial projects made possible by funds from each diocese. These include a contribution to Seabury House Guild and to the Rev. Eugene A. Monick, Jr., Executive Secretary of College Work, to provide scholarships; scholarships for Canterbury Conferences, and $1,000 voted each year for an area of special concern. The Province also sponsors schools of worship, prayer conferences, retreats and activities dealing with ecumenical relations. Delegates also approved a 1963 budget. It provides $1,500 for provincial projects and $660 for administration.

Attending the meeting from the Diocese of New York were Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., of Manhattan, President; the two vice presidents, Mrs. Howard C. Weale of Middletown and Mrs. Ralph F. Stott of Poughkeepsie; Mrs. K. George Falk of Manhattan, Supply Chairman; and Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd of Chappaqua, UTO treasurer. ■

Segregation Is City's 'Achilles Heel' Declares Judge Thurgood Marshall

The Hon. Thurgood Marshall has called upon the Church to help rid the cities of ghettos.

Speaking at the 37th Synod of the Second Province, which met at Hotel Thayer, West Point, on Thursday and Friday, November 15 and 16, he declared that, "Racial segregation is indeed the Achilles heel of our larger cities."

Judge Marshall, a deputy to the Synod, gave the main address at the banquet on Thursday night. He is a judge of the U. S. Court of Appeals and a vestryman of St. Philip's Church, Manhattan.

He urged the Church to reassert its leadership in the cities, to "save them from becoming the graveyards of the future."

He decried "the view in the United States that all bad things are in the cities and that all the good things are in the small towns."

"The reasoning then goes," Judge Marshall asserted, "that since the city is evil, and since most of the minority groups live in the city, then the minority groups must be evil."

He urged laymen to help dispel this misconception and to show leadership in ending segregation in housing, education and employment.

The Synod meeting originally had been set for Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Because of the Cuban crisis it was held on the mainland at the request of State Department officials.

The collection from both church services held during the Synod was sent to the Rt. Rev. C. Alfred Voegli, Bishop of Haiti.

Episcopal Churchwomen of the Second Province also met at the Hotel Thayer on the same dates.

Bishop Donegan, who is President of the Second Province, preached at Evensong in the Cadet Chapel on Thursday. Deputies attending from this Diocese were the Rev. William J. Chase, the Rev. James A. Gusweller, the Rev. David B. Weden, the Rev. Osborne Budd, the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, the Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, Alexander Saunders, Arthur A. Atha, Dr. Norman H. Pritchard, and Judge Marshall. Clement E. Horton attended as a Provisional Deputy.

The Synod meeting and the ECW meeting were originally scheduled for Haiti so that those attending could observe the Church's work there at first hand. Because of the change of location for this year's meeting, present plans call for the 1963 meeting to be held in Haiti. ■

The Bishop's Message

The mails at Christmastide brought many greetings to The Bishop's House. I wish that all the cards could be acknowledged with a personal message. I cannot manage that, but I want you to know of my deep appreciation of each and every Christmas remembrance.

At the beginning of the secular New Year we hope and pray that this year will be one of peace. It is well to remember that there are two kinds of peace: the world's peace, and God's peace.

The world's peace means the human desire to be let alone, to live without any external interference with the established and satisfactory patterns of our lives. If one considers peace as the desire to have what one wishes without let or hindrance, then every nation on earth is a peace-loving nation. Any nation would be quite content to achieve all it wishes without having to resort to war (hot or cold) to obtain it.

The trouble, however, with peace as the world defines it, is that nations, in common with human beings, too often want something at somebody else's expense. The old-fashioned word for this was covetousness. To want something that somebody else has, and, in addition, to want that other person not to have it is a fundamental violation of God's laws.

God's peace is different. His peace is not simply the absence of war, strife and contention. It is the quiet mind, whatever besets us, the inner calm which comes of union with him. It is not a right humanity can claim. God's peace is something one has to struggle for spiritually, morally, mentally. It cannot be won without unselfishness, humility, discipline and sacrifice. God's peace is ours only as we make full commitment of ourselves to him, surrendering to him the control and direction of our lives, bringing all our desires and ambitions into conformity with his will—and this in the conviction that in his will is our peace, in his service is our true happiness, in his keeping all that we care for is forever secure.

"Peace does not mean the end of all our striving
Joy does not mean the drying of our tears;
Peace is the power that comes to souls arriving
Up to the light where God Himself appears."

The peace of God be with you! What more embracing prayer or wish could there be? For if we have God's peace we shall have new strength, new hope, new humility, and adequacy for all things.

Let us pray for God's peace in our hearts, and in our world, and let us live throughout this New Year with a renewed devotion to Him who is the only Prince of Peace—our Lord Jesus Christ.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

THE CHALLENGE

TEN YEARS AGO it would have been impossible to write this story, because it deals with the swift, drastic, incredible change that has completely altered the character of New York City.

Some of this change is well known. It has been dramatized by newspapers, books, movies and even a Broadway play. It involves the emergence of juvenile gangs, drug addiction, racial conflict and teenage murders.

But the face of New York has changed in other ways. All over the city, as the dust settled upon demolished slums, new, high-rise apartments took form. Thousands of people moved in, people for whom the Episcopal Church would be a new experience. No frontier of the past, either in a jungle like New Guinea or a wilderness like the "Wild West," posed bigger problems and more formidable challenges for the Church.

Establishing missions in the city is, of course, nothing new. Historic Trinity Parish was the first "mother" of missions which dotted Manhattan Island in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. But the city in those days was like today's suburbs. Areas were settled, a church was started, and when the area became more heavily populated, the church grew and in turn became a parish and a "mother" of missions. For example, St. Mark's, Grace, Christ Church and St. George's were once missions of Trinity.

In fact, Trinity Church remained in the mission business. Its ministry in "problem neighborhoods" is well documented. St. Augustine's Chapel, the setting for the Rev. Kilmer Myers' now famous book, LIGHT THE DARK STREETS, is a mission of Trinity. So are St. Luke's Chapel, St. Christopher's, St. Cornelius, Intercession, and historic St. Paul's, all of which serve their areas in different ways. Other city parishes—St. Martin's, St. Thomas, and the Church of the Incarnation—also give subsidies to their respective chapels in Manhattan. A "mission" is a church which needs aid to minister effectively — whether it is in the Bronx or in Africa.

As far as the Diocese of New York is concerned, the churches it formerly subsidized in the city were new congregations which expected to grow and become self-supporting parishes. Today they are more likely to be once fine, influential parishes now struggling in a "changed" neighborhood.

The days of really violent transition came with the Depression and World War II. The Ven. Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy, who is in charge of urban missions, pictures the situation accurately in something he calls "Requiem for a Parish." See if the events sound familiar!

It is about St. Thaddeus, an Episcopal church situated in what was once "a quiet, brownstone-front neighborhood . . . its people predominantly white, Protestant, German or Anglo-Saxon, old-line Americans." The rector was elderly and unimaginative, but the people were used to him. The church "as usual, was large and drafty; the parish hall, a rabbit warren of little rooms not of much value . . . "

By the end of World War II, the church properties had deteriorated, and so had the neighborhood, "so that, as families moved away or landlords were held down by rent controls, little was done in the way of improvement . . . Many landlords broke up the old, more or less comfortable apartments into smaller units, or accepted as tenants those caught in the squeeze. Often these were not white, Anglo-Saxon or Protestant. They were the newcomers . . .

At St. Thaddeus, attendance dwindled. "The women said the neighborhood wasn't safe at night any more . . . the youth groups disbanded." The rector never seemed to have the knack for young people's activities anyway. Finally, the neighborhood, including St. Thaddeus, was earmarked for a new city housing project. The parish died.

In his report to the Council of the Diocese last fall, Archdeacon McEvoy admits: "It is always the easiest course to sell out in a neighborhood, but seldom is it wise to do so." Usually, he adds, it has been clear "that the Church should have remained in some kind of terms." To determine where to remain, under what terms, and at how great a cost has been the work of the Department of Missions during the past decade.

Today, there are 11 churches in Manhattan, the Bronx and Staten Island that are subsidized by the Diocese. Nine of these testify to the Diocese's decision that they should remain in a neighborhood that has "changed" in one way or another. They are St. Edward the Martyr, St. Clement's, St. Peter's, Chelsea; St. Mary's, Manhattanville*, all in Manhattan; and St. Margaret's, St. Paul's, St. Andrew's, St. David's, and St. Ann's*, all in the Bronx.

The other subsidized churches are All Saints, Staten Island, whose edifice burned down and will soon be relocated in a new area of considerable potential; and St. Ann's for the Deaf, the oldest church for the deaf in the United States. It is not an urban mission as such, but comes under Archdeacon McEvoy's supervision because it holds mission status. Services are held at St. Michael's, Manhattan, and Good Shepherd, Bronx.

It is significant that most of the

*These are Aided Parishes. Two kinds of churches are subsidized by the Diocese —Missions and Aided Parishes. Both have the same status, except in these respects: (1) An Aided Parish is incorporated and may own its real property; (2) An Aided Parish has a priest-in-charge and a vestry, while a Mission has a vicar and an advisory board. Priests-in-charge, like vicars of Missions, are appointed by the bishop and have the same relationship to the archdeacons.

OF THE URBAN FRONTIER

nine churches in "changed" neighborhoods have become urban missions since 1950. It was only in 1950 that the real crisis in the city became apparent to all of the denominations. The Episcopal Diocese of New York was one of the first to get moving on the problem.

The first step was a two-year survey undertaken by the Rev. Joseph Moore under the direction of the Bishop and the Department of Missions. In 1952, the Rev. Benson Fisher was placed in charge of diocesan church planning and research. Simultaneously, men like Dr. Theodor Oxholm and Dr. David Barry, Executive Director, New York City Mission Society, were working with the Protestant Council of the City of New York. They were instrumental in the founding, direction and support of the Council's Department of Church Planning and Research. This Department gathered many of the facts which later prompted the Diocese to devote so much money and manpower to urban missions.

So the early fifties was a time of research, planning and the development of strategy. This planning and research continues to be "as inescapable for the Christian Church as it is for Con Edison," Archdeacon McEvoy declares. By 1955 the Diocese began in earnest to fortify churches in downgraded neighborhoods. Then, in 1957, the Diocesan Convention announced plans for the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign.

These funds were designed, of course, to provide money for missionary work all over the Diocese, but a major portion was designated for the city. The following projects have been accomplished to date:

A new church house and clergy apartments at St. Paul's, Bronx, $103,129. A new parish house at St. Margaret's, Bronx, $205,330. Extensive renovations at St. Mary's, Manhattanville, $24,667. A new parish house, now under construction, at St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, $336,808. A brand new church plant at St. Andrew's, Bronx, a project that is a story all by itself, $541,750.

All of this construction, a total of $1,211,685, has been done since 1958. Other projects, such as the new church for All Saints, Staten Island, are on the drafting board. But this list represents only funds spent for capital improvements. During 1962 alone, the Department of Missions spent $199,514 in subsidies for operating expenses, personnel and program. Truly, urban missions are costly.

Why is the Church doing all this?

It might help to look at some of these urban missions and see what they are doing.

St. Mary's, Manhattanville — This was a church where between 1935 and 1950 there were great ethnic changes similar to those described at Archdeacon McEvoy's mythical St. Thaddeus. St. Mary's might have died. But when the Diocese learned of plans for the drastic rebuilding of Manhattanville — the area north of 125th Street from, roughly St. Nicholas Park to the Hudson River — St. Mary's became an "aided parish." From a rock-bottom membership of 135 communicants in 1958 it grew to 245 in 1961. The Church School increased from 24 to 200.

Furthermore, St. Mary's is widely known as one of the best integrated parishes in the city, and "integrated" is used in its most accurate sense. On any Sunday morning the Rev. Richard E. Gary, the Priest-in-Charge, sees all kinds of people mingle: Oriental, White, Negro, Puerto Rican, West Indian, as well as rich, poor, middle-class, college professors and mechanics.

St. Edward the Martyr — just east of Fifth Avenue on 109th Street, in the area known as East Harlem. It is inhabited by the greatest concentration of Puerto Rican families in New York. Like St. Augustine's, the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Church, St. Edward's has been working with the street gangs, the derelicts, the lonely and the rejected. Visiting young parishioners in jail is no novelty for the Rev. John H. Gill, St. Edward's Vicar. Heading off a "rumble" between two warring gangs is no novelty either, although certainly felony and assault are not the most time-consuming activities. The program at St. Edward's literally goes around the clock.

There are, as in every urban mission, the usual weekday recreation programs for young people of all ages. When one group comes out of the parish house, another goes in. But in addition, St. Edward's offers a ballet class for girls in the neighborhood and painting instruction for any youngster with the creative urge. The church also is the headquarters for a reading center where some 30 volunteers are trained to teach remedial reading. These teachers, who include Archdeacon McEvoy's wife, fan out from the church to work with groups of one or two children each. Mrs. McEvoy herself has watched youngsters' reading ability jump from second-grade to upper fourth-grade level after a relatively brief learning period — with a new interest in life being awakened in the child.

Strike coming up! Bowling is just one of the many activities at St. Edward the Martyr. Remedial reading is another of the services offered.

And that is not all. St. Edward's also provides office facilities for the Association for Psychiatric Treatment of Offenders, known informally as APTO. Its therapists, who have offices at the church, deal with offenders, both boys and men, who are referred to them by courts all over the city. St. Edward's is doubtless a fairly convenient location for many of the offenders.

But even as we say this, the neighborhood around St. Edward's is changing once more. In recent years, 13 large housing projects have risen over the rubble of old-law tenements. Within them are 14,500 units for approximately 70,000 persons. Within this year or next, some 4,500 new apartments will go up. At the same time, middle-income cooperatives and new housing along Fifth Avenue are raising the economic level of the neighborhood in general. The result, according to Fr. Gill, is that "integration," as it exists at St. Mary's, Manhattanville, is becoming a real part of the life of St. Edward's.

St. Ann's, the Bronx — is situated in one of the most densely populated and needy neighborhoods of the Bronx. Under the leadership of the Rev. David Kern, Priest-in-Charge, and the Rev. John Kelly, his assistant, it has made, in Archdeacon McEvoy's word's, "a radically remarkable adaption to a ethnically changing neighborhood." As the clergy at St. Ann's see it, this adaption is remarkable because the church is not attended by a majority of one racial group. Instead, there are four: Anglo-Saxon, West Indian, American Negro and Puerto Rican — with none in any kind of majority, or even a large minority.

St. Ann's is also a good example of efforts to bridge the gap in dealing with gangs of boys, between a completely "open" situation — allowing kids to come in at any time and use the facilities — and a "closed" or "structured" situation: "You can come in, but only on our terms."

St. Ann's is both. Father Kern tells the story of the Road Devils, a gang who used to come in and hang around. Gradually they got the idea that the church was their "turf."

"But it isn't, fellows," Fr. Kern told them. "It's God's 'turf'."

As time went on, many of these boys were confirmed. Others kept hanging around, and newcomers appeared, but they were outside of the church. So youth activities began to develop on two levels — "closed gym nights" for the Church's boys and "open gym nights" for the others.

In the neighborhood of St. Ann's, "certainly the major initial impression is the overt and even glaring manifestations of human sin," Fr. Kelly has written. "A neighborhood such as this, with the highest crime, delinquency, vice, and welfare payments in New York City, is afflicted with what we call 'The Ten Commandment Sins,'" the open, direct, concrete, physical sort of sins the Decalogue deals with . . .

"While at first this may seem to be shocking or even depressing and discouraging, nevertheless, there is one distinct advantage in our eyes — as the sin is open or manifest, so, too, is the Church's ministry able to be open, direct, and equally manifest . . . We have seen that sometimes we of the clergy should be placed in a 'depressed and crime ridden area' to see what the Church was intended by its Lord to be."

And then there is St. Andrew's, the Bronx. "Twentieth Century Opportunity," a study published in December, 1956, by the Department of Church Planning and Research of the Protestant Council of the City of New York, disclosed the fact that there were 10 most critical areas where the mission of the non-Roman churches was significant for the immediate future. One of these was Clason Point in the Bronx.

For years Clason Point had been a sparsely settled area, but new giant housing projects were planned. There was an Episcopal church in nearby Castle Hill — a frame structure, built originally by people of Scottish origin. It had started as a mission 34 years ago, and was still a mission.

As part of the Protestant Council's effort to church this area adequately, the Episcopal Diocese agreed to seek a more strategic location for St. Andrew's. It should be on a main street, more centrally accessible to the new high-rise apartments and other residential building which was forecast.

The new St. Andrew's cost $541,750 to build, but the expenditure was immediately justified by the rapid growth of the congregation. A year before it was finished, a vicar, the Rev. Wray E. MacKay, and an assistant, the Rev. James H. Horner, were appointed by the Bishop. Under the direction of Eric E. Ley, Director of Stewardship, parishioners were trained to do parish visitation and to redefine the meaning of "work, worship and giving." Because of the rapid influx of new families, the Diocese provided a "crash program" of calling, done by 18 seminary students. Some 5,000 calls were made, and there were encouraging pointers to potential growth. The vicar and a group of laymen did follow-up calling.

The church opened in the Spring of 1961. That Fall, when announcements went out for services and activities, the response was astonishing. Attendance taxed the capacity of the new building. In September, congregations mushroomed from 175 to 225 to 320, including children.

During 1962, St. Andrew's operated on a budget of nearly $38,000. Almost $25,000 was a Diocesan subsidy, from funds allocated in the 175th Anniversary Fund, and $13,000 was provided by the people of St. Andrew's.

Here, then, are sketches of four out of nine urban situations. There's no such thing as a typical mission, either among these four or any others. Each is distinct. For instance . . .

St. Paul's, the Bronx, despite phenominal population flux, has shown steady growth, both numerically and in terms of self-support.

St. Margaret's, the Bronx, has an excellent Church School program, a most active young people's program and is a pioneer in the development of techniques in Christian education.

St. David's, Bronx, which has new housing in its immediate neighborhood, is taking on a new lease on life, and has developed within the past year an extensive and valuable program for young people.

St. Peter's, Chelsea, in a neighborhood which has undergone two changes in a dozen years, has not been so "successful" in terms of growth, but has among other things provided experience for seminarians in their preparation for the urban ministry.

At St. Clement's a new and promising venture is taking place — a ministry to the arts under the direction of the Rev. Sidney Lanier.

Yet, distinct as they are from one another, all of the missions have in common the fact that the product of all of their effort, time and concern is not money, "success" as the world knows it, but, as Archdeacon McEvoy puts it, "the development of Christian initiative . . . not people who are just good, but people who are good for something."

"Lives are being changed," Archdeacon McEvoy reports. "The Church is doing what its purpose has been for 2,000 years and doing it in terms of civilization's present structure." Missions are a concentrated effort to try to answer the question, "What is the Church for?" ■

See the New Cathedral Windows

Next time you visit the Cathedral, take a few minutes to look at the three new, large, stained glass windows which were installed recently.

THE FATHERHOOD WINDOW. Given by Mrs. G. Forrest Butterworth, in memory of her husband. He was Chancellor of the Diocese for many years, a Trustee of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, and a vestryman at Christ's Church, Rye, for 25 years. At the time of his death he was a senior partner in the law firm of Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft. The window in his memory is in the clerestory, nearly 112 feet above the floor, on the north side of the nave, opposite the Motherhood Window. It was dedicated on October 14, during the Archbishop of Canterbury's visit.

In the rose tracing at the top are depicted St. Philip and Jesus at the moment described in John 14 — "Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us." The left lancet shows Abraham with his two sons, Isaac and Ishmael. Various symbols represent this patriarch's fatherhood of Judaism, Islam and Christianity. Below Abraham, David is seen as a sorrowing father. He sees his son, Absalom, caught in the branches of an oak by his long hair, a circumstance which enabled Joab to slay him. The right lancet contains the Holy Family, and below them, the forgiving father welcomes his prodigal son.

THE RESURRECTION WINDOW. Given in memory of Mary and Sidney Kirkman. Dedicated on All Souls' Day, November 2. It is in the clerestory on the south side of the Cathedral, in the bay nearest the main portal. Orthodox iconography has influenced both the subject matter and portrayal of the figures in this window. The rose tracery shows Christ delivering the "souls in prison" of death. Below are symbols of the Resurrection—the peacock and the phoenix. The left lancet illustrates Ezekiel's vision of the Valley of Dry Bones, and below this, the Dormition of the Virgin—our Lord's reception of his departed Mother's soul, depicted as a little child, shown simultaneously with the scene of her funeral. The right lancet shows Christ in glory emerging from the empty tomb bearing aloft the banner of victory. A smaller figure of Saul experiencing his conversion on the Damascus Road balances the figure of Ezekiel opposite. At the bottom, a priest celebrates the Holy Communion, surrounded by the unseen congregation, as it is written in our rite, "therefore with Angels and Archangels, and all the company of heaven, we laud and magnify thy glorious Name."

THE EDUCATION WINDOW. In the Education Bay, on the north side of the nave. This window is at about eye level. Given by the late Mary Louise Moffatt in memory of her parents. Dedicated at Evensong, Sunday, November 4. The lancet medallions contain representations of Episcopal colleges, and in some cases their founders. The half medallions contain seals of all the preparatory and parish schools of the Diocese of New York. In the four lowest corners are additional educational symbols.

The iconographical scheme for each window was suggested by Canon West. All three were made by the Willet Studios, Philadelphia. ■

Schools Form Episcopal College Foundation

The eight four-year colleges associated with the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. have formed the Foundation for Episcopal Colleges, Inc. "to promote Christian higher education in the tradition of the Episcopal Church."

Dr. Albert C. Jacobs, President of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., was elected chairman, and Kenneth C. Parker, Director of Public Relations at Trinity, was elected secretary.

The Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, is a member of the Foundation. Other members are the presidents of the eight colleges: Trinity; University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.; Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.; Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio; Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Shimer College, Mt. Carroll, Ill.; St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, N. C.; and St. Paul's College, Lawrenceville, Va. ■

13 Men Attending Readers' Course For Holy Orders

A new series of courses has been started for men in this Diocese who wish to study for the ministry but cannot attend a seminary full time.

The program consists of lectures and discussions held at the Cathedral every Saturday. It is under the direction of the Bishop, with the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral providing the leadership and instruction. The Rev. Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor, is the coordinator.

Actually, the project started last year, when Bishop Donegan asked The Rev. Frederick C. Grant to give several lectures to men who were "reading for Holy Orders." Most of these candidates are older men with business and family responsibilities, but who, nevertheless, wish to enter the ministry.

Generally, ordination to the diaconate and the priesthood follows a period of residence in an accredited seminary, although this is not absolutely necessary to pass the required canonical examinations. The Bishop's program was designed to fill the gap for men who could attend seminary only part-time.

This year the Bishop expanded the program to provide regularly scheduled, organized classes. It is called the Readers' Course. The schedule includes a formal lecture from 10:00 to 11:40 A.M. every Saturday, followed by a 20-minute coffee break and a second lecture period from noon to 1:00 P.M. Thirteen men are enrolled. Two have Ph.D. degrees in other fields.

The morning lecturers include the Rev. John Knox, Baldwin Professor of Sacred Literature at Union Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral. For the afternoon sessions, Bishop Donegan has spoken twice on "The Life of Prayer and Personal Devotion."

Others who have spoken or will speak are Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore, the Rt. Rev. John B. Bentley, Director of the Overseas Department, National Council; The Rev. Howard Johnson, Canon Theologian; the Ven. Archdeacons Richard E. McEvoy and George F. Brätt and Eric E. Ley, Director of Stewardship. ■

Two "admirals" tackle a problem in naval strategy. The Rev. Wray E. MacKay, Vicar of St. Andrew's, Clason Point, and a parishioner, Fred Hallmark, "fight" a game of Battle Line. View shows the two fleets of ships, a work board (right, foreground) the "sighting board," Father MacKay's contribution to the game, and the rulers for measuring distance and shooting capacity.

'Admiral MacKay' at St. Andrew's Wages Violent Battles at Sea

It is hard to tell how many parishioners at St. Andrew's, Bronx, realize that their vicarage is sometimes the scene of a violent battle—guns roaring, terse commands, battleships sinking . . . Their vicar, the Rev. Wray E. MacKay, is an admiral of no mean stature.

What's this all about? It means that whenever he has a likely visitor, "Admiral" MacKay clears the floor for another crack at the historic Battle of Jutland (May 31, 1916, fought off the coast of Denmark between the German high seas fleet and the grand fleet of Great Britain).

His favorite visitor is the Rev. Hebert W. Bolles, former Canon Pastor of Christ Church Cathedral, Indianapolis, Ind., and now chaplain in the United States Navy. He is the man who started the whole thing. The sound and fury (not of real guns, but certainly of the admirals' excitement) is part of a game called "Battle Line," invented by Canon Bolles with the engineering know-how of Father MacKay.

The game recreates situations a naval tactical commander faces during a battle at sea. The "sea"is a huge canvas marked in squares to denote sectors. There are two "fleets," of approximately 30 ships each, cast from lead and designed by Canon Bolles himself. Father MacKay, an M. I. T. man, designed and built the "sighting board," a contraption which enables a player to "sight" the enemy so that only those enemy ships come into his vision which would under real circumstances appear over the top of an eight-mile horizon. A "battle" requires about three hours and the whole parish house floor. Everything is calculated on a real-life basis—the steaming distances of which various types of ships are capable, their gunfire capacities.

Why did the inventors choose Jutland as their model battle? Because this World War I engagement is considered the last great ship-to-ship encounter. Later battles were of an air-to-ship variety. Now strategy is becoming one of missile-to-ship.

"Battle Line" is not for children, Father MacKay admits. He says that naval officers who have played it are enthusiastic about its intricacies and realism. Still, one major games manufacturer showed interest in commercial production of "Battle Line" when it was copyrighted in June, 1960. But production costs ran too high. Now, however, another firm is reportedly showing interest. Perhaps eventually the game will appear on the market. ■

Theological Education Sunday

Theological Education Sunday will be observed on January 27 this year. This is the day special offerings are received at Episcopal churches all over the nation to help train men for the ministry. The Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, has issued the following statement:

"Since 1941, the call has gone out to the Church each year to make an offering for the support of our seminaries. The response has been generous and encouraging. It is evident now that many of us understand that if the seminaries are to provide adequate and thorough preparation for men entering the ordained ministry, they must depend upon us all for support.

"And they certainly do! We cannot let Theological Education Sunday become a routine affair: just another year, another offering. This is an opportunity for each of us to give generously so that our seminaries will be able to do the work they must do if our Church is to respond to God's call now.

"Let us do our part, so that the seminaries can do theirs!"

'Holiday' Released Time Has Westchester Try-out

Two Westchester parishes have been cooperating in an experiment in Christian education which seems to have worked.

Twice each year, on All Saints Day and Ascension, elementary school children from St. John's, Larchmont, and St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck, join forces for a day-long School of Religion. By law, children can be excused from public school on those days if they attend religious programs instead.

The two Westchester churches say that their children have learned more in that one day of "released time" than can be taught in three or four months in the average Church School. The plan is especially good, they add, for areas where transporting children and teachers to weekly released time classes is difficult.

Last All Saints Day, St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck, was the host. (Next Ascension Day, it will be St. John's.) Nearly 100 children attended. The "school" kept regular hours, from 9 A.M. to 3 P.M., with time out for a box lunch and a recreation period. This was the program:

At 9 A.M., a preparation period for Holy Communion, which included preliminary prayers, practicing several hymns, and a brief discussion about the hymns. At 10 A.M., Holy Communion, followed by a classroom period in which the theme for the day, "Modern Day Saints," was introduced. At 11 A.M., a project period, during which the children worked on cut-outs to be taken home. After lunch there was another instruction period, another work period, and Evensong.

The staff consisted of the Rev. G. Clayton Melling, Rector of St. Thomas's, the Rev. Kenneth E. Mackenzie, Rector of St. John's, Miss Maryhelen Ellis, Director of Christian Education at St. John's, and the Rev. Geoffrey Armstrong, assistant minister at St. Thomas's. They did all of the preparatory research, wrote a lesson plan and devised a work book. Each session, of course, has a different theme.

The theme for last Fall, "Modern Day Saints," was meant to convey the idea that a "saint" need not be someone on a stained glass window, but rather a person who is dedicated to God's work, and that "saints" lived not only in the early days, but today also. Some of the people whose lives were discussed were Archbishop Joost deBlank of South Africa, Caleb Heathcote, a Revolutionary War layman who established churches in Westchester and kept Prayer Book worship alive in Colonial days; Florence Nightingale, Dr. Tom Dooley and the Rev. Kilmer Myers, known for his work in the city. ■

Lord Fisher Visits Area For Five Days

Lord Fisher in the Cathedral pulpit

The 99th Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Archbishop Lord Fisher of Lambeth, was the preacher at the annual Diocesan Choir Festival held in the Cathedral on October 28. Some 350 choristers from 19 churches participated, under the direction of Alec Wyton, organist and master of choristers for the Cathedral.

Lord Fisher and his wife were in New York for a five-day visit beginning Friday, October 26. They were the guests of the Rev. James W. Kennedy, Rector of Ascension, Manhattan, and Mrs. Kennedy. During his visit Lord Fisher made a tape for the CBS-TV show "Lamp Unto My Feet." He preached and celebrated Holy Communion at the Church of the Ascension, and appeared on the NBC television show "Today."

He gave the address at the Church Club dinner on October 30. Lord and Lady Fisher were the guests of honor at that occasion. They were also honored at a luncheon given by the British Information Services and at a reception given by the English Speaking Union.

Lord Fisher was the Archbishop of Canterbury from 1945 until his retirement in 1961. He was one of the six Presidents of the World Council of Churches from 1948 to 1954. He crowned Queen Elizabeth II. Since his retirement, he has been in great demand as a speaker in various parts of the world. ■

BISHOPS ISSUE FOUR STATEMENTS

Four important statements were adopted at the 1962 meeting of the House of Bishops in Columbia, S. C., October 27 to November 1. They were issued instead of the usual Pastoral Letter.

In brief, they cover these issues:

RACE RELATIONS

The Bishops declared, in part, "We, the Bishops of the Episcopal Church, entrusted with the duty to proclaim Christian truth, affirm the dignity and value of every man, of whatever color or race, as created in the image of God. Neither race nor color is in itself a barrier to any aspect of that life in community for which God created man . . . In civil life we call for willing obedience to laws which grant equal access to our public schools to all students, the right to vote to all citizens, and justice in economic and housing opportunities . . . "

NEW MOVEMENTS

Two observations: (a) "When a new movement rises, which may stress some aspect of the richness of Christ, it is the duty of the whole Church to view it with sympathy, to work to keep it within the great fellowship, and to discern what in the movement is of God that we all may learn from it . . . "

And (b) "having said that to the whole Church, we observe that the danger of all new movements is self-righteousness, divisiveness, onesidedness, and exaggeration. We call, therefore, upon all new movements to remain in the full, rich, balanced life of the historic Church, and thereby protect themselves against these dangers; and we remind all clergy of their solemn vow to conform to the doctrine, discipline, and worship of this Church."

VATICAN COUNCIL

"We, meeting as always as Bishops of the One Holy Catholic Church, fully support the call of the Presiding Bishop for steady and fervent intercession for the Vatican Council . . . Profound differences remain between us. But these, we believe, should be the substance of our common and obedient study, not the occasion of suspicion and distrust . . . "

TOTAL WAR

The Bishops invoked "all people, especially leaders of nations, to exercise the strongest discipline of conscience to prevent total war." They recognized that such all-out nuclear warfare cannot serve any moral or useful purpose. But they declared that "a strong military posture does serve as a deterrent to an aggressor nation . . . " Calling for limited war, if such retaliation is necessary, the Bishops declared that as dictated by the Christian conscience, "We must set clearly defined objectives and cease to wage war when they are achieved."

Many of the sessions were closed to the public, but significant action was the election of a suffragan bishop for the Philippines and a bishop for the new jurisdiction of the Virgin Islands. The former is a native of the Philippines, the Rev. Edward Guadan Longid. The latter is the Rev. Cedrick E. Mills of Baltimore, Md. He was the second Negro to be elected a bishop within a six-week period.

Attending the sessions from the Diocese of New York were Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton, and Bishop Wetmore.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, on the last lap of his three-week visit to the United States, addressed the House of Bishops at the invitation of the Presiding Bishop. The Rt. Rev. and Most Hon. Arthur Michael Ramsey restated the Church's position on race relations. He said that it is "absolutely imperative for Christians to say that the partnership of the races within the family of Christ is the essential principle and duty of us all." ■

AMA Honors Miss Stamats

Miss Esther Stamats, Director of Services for the Aged, has been honored by the American Medical Association. The doctors were so impressed with her comments at a panel session in New York City last September that they presented her with a formal citation, awarding her the title of Most Valuable Participant.

It reads: "For outstanding participation at the meeting of the Committee on Aging of the American Medical Association with representatives of National Organizations held in New York City on September 20 and 21, 1962 . . . " The award was presented at a second meeting at which Miss Stamats spoke, a ten-state Conference on the Aging, sponsored by the A.M.A. in Buffalo, N. Y., on Nov. 3. ■

Episcopal Churchwomen will hold their annual winter retreat at House of the Redeemer, Manhattan, from February 13 through 15.

Reservations should be made through The Warden, House of the Redeemer, 7 East 95th Street, New York, N. Y. The retreat will begin with dinner on Wednesday, February 13, and close with breakfast on Friday. The cost will be an offering made according to the ability of the individual participant.

. . . in brief

■ THE CHRISTMAS issue of Woman's Day magazine contained a full page color photograph of the Church School choir at Christ Church, Tarrytown. The magazine used the same picture on a large poster conveying Christmas greetings.

This is the second time that the Christ Church choir has appeared in Woman's Day as a Christmas feature. In 1957 a full page picture of the choir was used as the Christmas issue cover. Miss Elizabeth M. Mead is organist and choir director at the church.

■ FROM NOW ON, don't send requests for Bibles and Prayer Books to the Bible and Common Prayer Book Society of the Episcopal Church. Send them to the Church Periodical Club, 297 Park Avenue South, New York, 10, N. Y.

According to the Rt. Rev. John B. Bentley, President of the Prayer Book Society, the program of both organizations is so similar that officers of both groups agreed that administration of the Bible and Common Prayer Book Society program should be turned over to the Church Periodical Club. However, the Society will continue to exist as a corporation.

■ A REFORMATION DAY play written by the Rev. Henry S. Sizer, Jr., Rector of St. Andrew's, Yonkers, has been published by the Walter H. Baker Co., Boston, Mass. Entitled "Witness to the Truth," it was performed two years ago by the Yonkers Council of Churches. There have been continuing requests for the script.

Mr. Sizer wrote the play — actually a combination of service and narrated pageant — for the Yonkers Council as an effort to tell the Reformation story from more than just the Lutheran point of view—Martin Luther's theses tacked to the door of Wittenberg Cathedral. "Witness to the Truth" deals with the Lutheran, Presbyterian and Anglican outlooks.

■ THE REV. Charles Howard Graf, Rector of St. John's in the Village, Manhattan, has appointed Charles Robert Spooler as Business Manager for St. John's Church.

A member of the staff at St. John's for the past five years, Mr. Spooler is a graduate of West Virginia University. He attended the Philadelphia Divinity School and Virginia Theological Seminary and is at present a graduate student at New York University.

As Business Manager his duties will also include the management of St. John's Colony, the residential real estate owned by St. John's in the Village.

■ BIBLE TRANSLATION, undertaken by the American Bible Society in 64 distant lands, is being expanded. Forty additional countries in Africa, Asia and the Caribbean will receive the benefits of this program during 1963, according to the Society's Advisory Council. ■

Convocations Hold Religion Series

Two convocations, the Bronx and Dutchess, held series of religious programs this fall.

For the Bronx, it was a first attempt to hold a lecture series of this kind. Eleven churches participated. The Rev. Robert C. Dentan, Trinity Church Professor of Old Testament Literature and Interpretation at General Theological Seminary, gave three talks on "Great Books of the Bible." He discussed Genesis, Amos, and I Corinthians. All three sessions were held at St. James, Fordham. The Rev. Basil Law, Dean of the Convocation and Rector of St. James, was in charge of the programs.

For its annual School of Religion, Dutchess Convocation held four liturgical demonstrations and discussions of the Holy Communion. They featured several different Rites, and taken together emphasized the basic aspects of the Eucharist in the Anglican Communion—communion, thanksgiving, offering and sacrifice. The series included a demonstration of the Eucharist of the Second Century as reported by Hippolytus, a portrayal of the Greek liturgy with the assistance of a Greek choir from Poughkeepsie, and a dramatization of the Roman Rite.

All four sessions were held at St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley. The Rev. William A. Sadler, Jr., Vicar of St. James, Dover Plains, and St. Thomas, Amenia, was chairman. The Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, Jr. is Dean of the Convocation. ■

Participating in the Memorial Service for Mrs. Roosevelt were, left to right, the Rev. Gordon Kidd, Rector of St. James, Hyde Park; the Bishop; Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson, United States Representative to the United Nations, who gave the main address; the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, and the Very Rev. John Vernon Butler, Dean of the Cathedral.

10,000 Hear Adlai Stevenson Eulogize Eleanor Roosevelt

Ten thousand persons from all walks of life attended memorial services for Eleanor Roosevelt on November 17 in the Cathedral. The throng was one of the largest ever recorded.

Women wearing mink stoles mingled with the most plainly dressed. People came in taxis, in limousines, by subway and on foot to pay their last respects to a woman whose position and achievements made her a national figure for several generations.

Mrs. Roosevelt, an Episcopalian, was a member of St. James Church, Hyde Park, from the time of her marriage in 1905 until her death. Many Sunday mornings she drove all the way from her Manhattan apartment to Hyde Park solely to attend services. President Roosevelt was a member of the Cathedral Board of Trustees from 1914 until his death in 1945.

"A grief perhaps not equalled since the death of her husband 17 years ago," is the way Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson, United States Representative to the United Nations, described the nation's collective reaction to Mrs. Roosevelt's death. He delivered the main address.

Mr. Stevenson described Mrs. Roosevelt as "a woman whose lucid and luminous faith testified always for sanity in an insane time and for hope in a time of obscure hope—a woman who spoke for the good toward which man aspires in a world which has seen too much of the evil of which man is capable." He said Mrs. Roosevelt "left 'a name to shine on the entablatures of truth, forever.' "

Mrs. Roosevelt's four sons and her daughter and their families occupied seats in the choir during the service. Representatives of 37 UN delegations were in the congregation. New York City was represented by Deputy Mayor Edward F. Cavanaugh, Jr. There were church representatives from many denominations.

Bishop Donegan officiated. Also taking part were the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, and the Rev. Gordon Kidd, Rector of St. James, Hyde Park. ■

Bishop Boynton, who has officiated at many Confirmation services, said he was delighted recently when he turned from the altar at Trinity Church, Mount Vernon, and faced this quartet of candidates: One Cherokee Indian, one Caucasian, one American Negro and one Chinese Confucianist.

The Rev. Kenneth R. Waldron was presenting a class of 26 to be confirmed, plus five to be received from the Roman Catholic Church. Bishop Boynton described the church as "a regular United Nations."

A Private and Public Faith

William Stringfellow

"The thoughtful New York attorney who caught my attention more than any other person." —Karl Barth

William Stringfellow's involvement as an Episcopalian layman in religious and social affairs eminently qualifies him to speak for the quiet revolution in today's Protestant ranks. In A Private and Public Faith he hits hard as he speaks specifically of the manipulation of religion for personal, corporate and national self-interests, the frivolities and incapacities of Protestantism, and the possibility and content of a relevant and honest witness in these present-day circumstances.

Lady Fisher Addresses 500 Churchwomen in Rye

Wives and mothers have a formidable task, Lady Fisher, wife of the former Archbishop of Canterbury, told 500 Episcopal Churchwomen at Christ's Church, Rye.

They must "see to it that the homes of the many nations are truly Christian."

Over the years Lady Fisher has earned a worldwide reputation for her efforts in this direction. From 1944 to 1955 she was president of the Mothers' Union, a worldwide, Anglican equivalent of the Episcopal Churchwomen, with a membership of 500,000. She has been a leader in the Church of England Moral Welfare Council, the British Council of Churches, the World Council of Churches, and the Girls' Friendly Society. She is the mother of six sons.

Christ's Church was thronged to capacity for her visit. The occasion was the annual fall meeting of Westchester ECW branches. It also marked the 75th anniversary of women's work in Westchester.

Lady Fisher was attired in a loosely-belted silk dress of muted blue, designed with bracelet-length sleeves tipped with mink cuffs. She wore a small hat of silky bronze-colored petals, and a double-strand pearl necklace.

She smiled at the assembled ECW members and told them they could very well be "any one of several groups I have addressed, anywhere in the world—because I feel so close to you." She described her visits, with the 99th Archbishop of Canterbury, to many countries where "the status of women is still lagging." She described her satisfaction when in some of these places women began to assume leadership.

The Mothers' Union, she explained, "tries to safeguard and promote Christian marriage and Christian parenthood." She declared that "there is no nation apart from its families . . . the nation cannot be any better than the average of its families." She added, "If we are a little above, we are helping to lift the life of the nation. If we are a little below, we are helping to drag it down." And since women are the cornerstone of the family, their responsibility is great, Lady Fisher told her audience. "The family is the nation. When a nation's family life deteriorates, the nation is on the down path."

Lady Fisher

Lady Fisher thought the ECW Handbook was "very good," except for one phase. "You can't really say you are in service for the church," she protested. (ECW Handbook, page 1). "You are the Church. You work as the Church."

The speaker was guest of honor at a luncheon given at noon in the rectory by the diocesan board of Episcopal Churchwomen. After the meeting she was honored at a reception and tea.

The Rev. Wendell Phillips, Rector of Christ's Church, conducted the devotions, assisted by the Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie, Dean of the Convocation and Rector of St. John's, Larchmont.

Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., President of the diocesan ECW, and Mrs. G. Maxwell Ule, President of the ECW at Christ's Church, spoke briefly. Mrs. Fenton B. Neal, Jr., ECW Convocation chairman, introduced the speaker. ■

Bishop Emrich Is Speaker At Annual UTO Ingathering

What's the difference between a church and a club?

Here's the way the Bishop of Michigan, the Rt Rev. Richard S. Emrich, answered this question when he spoke to the Episcopal Churchwomen at their United Thank Offering presentation service in the Cathedral on December 4:

"A club has four distinguishing marks; and the Church is characterized by the opposite of these marks.

"A club is founded and controlled by men. It serves our purposes and pleasures. It is exclusive. It is comfortable."

He warned that, "Without the Holy Spirit, this is what our churches tend to become."

Taking as his text Acts 1:8, Bishop Emrich noted that the Scriptures read, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me . . . " He stressed the word "me," pointing out that Jesus meant just that. "Witnesses unto me, not witnesses to ourselves, not to Western Civilization, not to High Church or Low Church, not to our social responsibilities or to anything else."

The Bishop's trip to New York for his sermon at the Cathedral was sponsored by the Church Periodical Club, as well as by the ECW.

A partial report on the United Thank Offering indicates that $26,263.21 was received from 7,812 women throughout the Diocese. The open offering at the Cathedral service was $164.34.

The afternoon meeting was to have been devoted to a report from delegates to the Provincial Synod meeting in Haiti. But, as the meeting was changed to West Point and considerably shortened, the ECW afternoon session also included a talk by Bishop Boynton. He spoke on the church's work and problems in the Far East, where he traveled last Summer.

At the business meeting conducted by Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., Diocesan President, delegates voted to discontinue their present method of handling the ECW pledge to the General Church program budget "designated and undesignated." Money for this pledge will now go through the treasurer of the parish vestry to Theodor Oxholm, Treasurer of the Diocesan Convention, be credited to the parish mission quota, and be so acknowledged. Heretofore, ECW Branches assuming responsibility for this pledge have sent money to the ECW diocesan treasurer, who in turn has sent it to Mr. Oxholm. Reasons for the procedural change were given in a letter sent to all participating parishes.

A Christian Social Service pledge of $4,200 was approved. Of this, $3,000 will go toward the salary of Miss Dorothy M. Bigelow, who is in charge of port and immigration work at the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. The remaining $1,200 will be used to make $100 per month grants to Miss Alice Palmer, Miss Bigelow's predecessor.

ECW Plans Diocesan Event

Episcopal Churchwomen from all over the Diocese are invited to a meeting at St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, on Saturday, February 2. The session, which starts at 10:30 A.M., is the annual February Diocesan meeting of ECW.

Miss Dorothy M. Bigelow will give a first-hand report of the port and immigration work done by the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. This is a project which ECW funds have helped make possible for more than 30 years.

Miss Bigelow is Director of the Port and Immigration Department. She meets planes and ships bringing men and women to this country for the first time, and helps them solve problems—finding relatives, adapting to new customs and a strange language, finding lodgings. Often legal problems must be untangled. Her job encompasses many situations, comic and tragic, and almost every human emotion.

Guest speaker with Miss Bigelow will be Mrs. Gurney Williams, President of the Mission Society Woman's Council.

Those who wish to attend the meeting are asked to bring their own box lunch, but beverages will be served by the St. Bartholomew's ECW Branch. There will be no afternoon session. ■

'Peace Bell' Tolls Again at Holy Rood . . .

Holy Rood Church has a bell again — after 51 years.

The present building has been at Fort Washington Avenue and 179th St. since 1911. The parish formerly was at Broadway and 181st St. When it moved, the congregation took the church bell along. But somehow the people never got around to having it installed. The bell was stored under a porch and gradually forgotten.

In 1955, when the present rector, the Rev. Ernest Davies, was called, he discovered the bell, learned its history, and began a modest fund to have it installed.

The bell, dedicated in 1902, commemorates the Battle of Fort Washington, November 16, 1776. It's known as the "Peace Bell," because the inscription on it reads: On Battleground where foeman fell, the Heavenly tale of Peace I tell.

A special service was held on November 16, 1962, the 186th anniversary of the Battle of Fort Washington. Mrs. Emmy Roche, one of the oldest members of Holy Rood, pulled a rope — and ended the Peace Bell's 51-year silence. ■

New York Boy Wins Contest

Winning poster created by Bruce Heylinger of St. Philip's Church for the National Council's 1962 Creative Art Contest. Brilliant colors and a powerful style distinguish Bruce's work.

Bruce J. Heylinger, Jr., 14, of St. Philip's Church, Manhattan, is a two-time winner in the 1962 Creative Art Contest of the Church School Missionary Offering. The contest was sponsored by the National Council of the Episcopal Church.

Bruce is both a national winner and winner for the Diocese of New York. He contributed two posters, and both were selected as national winners.

An entry by another member of St. Philip's, Donna Drake, was selected for honorable mention.

There was a total of 15 national winners in the contest, and 1,527 entries. Thirty-two entries came from the Diocese of New York. ■

Recording Brings Church to Shut-ins

The National Council of the Episcopal Church has released a new recording especially designed to bring the Church to those who are sick or shut-in. It is a 12-inch, 33-1/3 rpm recording entitled "Draw Near with Faith."

On one side the Rev. W. C. McCracken, Rector of St. Paul's, Cleveland, Ohio, reads Morning Prayer, followed by hymns and canticles sung by the choir of Calvary Church, Manhattan. On the second side, preparation for Holy Communion is narrated by the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger; and two more familiar hymns are sung by the choir of Church of the Ascension, Manhattan.

Blind people may obtain the record free of charge, by having their rector write to the Director of the Home Department, National Council, 281 Park Avenue South, New York, 10. Others may order the record from the Home Department at $2.25. Checks should be made payable to Lindley M. Franklin, Jr., Treasurer. ■

Bronxville Rector Writes New Book For Lenten Season

The Rev. George W. Barrett, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, is the author of a new Lenten book. It is entitled KEY WORDS FOR LENT. Seabury Press is the publisher. The book has 133 pages and sells for $2.75.

In his preface, Dr. Barrett admits that his is a "book about words" because to Christians, more than to most people, words are important — they communicate our faith; both Christ and the Bible are known as the Word of God."

Thus, Dr. Barrett examines words that have grown stale with repeated use, words such as "repentance," "obedience," "commitment," "grace," "suffering," and "freedom." His purpose is to restore to these words their true Christian meaning and so provide a better understanding of the substance and purpose of Lent.

The closing section deals with phrases rather than single words. These chapters are meditations based on scriptural passages assigned to be read on Good Friday, passages which "tend to be overlooked" in the usual preoccupation with the Seven Last Words.

Dr. Barrett, Rector of Christ Church since 1955, formerly was Eugene Augustus Hoffman Professor of Pastoral Theology at General Theological Seminary. He is President of the Standing Committee, Diocese of New York, and a member of its Board of Examining Chaplains. He is also a past chairman of the diocesan Department of Promotion. Dr. Barrett has addressed numerous groups and conferences. With J. V. L. Casserly, he was co-author of DIALOGUE ON DESTINY. ■ Often in conversation we hear a man described as a good Episcopalian. Or, a person who is more knowledgeable will say that "So-and-so" is a good churchman. We all use this expression; exactly what does this mean? I suspect that most people assume that it is the first half of one's bounden duty as a member of the Church, "to follow Christ and to worship God every Sunday in his Church." But there is another half to this answer, which is "to work and pray and give for the spread of his Kingdom. Without this second half a man is not really a churchman at all. My criterion of a good churchman is very simple; it is this: Does or does not this particular man have a concern for the larger and broader need of the world in which he lives?

A century ago, our great grandfathers sang with conviction a hymn — which though neither very great poetry nor very good music — does contain a line which comes to our generation with a bit of a shock: "O Sion, haste, thy mission high fulfilling, to tell to all the world that God is light; that he who made all nations is not willing one soul should perish, lost in shades of night." For you and me, in our day, the hymn sounds condescending about other religions and other peoples — which is a good enough point of view, provided you have no religion! But if once you have known freedom, and light, and life, and known the Lord Jesus as their source, this hymn, however pedestrian and however Victorian, is saying something which is fundamentally true.

Some of the great world religions have lofty philosophies, but they do not take the common life of men seriously. Christianity does take the common life seriously; the hunger for food, the need for hospitals; it takes sin seriously, and then does something about it; it is a religion of redemption, the redemption of the lost, the last and the least. It is not a religion of renunciation and abandonment, as a deliverance out of a hopelessly wicked world.

I have seen little children in the Far East undernourished and underfed and ill. They are not unloved; they are born into races and cultures which love children. But what message has any kind of religion to the parents whose child is suffering through lack of food and medical care? These parents need no convincing that there is a grim world; no assurance whatever that there is nothing to be hoped for here, and little hereafter.

But would you settle for this for your child? You have built right in you, because of 1700 years of free Christianity, the notion that human beings ought not to live this way. You still think that "earth might be fair and all men glad and wise." But Christianity is a strange religion; its solvent for happiness is so simple, so uncomplicated; if you share it, you will have it — and if you don't share it you will lose it.

Christianity does not recognize any such thing as mass problems, because there is little you can do about mass problems. Viewed as a mass problem there is little that can be done about our suffering fellow human beings, and Christianity refuses to be defeated by this type of thinking. This mission of the Church is to bring the life-giving power of the Gospel to bear in the far corners of the earth and to minister to the needs of the whole world. Christianity cares about individuals and it cares about them everywhere. Do you?

Faithfully your Bishop,

THE

It's Sunday. Dawn is beginning to break; the alarm clock has just rung. You peer through the frosty window and sense that it is still snowing, even if you can't quite see the flakes. For a last brief moment under the feather quilt, you ponder the day's schedule: 7:30 Eucharist at St. Martha's-in-the-Village, then hitch up the horse and sleigh for a six-mile pull over the hill to St. John's-in-the-Dale for Morning Prayer at 11. Dinner at a valley farmhouse will be hearty and abundant. But then it's eight miles to Christ Church, River Junction, for the four o'clock service. You'll return to your home, your wife, and your children about seven o'clock tonight.

Still, as a rural vicar in 1913, the day's prospects don't faze you. You know that's what the Church's missions in the country are like.

In 1963, the automobile, good roads and an unprecedented exodus of people from the city to the country have wrought significant changes. Sometimes the vicar still gets up at dawn, and he may still have a full day's schedule of services at three small churches. And they may be 26 miles apart instead of six or eight. But his Volkswagen or Jeep with the four-wheel drive gets him there in far shorter time, and when he greets the worshippers, most of them aren't really "country people" any more. They are suburbanites.

In fact, a "rural" mission is getting to be as scarce as a horse-hair sofa. Within the Diocese of New York, from Yonkers to Woodstock, from Amenia Union to Callicoon, the Church's missions are facing the phenomenon described by sociologists as the "metropolitan sprawl." Just as it is in the city, the biggest factor facing the country is change. It is a different kind of change from that going on in the city. But it is just as fascinating to watch and as puzzling to deal with.

It is easy to think of change in the country as synonymous with "growing pains." The way in which the automobile and improved communications opened up the outlying areas did pave the way for the post-World War II migrations — first to the suburbs, southern Westchester, and later to the exurbs, northern Westchester and more distant Rockland, Putnam, Dutchess, Ulster, Orange and Sullivan Counties. It seems logical to think that as communities sprout, churches are started, aided for a while — just as foreign missions are aided — and then gradually nurtured to self-support and the status of independent parishes.

But the actual situation is more complicated than that, for these reasons:

SPIRES OF SUBURBIA

by Ruth Weber

1. A tremendous amount of missionary spade work was done all through the 19th century, leaving many little missions here and there.

2. Sometimes change in the country has not followed the pattern of increasing but rather of shifting populations.

3. Sometimes there is an "urban pattern" in the country, or the temporary existence of groups of people to whom the Department of Missions feels it has a responsibility.

The Department, which operates under the formidable title of The Board of Managers of the Diocesan Missionary and Church Extension Society of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Diocese of New York, was formed in 1912. By that time there were a great many rural missions. According to Archdeacon George F. Brätt, who is in charge of missions outside of New York City, missionary "outreach" was at an all-time high all through the 19th century. The Church's apparent ambition was to establish a parish in virtually every little village. To be quite fair, in those days it seemed necessary, because six miles to church in a horse and buggy was a long ride. But when the horse and buggy days ended, the Department of Missions inherited most of these small churches — too small to support themselves. As the years passed, some perished and some grew. But even today, there remains the problem of what to do with a small church where growth has been imperceptible, the future unpredictable.

We will come back to this problem.

A changing environment and shifting population in the country also has created the dilemma of what to do with a small church that is incapable of self-support. A good example of this is the Jones Point House of Prayer, which is now nothing more than a preaching station with occasional services held in the summer time. Jones Point is on the west bank of the Hudson near where the Government's "mothball fleet" is anchored. Once there were a number of stone works in the vicinity, which supplied bluestone curbs and sidewalks for city streets. But they have gone.

The phrase "urban pattern" is used to recall last month's description of what has happened to many city churches—the problem which arises when staunch churchgoers move away from a solid, old, downtown church, and new people with different cultural ties move in. One or two suburban cities have churches like this.

But in recent years two temporary groups have been given increasing missionary attention. They are the summer campers and migrant workers.

A country vicar often is a circuit rider. Here is St. Mark's, Fort Montgomery, one of two missions on the west bank of the Hudson served by the Rev. William R. F. Thomas. Right, typical scene after the early service. Immediately after the last handshake, Mr. Thomas will get into his car for the 8-mile drive to St. John the Divine, Tomkins Cove.

The summer campers, in Bear Mountain and Harriman Parks, as well as those at the Westchester Recreation Commission Camp in Croton, are served weekly by diocesan mission clergy and by the Archdeacon. It is the Church's opportunity to reach many unchurched city youngsters, as well as to retain its youthful city members on vacation. Camp services are well attended, Archdeacon Brätt reports, and the program virtually pays for itself through the offerings.

The migrant workers, an estimated 500 in the Warwick Valley alone, together with their wives and children, are brought here from Puerto Rico and the South by the large land owners to harvest crops. They are poorly paid, poorly educated, poorly housed. For some years the New York State Council of Churches has been heading up a program to help these people. Beginning last year Bishop Donegan and two diocesan Departments—Missions and Christian Social Relations—had a part in the program.

A bi-lingual Episcopal chaplain was sent to minister to the workers in the Florida-Pine Island area. He made visits to the camps to conduct services, direct recreation, serve as an interpreter and distribute literature and the health kits provided by the Northern Westchester Girl Scouts and the Middletown United Church Women. All migrant children under fifteen were urged to attend a summer school.

The success of the project has prompted the Department of Missions to allocate funds in 1963 for a continuation of the work.

Speaking of funds, the Department of Missions in 1962 spent approximately $103,200 toward the payment of clergy salaries and other expenses of missionary work outside New York City. It also spent $21,600 on the repair and upkeep of church properties. All of this is what Archdeacon Brätt calls "live" money. There are no large endowments for work in the country. Funds spent each year are drawn from missionary quota payments by every parish and mission.

However, for special construction projects, aid has been obtained from the Diocese's 175th Anniversary Fund. Since money from this fund became available, $237,220 has been spent on construction projects, all on a loan basis, from the Revolving Fund.

These included projects at All Saints, Valley Cottage, a new church and parish house $83,388; Christ the King, Stone Ridge, new church, parish house and rectory, $132,218; St. Gregory's, Woodstock, a new parish house $28,614; for Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, a rectory, $23,000, and at Montrose a new parish house $40,000.

Let's look at a few of these places:

St. Gregory's, Woodstock, is located in what has long been a popular artist colony. But the congregation consists mainly of all-year-round worshippers. It is a comparatively new mission. Some years ago, the Rev. Herald Swezy, then in charge of Ascension, West Park, was making hospital calls in Kingston. He met a number of interested Episcopalians who saw a need for a church in Woodstock. For a while these people — about 10 or 12 — held services in one another's homes, with Fr. Swezy officiating. For a while they worshipped in a corn crib! Gradually the congregation grew, and a generous donor gave a church site. The building was finished in 1961. And from that point the congregation grew so fast that a parish house had to be built almost immediately—the building provided by a loan from the Revolving Fund of the 175th Anniversary Fund. Now the congregation numbers approximately 160.

Worshippers at Christ the King, Stone Ridge, originally were two small congregations scattered among several small villages and towns in the interior of Hudson Convocation. After a careful survey of the area and its growth potential, the Diocese asked these congregations to consider merging into one unit, more centrally located with room for expansion and parking. An architect drew plans for a new, contemporary style church, parish house and rectory, and in 1960 the congregation moved in. It has been growing ever since. In 1961, Christ the King listed 193 communicants. In 1962, it listed 337.

Planning, incidentally, is a lot more scientific than it used to be. Often the Department of Missions uses information on industrial growth and population trends compiled by either the Protestant Council of the City of New York, or a regional planning commission. Frequently, though, it undertakes its own surveys. One of these recently was of enormous help if only because its results were so disappointing.

In Yorktown last summer, a seminary student at Church of the Good Shepherd, Granite Springs, visited 1,236 families in the new developments clustered in Yorktown, Shrub Oak, Lake Mohegan, Granite Springs and Amawalk. Somewhat contrary to expectations, he discovered that 716 of these families are Roman Catholics and 376 are Protestant. But of the Protestants, only 80 are Episcopalian, and of those, all but 14 are already attending churches in Granite Springs, Lake Mohegan or Mount Kisco. Naturally, the Department of Missions will not recommend a new mission here!

But across the Hudson River in Washingtonville, a growing exurb southwest of Newburgh, a similar survey produced just the opposite result.

The Episcopal Church had been established near Washingtonville more than 100 years ago, but, through successive changes in the community, it died out. In the early 1950's, the Rev. Samuel P. Holiday, Rector of Grace Church, Monroe, and at that time Dean of the Convocation, asked neighboring clergy and the Diocese to help explore the possibility of a new church.

Permission was obtained to use the local Grange Hall as a temporary place of worship for the new mission, St. Anne's. After a year or so, a seminarian was sent out to make a survey. He discovered some 75 people who were interested. The Department of Missions purchased a site with money from the 175th Anniversary Fund. The congregation continued to grow, and finally the Bishop appointed St. Anne's present Vicar, the Rev. Richard Elting. He directed a comprehensive survey, the results of which conclusively showed a need for a permanent church building. Plans were drawn, the congregation raised $9,000, which the Bishop matched, and a loan of $37,000 from the Revolving Fund was made available. Groundbreaking services for this new church were held last December 16.

These, of course, are the success stories. Soon churches like these will join the list of 17 other "successes" outside of New York City which reached the status of independent, self-supporting parishes between 1949 and 1962. About them Archdeacon Brätt says: "The Department, working closely with each congregation, was ever alert to urge upon the Churches programs of expansion and a determination to accept more and more financial responsibility."

And he adds, "For a church to become independent is not easy. A church which has received diocesan assistance over a long period of time is often fearful to face complete self-sufficiency . . . "

But from the standpoint of growth in numbers and financial self-reliance, the effort is more than worth while. "In 1949 there were 2,345 communicants in the 17 missions which later achieved independence," Archdeacon Brätt recently told the Council of the Diocese. "Today there are in these churches some 4,367 communicants. But while in 1949 these churches were giving toward their own parish support a total of $75,832, as of 1961 they were giving $264,522. Furthermore, the record of Missionary Quota payments shows that year after year the official listing shows a 'paid in full' notation for many of these churches."

Indeed, this is financial success. But is that the only kind the Church recognizes? What about the old, long-established missions in small communities, or the struggling little churches in towns that once were lively but lately have fallen upon hard times? In these places tangible "success" is obviously difficult to assess.

It is tempting to ask Archdeacon Brätt if a church in the country with a congregation of 25 is "worth while." Or if a man who has spent four years in college and another three in seminary, and appears to have the makings of a good preacher and an efficient administrator isn't wasting his time in such a situation? Or if the Diocese should spend the collective funds of its contributing congregations — a

SUCCESS STORY

St. John's Church, New City, was founded in 1866, and like many other churches outside metropolitan New York, it remained a mission for many years. But about a decade ago, Rockland County began to boom and New City found itself in the midst of a rapidly developing area. Ten years ago, St. John's, growing with the community, was at last able to become financially self-sufficient. Soon it became apparent that a new church would have to replace the little white wooden structure. (top photo) Land was purchased, plans were drawn, and actual construction of the $168,000 building started last July. By autumn, the laminated columns were in place. (center photo) As this issue went to press, workmen were closing in the spacious structure. (bottom photo) The man in the black overcoat is the rector, the Rev. David W. Arnold. The church will be dedicated by Bishop Wetmore on Sunday, March 24, at 4 P.M.

■ SPANISH-SPEAKING people in the United States will have available to them 5,000 copies of the Book of Common Prayer as the result of action at a recent meeting of the National Council of the Episcopal Church. The Council approved an appropriation of $5,000 for printing the Prayer Books. This will be coordinated with an order from the Overseas Department for 10,000 copies of the Spanish translation for overseas distribution.

■ CHAPLAIN John M. Krumm of Columbia University has been elected chairman of the Board of Directors of the Religious Education Association.

■ BUILDING a parish library? If so, you may be interested in the new list of "Recommended Books for Parish Libraries," published by the Episcopal Church's Department of Christian Education. Categories covered are the Bible, church history, doctrine, worship, the work of the Episcopal Church, Christian living, children's books, biographies, and reference works. Suggestions also are made for selecting books for beginning a library on a small budget, and for additions which might be made as funds increase.

A "Parish Library Newsletter," issued three times a year, is designed primarily for parish librarians or library committees. Both the list and the newsletter may be obtained free on request to the Editor, Parish Library Newsletter, 28 Havemeyer Place, Greenwich, Conn.

■ THE CHURCH PERIODICAL Club has announced new national officers.

New president is Mrs. Stocks Smith of Atlanta, Ga., who was also elected to serve as the Church Periodical Club representative to the General Division of Women's Work of the National Council. Mrs. George Paradise of Sioux City, Iowa, is first vice-president. New second vice-president is Mrs. Paul Reed of San Mateo, Calif.

The club distributes books and magazines to clergy and lay workers in isolated areas.

■ THE HOUSE OF DEPUTIES of General Convention has a new secretary. The succession of the Rev. Canon Charles M. Guilbert to this position has been announced by the Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, and Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies.

Canon Guilbert, secretary of the National Council, has been first assistant secretary of the House of Deputies. He succeeds the Rev. Samuel N. Baxter of Austin, Texas, who resigned last October. ■ percentage from your weekly offering and mine — for these few people?

Archdeacon Brätt admits that not only he, but also the whole Department of Missions, frankly faces these questions all the time.

"We feel we must face them in order to carry out our responsibilities honestly," he told The Bulletin. "Sometimes the Diocese is in a real quandary about some little place which has existed for 50 or 60 years and still seems to be struggling. We ask each other: 'Shall we put any more eggs in this basket'?"

To close a church is not easy, the Archdeacon points out. Before the Bishop recommends such action to the Board of Managers, he has given careful and critical study to all aspects of the problem. "For instance," says Archdeacon Brätt, "it was discovered that St. Luke's, Haverstraw, was located in an area served by the parish in Garnerville. As a result, the program of each congregation was weakened. Hence, St. Luke's, with no room for expansion, was closed, and the people of that church, for the most part, joined the congregation of Trinity, Garnerville. A new impetus was given our work in the whole area.

"On the other hand, it was felt wise to continue the ministry of Christ Church, Marlboro. At present the congregation is small and there are good reasons for this. But the location is excellent, halfway between Newburgh and Highland. Ample land is held by the Church if and when the work grows; and the dignified buildings are in good condition. From its studies, the Diocese confidently expects a new day for Christ Church."

Archdeacon Brätt says, "The Church has just as much responsibility to 20 Episcopalians in South Fallsburgh as it has for the converts we hope to make in the South Pacific. We feel we have a special responsibility, in fact, to Episcopalians who have been brought up in the Church. When these people have been cemented to us by Confirmation, is it fair to say 'we know your church has been here for 60 years, but it hasn't grown, it's too small, and we're going to close it.'?" This, Archdeacon Brätt insists, would reflect a lack of responsibility for the few on the part of the many.

Furthermore, the Archdeacon has found repeatedly that small places are excellent training centers for church leadership. In a mission like Dover Plains, for example, the vicar is the chief parochial instructor. Later, when his students grow up, go off to school or work in distant communities, they frequently become the most able leaders in their parishes.

As for the vicars and priests-in-charge, the Department of Missions long ago concluded that the missions deserve the best men to be found. True, there was a tendency to regard outlying areas as a sort of clerical Siberia years ago. A man assigned felt that he was being overlooked and underpaid. But today some of the most talented are serving churches outside the city. To encourage them to go there the Diocese has tried to pay constantly increasing salaries.

Of course, these men often don't remain in the country! Some large, urban parish hears about them and entices them away, so that there is always the problem of turnover.

On the other hand, Archdeacon Brätt feels it is easy for a vicar to fade out of the main stream of activities, to become sort of "lost" in the country if he is not aggressive or personable. Because life is generally less hectic in the country, a quiet man often appears to be quieter than he is.

"But I've learned not to make hasty judgments," declared the Archdeacon. "Many, many times I've discovered that in some out-of-the-way little church there is hard at work a really 'holy and humble Man of heart.' " ■

New TV Bible Series Planned

The Broadcasting and Film Commission of the National Council of Churches has announced a new 13-week series of Bible studies on the NBC-TV program, "Frontiers of Faith."

The Episcopal Church is cooperating in the sponsorship of the program through the Division of Radio-Television and Audio-Visual of National Council.

The series begins Sunday, February 3, from 1:30 to 2:00 P.M., EST, and will concentrate on relating the lessons of Genesis to the life of the Church today. ■

Timetable Keeps Organ Disc Free of Clickety-Clacks

A crew of RCA Victor engineers at Christ Church, Bronxville, recently discovered a new use for a railroad timetable.

They marked it up until it was dog-eared in order to keep the sound of commuter trains out of a hi-fi organ recording.

The results, with Robert G. Owen at the console, will be heard soon on two RCA Victor records.

The first, to be released in March, will include Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D Minor, Franck's Piece Heroique, the Toccata from Widor's Fifth Organ Symphony, the Chorale from Vierne's Second Symphony, and Alain's Litanies. It is tentatively called "The Power of the Organ."

The second record, to be released later, is entitled "German Organ Music of the Nineteenth Century." It will present Reubke's Sonata on Psalm 94, Roger's Benedictus, and the Phantasy and Fugue on Bach by Liszt.

Five sessions of six hours each were required to complete the two recordings. Chairs were removed from the nave in order to heighten resonance. Six microphones were used. The recording instruments were placed in Mr. Owen's studio downstairs. One of the trickiest problems was to keep an eye on the train schedule, because the New York Central tracks run right beside the church. According to Mr. Owen, there's not a clickety-clack on either disc.

This is not the first time that Christ Church's outstanding organ has been chosen for commercial recording. Previously Mr. Owen was featured in the "King of Instruments" series by Aeolian Skinner. Westminster Records has issued two of his albums. But a newly rebuilt instrument will be heard on the current releases.

Mr. Owen describes the new organ as having "the great and positive divisions characteristic of northern German organs of the Baroque period, and two swell divisions reminiscent of the French Silbermann School." In other words, the sound of this organ is something special. ■

The Episcopal Church is composed of 99.6 percent laymen and .4 percent ordained clergy, one reason why the role of the layman is being so widely explored these days.

Coming Events for the ECW

FEBRUARY

Annual Retreat at the House of the Redeemer, 7 East 95th Street, Manhattan, February 13 - 15. Conductor, Canon Bernard C. Newman of Trinity Parish, Manhattan.

MARCH

World Day of Prayer, March 1. The annual observance starts at sunrise in the mid-Pacific and lasts 24 hours. This year's theme is "More Than Conquerors." Episcopal Churchwomen in communities throughout the Diocese will join with women of other demoninations in services of prayer and giving.

APRIL

A trip to the United Nations, April 2. The visit will include a tour of the buildings, lunch in the delegates' dining room, and an address by Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, who represented the United States on the Human Rights Commission of the UN from 1952 to 1960.

MAY

World Fellowship Day, May 3. Theme, "One Family Under God: Genuine and Full Participation."

Culmination of the year's activities, May 11. Presentation of the United Thank Offering at the Cathedral in the morning. Luncheon in Synod Hall undercroft, followed by the annual meeting. Election and installation of officers. Address by the Bishop.

JUNE

Retreat at Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park, June 7 - 9.

Basil Rathbone to Present 'Evening' for Elko Camps

Eleven Manhattan parishes are sponsoring a benefit performance of "An Evening in the Theater with Basil Rathbone," on Wednesday, February 20, at Hunter College. Proceeds will go to the Elko Lake Camps, operated by the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society.

Mr. Rathbone, a veteran stage and screen actor, is donating his services. Last Winter he gave benefits for Elko Lake Camps at St. James' and St. Bartholomew's Churches. Next Winter he will give a performance for the Dutchess and Richmond Committees of the Woman's Council. Last Summer he visited Elko Lake and delighted the children with readings and stories.

Mrs. Rudolph F. Mattesich is chairman of the February 20 benefit, and Mrs. Roger Glenn Mook is honorary chairman. The sponsoring parishes are Calvary, Epiphany, Grace, Heavenly Rest, Holy Communion, Holy Trinity, East 88th Street; St. Mary the Virgin, Resurrection, St. Philip's, St. Thomas and Transfiguration.

Tickets can be obtained from Mrs. Mattesich, 310 East 70th Street, New York, 21, N. Y., at $1, $3, $4 and $5 each. ■

Bishop Names New Chairman

Bishop Donegan has appointed the Rev. Charles H. Graf, Rector of St. John's-in-the-Village, Manhattan, as chairman of the diocesan Department of Promotion. He succeeds the Rev. John C. Harper, who recently accepted a call to become Rector of St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Harper, Rector of St. Matthew's, Bedford, since 1957, had been the department chairman since last summer. His new parish, situated opposite the White House, is known as "The Church of the Presidents."

Fr. Graf has been Rector of St. John's-in-the-Village since 1942. He is a member of the Diocesan Council and the Department of Promotion and a former member of the Department of Christian Social Relations. For some years he wrote a syndicated weekly newspaper column. Entitled "A Minister's Casebook," it appeared in newspapers in the United States and Canada. ■

"The thoughtful New York attorney who caught my attention more than any other person." —Karl Barth

William Stringfellow's involvement as an Episcopalian layman in religious and social affairs eminently qualifies him to speak for the quiet revolution in today's Protestant ranks. In A Private and Public Faith he hits hard as he speaks specifically of the manipulation of religion for personal, corporate and national self-interests, the frivolities and incapacities of Protestantism, and the possibility and content of a relevant and honest witness in these present-day circumstances.

Anglicans Busy Preparing For Congress in Toronto

Churchmen from all over the world will throng to Toronto, Canada, next August 13-23 for the second Anglican Congress.

With well over 1,000 delegates attending, it will be the largest meeting of its kind ever held in Canada. The City of Toronto is preparing for between 3,000 and 4,000 visiting Anglicans from the United States and elsewhere during the ten-day meeting. One American diocese reportedly plans to transport a group of visitors by chartered plane.

An Anglican Congress is attended by bishops, priests and lay delegates from all dioceses and missionary districts throughout the Anglican Communion. The first proposal to hold a Congress was made at the Lambeth Conference of 1948, when it was pointed out that for the future cohesion of the Church something more was needed than the Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops, held once every ten years.

A Congress was viewed as the means to deepen the fellowship of the Anglican Communion and be of great educational value to the clergy and laity alike. It would reveal the Anglican Communion's worldwide significance, and provide opportunity for closer cooperation on broad issues of policy and development. The first Anglican Congress was held in 1954 at Minneapolis, Minn.

This Congress passed a resolution calling for a Congress at regular intervals. The Lambeth Conference of 1958 reaffirmed this wish and proposed the year 1963 for a second Congress.

The theme will be "The Church's Mission to the World." Delegates, representing the 40 million members of the Anglican Communion, hope to provide some of the answers to the question of what the Christian faith means in an age of atheistic ideologies, humanistic philosophies and revitalized non-Christian religions.

The Bishop of Toronto, the Rt. Rev. Frederick Wilkinson, is chairman of the National Congress Committee, which through subcommittees has prepared the program, produced preliminary reading material, arranged for national financing, and settled matters of policy. Chairman of the national Program Committee is the Rt. Rev. Ralph S. Dean, Bishop of Cariboo, B. C.

Congress delegates are now studying a background book, THE CHURCH IN THE SIXTIES, compiled to prepare them for the discussions. Another resource book to be used before and during the Congress is GLOBAL ODYSSEY, by Canon Howard A. Johnson of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. It is the story of his round-the-world study of Anglicanism, which took two years. Canon Johnson will be among the Americans to speak at the Congress.

Others will include Bishop Bayne, formerly Bishop of Olympia and now Executive Officer of the Anglican Communion; Bishop Brown of Arkansas, Bishop Emrich of Michigan, Bishop Gray of Connecticut, Bishop Kennedy of Honolulu, the Rev. Malcolm Boyd, Chaplain of Wayne University, Detroit; and the Rev. William G. Pollard, Director of the Institute of Nuclear Studies at Oak Ridge, Tenn. ■

Plan Now if You're Visiting Toronto

Episcopalians planning to vacation in Canada next Summer will be welcome to attend some of the sessions of the second Anglican Congress, to be held in Toronto from August 13 through 23. According to Arthur Hand, Secretary of the Anglican Congress, non-delegates will have to make their own arrangements for accommodation and meals during their stay, but the Congree committee will provide advance information about hotels and motels.

Visitors will be able to attend the daily Communion services in St. James' Cathedral and take their chances on getting seats at the plenary sessions. These will be held in the Canadian Room of the Royal York Hotel. It holds 2,000. Visitors may not observe discussion group sessions, however. They will be permitted to attend the opening service on August 13 and a missionary rally on August 18. Both will be held in the Maple Leaf Gardens, capacity 14,000.

On August 16 and 19 there will be a music festival in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Bloor Street East, for which there will be 3,000 seats open to all comers.

Youth Groups Spend Day at Cathederal For Annual Reunion

The Department of Christian Education followed up one of its most successful youth conference seasons with one of its most successful reunions. On December 27, some 250 junior and senior high school students, out of 400 who had attended the Bard and Wilderness Conferences last summer, spent a day at the Cathedral.

Following Holy Communion at 10:30 A.M., the group was served lunch in Synod House undercroft. A brief songfest in Synod Hall was climaxed by an impromptu visit by Bishop Donegan, who addressed the young people informally.

The afternoon was devoted to discussion, in small groups, of conference topics, of world events since last summer, and of the question "What did attending the conference mean to me?" Finally the group went back to the Cathedral for an organ recital and a tour led by Canon West. ■ # don't fight old age...

ENJOY IT!

By Esther Stamats

We want to live as long as possible, but we don't want to grow old.

Certainly this is a dilemma, and sometimes a tragedy, such as when a person refuses to age gracefully but uses every device known to cosmetology in a frantic fight against time.

Is it good or bad to be old? Aging can be either, but if it is good it is an achievement and not a gift. We live in the house we have made within ourselves. The failure or success of our later years depends upon what kind of house we built during our earlier years. The kind of old person you are depends on the kind of younger person you were. You can't become lovable overnight.

Age is more than a matter of how many years you've lived. It is also a matter of your ideas, attitudes, emotions, hopes, and relationships to other people. Age 50 can be old; 75 can be young.

Despite this, we have in our country a system by which a man or woman is officially stamped "OLD." We call it mandatory retirement. Some people think of the stamp as being imprinted with indelible ink. Others realize that it can be washed off if we have planned how to do so. By far, the greatest single cause of unhappy retirement is lack of planning. Many people simply will not face up to the inevitability of retirement, will not plan for it. The same holds true for making a will, though the need for a will is necessary and inevitable.

Not planning for retirement almost always leads to money troubles. And the lack of a decent income may lead to loss of self respect, to bitterness, and to just plain discomfort.

Lack of income also forces many retired persons to live with their children. This means adjusting to a new state of dependence, in sharp contrast with their long experience of being self-sufficient and self-supporting. Thus the person who has built his self respect primarily on the value of rugged independence may see nothing left to live for when he becomes dependent.

While certainly money is not everything, the lack of it can cause much emotional as well as physical discomfort after you are retired.

You must also plan what to do with your time. As you approach retirement, you should broaden your activities, so that retirement day will mean not a cessation of activities, but a change of activities.

Do we understand that life is to be lived to the fullest as long as we live and that there is no retirement date included?

I believe we should begin to plan for our old age when we are young by preparing a sort of Hope Chest in which we can store the resources we will need later — courage, a sense of humor, happiness, physical stamina, hobbies and an interest in others. These will fortify us for living late and long.

There must also be planning for emotional changes as we grow older. Perhaps "planning" is not the right word. There should be an awareness that changes will occur — and a willingness to adapt to them. Too many old people don't really try to adjust to the loss of their husband or wife, the loss of their life-long friends, or a lessening of their physical vigor. Rather, they become bitter and despondent in a fight against these wholly natural occurrences.

Inability to adjust to new circumstances is one of the major causes of unhappiness among old people. Yet, life is one adjustment after another. I should know, because I have been adjusting to life for nearly 70 years now; and I can testify that

St. Stephen's Improves Chancel By Widening Old, Narrow Altar

The old altar at St. Stephen's Church, Bronx, was of fine, rose-colored Tavernelle marble, but it was just too narrow. To make the chancel look properly balanced, it needed to be made wider and lower. But how? You can't match 60-year-old marble very well.

As the accompanying picture shows, the rector, the Rev. E. Perren Hayes, and the vestry found an ingenious solution: They simply removed the sides from the old altar, swung them around to the front, and obtained new marble for the sides. To carry the scheme further, one step in the chancel was removed and the remaining ones were made broader. The Communion rail was dropped to the level of the nave; choir stalls were rearranged somewhat; and black and white blocks of vinyl tile were used on the floor all the way down to the main aisle. An unexpected result of the new tile was improved acoustics.

The project, the first major renovation in years, was made possible by a bequest. The total cost was $3,000 but it included more than the altar. The photograph shows a new altar cross, an authentic copy of a 15th century Spanish crucifix; new candlesticks, patterned after the columns in an 8th century church in southern France; and a 400-year-old sanctuary lamp from a church in Seville, Spain. The old cross and candlesticks went to St. James Mission, Manzini, Swaziland, South Africa, a parish that St. Stephen's has adopted. St. Stephen's is at Vireo Avenue and East 238th Street, Bronx. ■

Stringfellow Named World Council Delegate

William Stringfellow, a member of the Church of the Incarnation, Manhattan, is one of four delegates who will represent the Episcopal Church at the Fourth World Conference on Faith and Order of the World Council of Churches in July, 1963. The other three delegates to the conference are the Rt. Rev. Stephen F. Bayne, Jr., the Very Rev. John B. Coburn and the Rev. Edward R. Hardy. Announcement of their appointment was made by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, the Presiding Bishop.

Bishop Names Chaplaincy Committee At Episcopal City Mission Society

The Episcopal City Mission Society's ministry of Protestant chaplaincy in public institutions throughout the ten counties of the Diocese of New York has grown to such proportions that Bishop Donegan has appointed a special Committee on Chaplaincy within the Society. It will be responsible to him, to the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Executive Director, and to the Board of Managers.

As chairman of the committee the Bishop has appointed the Rev. Hugh McCandless, a member of the Board and Rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan. Serving with him are Bishop Wetmore, who is a vice president of the Society; Arthur A. Atha, Walter L. (Red) Barber, Dr. Margaretta K. Bowers, Theodore Baumeister, Dr. Robert H. E. Elliott, the Rev. Douglas M. Glasspool, Mrs. Elliot H. Goodwin, the Rev. John C. Harper, the Hon. Robert J. Mangum, Mrs. James A. Paul, and the Very Rev. Lawrence Rose, Dean of General Theological Seminary.

The Society has a Chaplaincy Corps of 36 staff and associate chaplains, directly serving congregations totalling over 28,000 men, women and children in 41 public hospitals, jails, prisons, homes for the aged, reformatories and rehabilitation centers throughout the Diocese.

Among other recent activities of the Mission Society are the following:

The Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Executive Director, has been unanimously elected to the chairmanship of the Protestant Committee on Chaplaincies in the City of New York. He fills the post vacated some months ago by the Rev. William E. Sprenger upon his retirement.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Managers, Bishop Donegan, President of the Society, presented a Citation of Merit to Mrs. William C. Dickey on behalf of the American Correctional Chaplains Association of America. The citation was presented to Mrs. Dickey in recognition of her " . . . devotion and practical work and concern about the welfare of prisoners and patients in public institutions." Mrs. Dickey is a member of the Mission Society's Board of Managers. ■

Viewpoint

"No, our Churches are not infiltrated with Communism, but many of them are victims of an even greater evil. They are permeated with dullness and self-satisfaction, well content to operate as religious enclaves having little or no contact with the problems of their communities or of the nation and the world. They are, in short, infiltrated by the world and the devil, and this is the creeping sickness that is constantly attacking the Body of Christ."

—From an address by Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies of General Convention.

Don't fight—

I find living just as exciting and glamorous now as it ever was. So much to see and know and to do in this rapidly changing world.

When I was in Canada last Spring, I met a right gay gentleman of 92 who informed me that he had voted in every election for 71 years.

"Recently," he said, "I've had a queer feeling when I've listened to the candidates and the issues. Seems like I've heard it all before.

"But, then I say, 'Watch yourself Horace. Remember, there's always something new!' "

That man has learned the secret of staying young. He has an eager and questing mind. He knows that he must not give in to retrospection for fear that he will give up perception.

One of the few time balls still in operation anywhere in the world is located atop the Titanic Tower at the Seaman's Church Institute, an affiliated agency of the Diocese in downtown Manhattan.

Time balls were popular in the days before radio time signals came into use. They were usually placed at strategic points overlooking seaports. At noon each day, when the balls dropped, the seamen would check their ships' chronometers.

The Seamen's Church Institute time ball has been in operation since November, 1913. It is raised to the top of the pole by a hand windlass five minutes before the hour and held there by an electro-magnet. Then, at exactly noon, an electrical impulse transmitted from the U. S. Naval Observatory in Washington, D. C., triggers the drop. ■

That Man in Ossining Has an Idea . . .

Getting the congregation into the act is something of a challenge for all church bulletins. The Rev. James J. Sharkey, St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining, has found a way.

In The Spire, published monthly, he has instituted a feature which he calls "Prayer Book Search." The "search" consists of a phrase or a few lines from the Prayer Book. The readers try to find the page where these lines appear. For the first correct answer from his congregation, Fr. Sharkey offers a modest prize.

For instance, it might work this way: See if you can find the page containing these words: Constantly speak the truth, boldly rebuke vice, and patiently suffer for the truth's sake . . . "

This is pretty easy. The Bulletin will present a useful little prize to the first reader sending in the correct answer. Address your post card or letter to Editor, The Bulletin, 1047 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, 25. Sorry, but the clergy are not eligible to enter this one. ■

Diocesan ECW Event to Feature Day's Visit at United Nations

Episcopal Churchwomen will hold a diocesan event on Tuesday, April 2 —a visit to the United Nations.

Members of ECW branches in all seven convocations will meet at the UN headquarters at 11 A. M. They will lunch in the delegates' dining room, tour the buildings and then gather for an afternoon session in the Carnegie International Center.

Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, who represented the United States on the UN Commission on Human Rights from 1953 to 1961, will be guest speaker. Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., Diocesan President, will conduct the business meeting.

Mrs. Lord has been active in international affairs since 1947, when she was named a member of the United States Committee for UNICEF, the UN Children's Fund. At UN request, she toured most of Europe and Latin America to study and report on child welfare efforts. She also has travelled widely in the Far East. During World War II, she was chairman of the National War Fund Advisory Committee on Women's Participation; and she served as an Assistant Regional Director of the Office of Civilian Defense. She was for a time chairman of the National Civilian Advisory Committee of the Women's Army Corps.

A cum laude graduate of Smith College, she also holds many honorary degrees and serves on various boards of directors of organizations international in scope.

The day's trip will climax the Churchwomen's current emphasis on "Persons of Special Need," which is the theme this year within a three-year topic: "Ministry of the Laity."

There will be a $1 charge for the UN tour. Luncheon will be served a la carte with prices starting at $2. Departure time from the UN will be approximately 3 P. M.

Mrs. Robert DeF. Boomer, chairman of diocesan meetings, is in charge of arrangements. She is being assisted by these convocation chairmen: Miss Marion Wheeler, Bronx; Mrs. C. Howard Ellis, Dutchess; Mrs. H. John Wilkins, Jr., Hudson; Miss Marie Doremus, Manhattan; Mrs. Herbert O'Hare, Ramapo; Mrs. Hartley LeH. Smith, Richmond; Mrs. Fenton B. Neal, Jr., Westchester.

New Center Recalls an Old Pupil

Miss Emilie Robertson, a retired teacher who is 95 years old and lives at the Field Home, Peekskill, feels that she has a personal interest in the new Episcopal Church Center at Second Avenue and Forty-third Street.

She has a good reason. One of her former students is its architect.

The acquaintance goes back more than 50 years to days when Miss Robertson's classes were held daily on the top floor of an elegant old Peekskill mansion. One of the youngsters was J. F. Woodbridge, now a consulting architect for Columbia University and a member of Adams and Woodbridge, the firm which designed the new Church Center.

In the course of time, Miss Robertson went to live in Florida and young Woodbridge grew up. For many years later their paths did not cross. But recently, at a reception, Mr. Woodbridge met an old friend who said he was going to see a lady of 95. She was bright, spry and vivacious, this friend said, and he thought Mr. Woodbridge might know her—Miss Emilie Robertson.

Mr. Woodbridge certainly did know her. "She was a good teacher," he declared, pulling out of his pocket a small sketch of the proposed Episcopal Center. Addressing it to her, he wrote: "See what you started!"

Soon, back came a letter in the most exquisite handwriting imaginable. Miss Robertson was so glad to hear from him after all these years, and she was so proud!

Some time later, the architect discovered that out of her small means Miss Robertson had sent a $5 contribution to National Council for the building fund. He said with feeling, "She's just the sort of person who'd do a thing like that!" ■

Dr. Morehouse Speaks At Altar Guild Event

Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies of the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, was the speaker for the Hadden Memorial Lecture given by the New York Altar Guild, March 7 at the Cathedral.

The lecture is an annual event sponsored by the Altar Guild, of which Mrs. John Heuss is president. Dr. Morehouse, who returned recently from a visit to the Philippine Independent Church, described some of the problems and achievements of this new body with which General Convention of 1961 adopted a concordat of full communion. ■

The Bishop's Message

The season of Lent has begun. Too often Lent means little more than a time of extra services and visiting preachers; a time when we are asked to give up things, and adopt a rule of life for the disciplining of ourselves. These things are certainly part of the observance of Lent and not without value, and if we are wise we shall not disregard them, but they do not really go to the root of the matter.

In the beginning Lent was set aside for the instruction of the candidates for Baptism who would be baptized at Easter, the greatest feast of the Christian year. Later on it became accepted that every member of the Church should mark this season with the same fasting, study, prayer and penitence as that appropriate to the converts from paganism.

Lent is given to us as a time for spiritual training. Even as "spring-training" is familiar in the world of sports, so is Lent the time when athletes of God get their souls "in condition." This means prayer, self-examination, repentance, meditation, and reading according to a definite rule of life. And let us remember that repentance is not simply a matter of being sorry for our sins but a resolute turning away from them to God whose forgiveness and grace enable us to change the direction of our lives and make a new start.

We ought not to regard Lent as a dreary, melancholy ordeal to be endured, but rather as a time of great spiritual opportunity—a time when we are willing to allow God to make our lives new in such a way that we may become better Christians, more useful to Our Lord and his Church in this present world.

Let us use the holy Season not only as a time for outward observances, but also as a season of sober reflection in which we search our hearts; a season in which we take time to look within ourselves and honestly face up to what we find there. The words of the Psalmist ought to be our watchword during these forty days, "Make me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

Lent looks inward; let us be a real part of it. Then this season will be for us the rich, rewarding experience it is intended to be, a time of moral renewal and of spiritual refreshment to our soul.

Parish Quota Payments Top $1,000,000

For the first time in its 178-year history, payments to the Diocese by its congregations on their Missionary Quota exceeded a million dollars. All but 2 congregations contributed to the total of $1,001,192.

Despite the record receipts, the amount is still short of the objective ($1,224,298) by 18 per cent. This has forced curtailment of both the National Council and the Diocesan programs.

The number of congregations which overpaid their quotas increased to 43 in 1962; this compares with 38 in 1961 and 31 in 1960. The Diocesan Treasurer's office reported an encouraging increase in the number of congregations paying their quotas on a monthly basis, thereby helping the Diocese to operate on a current basis.

Bishop Opens New Center On West Side

West 84th Street, Manhattan, the neighborhood for which the Rev. James A. Gusweller fought his notable housing battle, has dedicated a new landmark.

It is the Community Center of the Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, a $200,000 modern, two-story structure. It replaces two old brownstone houses in use for the past six years as the neighborhood rallying place.

Bishop Donegan dedicated the Center on Sunday, January 13, at services attended by an estimated 400 people. The following Thursday, 800 jammed the new building for an official open house.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller was the main speaker. He was accompanied by James Gaynor, Commissioner of the State Division on Housing and Community Renewal, and Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz, an old friend of West 84th Street, inasmuch as it was his office that lent so much support in the church's neighborhood improvement campaign.

Commissioner Gaynor announced that henceforth the state would require the mayor of New York City to provide police protection for public housing into which state funds have been invested. Bishop Donegan spoke and offered the invocation. After the speeches, letters of greeting from the Presiding Bishop and Senator Jacob Javits were read. Coffee, punch, sandwiches, cake and cookies were served to the throngs, from all walks of life, who attended the reception.

The Community Center dedication culminated years of effort at St. Matthew and St. Timothy to be a real source of strength in the neighborhood. Father Gusweller pointed out that, "For many years, 84th Street was considered the worst Street in New York City. It was selected as the subject for many newspaper articles by a crusading reporter who spent days and nights in the block to focus attention on its critical problems."

"Much of what was so wrong on West 84th Street has now been corrected," Fr. Gusweller said, "but in the process of redevelopment many people have been forced to leave the area and begin life in other parts of the city. It is our hope that the West Side will be restored, so that these people may come back and find decent housing and a community conducive to raising children.

"Our new center will continue to serve people and to offer a fellowship to the needy and oppressed. The new building will enable us to expand the work. It is very beautiful, and it is a symbol for this neighborhood of a better way of life."

The center contains classrooms and a gymnasium in the basement, a library, nursery, meeting room and housing clinic offices on the first floor, and a rectory and conference room on the second floor. Many churches and individuals, including 1,000 persons in the 84th Street neighborhood, contributed to the fund drive for the structure. The Episcopal Churchwomen gave $50,000 from their national United Thank Offering. The diocesan ECW Department of Supply gave $500 toward furnishing a lounge. ■

Clergy Try Unity Effort — It Works

The Clergy Club of Staten Island tried an ecumenical experiment recently — and it worked.

For the first time within memory, a Roman Catholic priest was the featured luncheon speaker and both Protestant and Roman clergy were in the audience. The guest was the Rev. Florence D. Cohalan, Professor of History at Cathedral College, Manhattan. He spoke on the aims of the Vatican Council. The luncheon was held at Wagner College. More than 20 of the 54 clergymen present were Roman Catholic.

The program was arranged by the Rev. Robert W. Renouf, club president, with the cooperation of the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Gustav J. Schultheiss, Pastor of St. Peter's Church and Associate Dean of the Staten Island Roman Catholic clergy. Father Renouf is Rector of St. Alban's Episcopal Church.

Father Renouf commented, "This is the first time we've had anything like this on Staten Island, and we feel it was extremely worth while."

The Clergy Club was meant to be truly interdenominational, but over the years it hasn't worked out that way, Father Renouf explained. He said the club hopes to develop into a group whose members meet not because they are in agreement on theology of liturgy, but so they can get to know each other, including their differences. ■

Contest Winner

The winner of last month's Prayer Book Search is Miss Carolyn Voss of 205 East 69th Street, Manhattan. She is 18 years old, a senior at the Dalton School, and a Communicant of St. James'.

The Bulletin's prize, an enameled cross, will go to Miss Voss for being the first layman to identify correctly the phrase Constantly speak the truth, boldly rebuke vice, and patiently suffer for the truth's sake . . . It is on page 242 of the Prayer Book, the Collect for Saint John Baptist. Up to press time, 30 readers had entered the contest.

Clergy Changes

The Rev. Messrs. Kenneth R. Waldron, from rector, Trinity, Mount Vernon, to chaplain, New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, Orange County Farm and Middletown State Hospital; Paul E. Parker, from rector, St. Simon's, Staten Island, to rector, Ascension, West Park and Trinity, Highland; James B. Jeffrey, from assistant minister, Incarnation, Manhattan, to rector, St. Luke's, Eastchester.

Also, the Rev. Messrs. Edward F. G. Walker, from assistant minister, Incarnation Chapel, Manhattan, to rector, Grace, Port Jervis; John D. Chequer, resigns as vicar, St. Francis, Elmsford; Albert E. Snyder, from assistant minister, Grace, White Plains, to chaplain, Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society; William Porkess, resigns as chaplain, Home for Old Men and Aged Couples; the Rt. Rev. Benjamin Washburn, becomes locum tenens, St. Matthew's, Bedford.

ELNY Elects New Officers In All Seven Convocations

The Episcopal Laymen of New York has elected new officers in all seven Convocation Councils. These Councils and the newly formed diocesan board will now plan another year's events for this comparatively new men's organization.

ELNY was established in January, 1960, by Bishop Donegan to " . . . be of assistance to parishes and missions as they attempt to challenge laymen to greater response to Our Lord's direction and to the Church's need for an intensified Ministry of the Laity . . . " Each year several events have been held within each convocation, and there has been one diocesan event.

The diocesan event for 1963 will be a conference on Saturday, May 11, at West Point. The program will include Holy Communion in the Cadet Chapel, luncheon at the Hotel Thayer, and an address and discussion of "The Church's Attitude Toward War and Peace." All Episcopal laymen are invited to attend.

Those elected as Convocation Council officers are:

Staten Island — Harry La Quier, president; Francis Prusack, vice president; Leslie Shepard, secretary-treasurer; Eugene Byrd, diocesan board representative.

Manhattan — Rexford Slauson, president; Roy Jackson, vice-president; Joseph Dunham, secretary; Carlos Munoz, diocesan board representative.

Bronx — Hemphill Crosbie, president; Charles Pratt, vice-president; Earl Milliken, secretary-treasurer; Edward McEwen, diocesan board representative.

Westchester — Henry Euler, president; James Barns, vice president; H. P. Holdt, secretary-treasurer; Dr. Robert Hockett, diocesan board representative.

Dutchess — J. Thomas McComb, president; John Pinney, vice president; Julian Carter, secretary; Robert R. Raymond, Jr., diocesan board representative.

Ramapo—Richard O. Beman, president; Arthur Engel, vice president; H. Cole Hatchard, secretary-treasurer; Richard Wade, diocesan board representative.

Hudson—Clinton Roosa, president; Albert S. MacDowell, vice president; J. Stanley Meers, secretary-treasurer; Earl H. Houghtaling, Jr., diocesan board representative.

The Diocesan Board consists of the seven representatives named above and the following 12 men appointed by Bishop Donegan:

Godfrey de Castro, Manhattan, and Andrew B. Jones, Westchester, named from among delegates to Convention; Arthur Sauter, Ramapo, and Alexander Brown, Dutchess, from among licensed lay readers; and John Murphy of the Bronx, William Stringfellow of Manhattan, Henry deRham of Manhattan and Harry Moore of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, delegates at large; and the Rev. Alfred Whisler, Dutchess; the Rev. George Regas, Ramapo; the Rev. John Wells, Bronx; and the Rev. Bernard Hemsley, Staten Island.

Last year ELNY events throughout the Diocese included a George Washington's Birthday corporate Communion in Richmond, a School of Religion in Dutchess, a picnic-discussion in Hudson and an Advent School of Worship in the Bronx. Laymen from Westchester held a seminar at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, and those from Manhattan sponsored a quiet day at the Conference Center. Recurring questions in several of the convocations throughout the year were these: What are the more serious temptations confronting a Christian in his work? How can he deal with them? What do you do when facing decisions about situations that conflict with religious and ethical standards? Do most people understand the Christian faith in terms of personal commitment? If not, why not? ■

Where Did the Missionary Quota Dollars Go?

What happened to the $1,001,192 paid on their Quota by the congregations in the Diocese? Well, first we gave $1.27 to the National Council for each $1.00 the Diocese spent on its own program. This amounted to $560,668 — or 56% of the total; it was used for the work of the General Church at home and abroad.

The next largest amount was for our own diocesan missions and aided parishes, of which there are 40; This took $259,909, or 26%, of the total. The balance of $180,615, or 18% went for the work of other departments and agencies of the Diocese, as shown on the chart.

Citizens Asked to Assist Planning Agency

The Regional Plan Association is asking citizens to help plan the type of community they want to live in 25 years from now. It's called "Goals for the Region Project."

Episcopalians in the Diocese of New York have specifically been invited to help. Here's what will happen:

- Study groups of 5 to 15 persons will be formed.
- On four Tuesday nights in April, and one in May, these groups will watch a half-hour television program, discuss what they have seen, and then complete questionnaires.

The questionnaires will be analysed to gauge a pattern of preference for the kind of places in which people want to live, work, shop and play in the future.

It is the first time a planning agency has attempted anything like this on such a large scale. It is an unprecedented chance for citizens to plan their future community. Experts predict that by 1985 there will be 6 million more people in the metropolitan area (22 counties in three states with New York City as the core.) Where will they all live and work? How much countryside will be bulldozed to make room? What will our daily lives be like if present trends continue?

The point of the research is that if people don't like what is happening, they can change it. If they do, they can encourage present trends.

Every clergyman in the Diocese, as a joint project of the Departments of Missions and Christian Social Relations, has been sent complete details about the project. Readers of The Bulletin who wish to participate should call their parish office as soon as possible. The study begins April 2, from 8:30 to 10:30 P. M. ■

SCI Entertains Seaman Receiving 'Lucky' Box

The "lucky seaman" at Seamen's Church Institute has had his day "on the town."

The seaman, Harold J. Murphy, 35, of Oceanside, L. I., was the recipient of the 150,000th Christmas box distributed by the SCI Women's Council. For 20 years the Council has been putting boxes aboard ships that are at sea on Christmas. Seamen's Church Institute is an affiliated organization of the Diocese of New York.

When Seaman Murphy opened his Christmas package, it contained a golden key and an invitation to be the guest of the Women's Council when he returned to New York. His ship operates between the United States and France.

At the anticipated luncheon a month later, the Rev. John M. Mulligan, SCI Director, announced that Mr. Murphy and his wife, Mary, would be treated to a "day on the town," including tickets for a Broadway musical and a night at the Plaza. The children—the Murphys have three—would be taken over by a baby sitter for the day. Seaman Murphy, an ex-policeman, serves with the Military Sea Transportation Service.

The Women's Council consists of more than 2,000 volunteers from all over the country who knit woolen articles of clothing throughout the year to be placed with other gifts in the Christmas boxes. These go aboard ships, to military hospitals, and into the 800 rooms of Seamen's Church Institute for men who are alone during the holidays. ■

St. Luke's Clergy Had a Good Idea But Something Went Wrong . . .

The clergy at St. Luke's Chapel of Trinity Parish feel a little like the housewife who prepared a banquet—and only a few people came!

The Chapel prepared "Three Months of Sundays"—a program every Sunday at 8:15 P. M. during January, February and March on some contemporary topic of popular interest, with speakers well versed in their fields.

For instance, the series started on January 6 with Edward T. Koehler, principal of the High School of Performing Arts, speaking on "Education in the Public Schools." On January 13, the Rev. James Lloyd, a Paulist Father, discussed "A Roman Catholic View of Reunion and Reform." Charles Mountain of CBS Television presented an off-the-record critique of "Television Looks at the Community" on January 20. On January 27 and February 3, the Rev. C. H. D. Brown explored possible changes in the Eucharistic Liturgy of the Episcopal Church.

With extreme disappointment, the Rev. Wilbur C. Leach told The Bulletin that attendance through the beginning of February was considerably below expectations. "I thought people would at least be interested in television," he said. But only 25 or so came to hear Mr. Mountain. Some 35 persons attended each of the talks by Father Brown. Father Lloyd attracted the largest audience to date—50 people.

About three years ago the Chapel held a similar series and it averaged an attendance of 75 or more, Father Leach said. The publicity at that time—newspapers, posters and announcements—was about the same as this year. So why that venture was more successful, Father Leach said he is at a loss to know. He also told The Bulletin that he was perfectly willing to tell his disappointing story because he felt it might help other parishes. And there also might be a parish which has been through this sort of experience and has discovered some of the answers.

To keep the record complete, these were the programs on February 10, 17, 24, and March 3, for which attendance results were not available by press time:

The Rev. Alexander Schmemann, Dean of St. Vladimir's Orthodox Seminary, "A Russion Orthodox View of the Virgin Mary"; Clifford L. Clark, organist and choirmaster, "Liturgical Music"; Curtis Roosevelt, Executive Director, U. S. Committee for the United Nations, "The 'Rights' and 'Wrongs' of Politics"; William O. Miller of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, "What About Madison Avenue?"

And these are the programs still to be held:

March 10—Dr. Lee Belford, New York University, "Christians and Jews."

March 17—Mrs. Peter Manjos, rehabilitation counselor, "Organized Religion and the Handicapped: Debits and Credits."

March 24—Mr. George B., "The Work of Alcoholics Anonymous."

March 31—Panel discussion, "Divorced Persons Speak Out," moderated by the Rev. Francis Voelcker. ■

Ex-warden Decries Capital Punishment

The threat of the death penalty is no deterrent to capital crimes, a former warden of San Quentin prison, declared on the radio program Viewpoint.

Clinton T. Duffy, who was in prison work for 32 years, appeared on the 15-minute program produced by the Division of Radio and Television, National Council of the Episcopal Church.

Warden Duffy said he does not believe in the death penalty, "because I don't think it's a deterrent."

He said there is no noticeable difference in the homicide rates of states that do not have the death penalty and those that do. "I don't think it answers any of the questions we think it should. The man never thinks of the death penalty at the time of the commission of his act," the ex-warden asserted. "I've asked everybody on Condemned Row that question, and not one said he thought of the death penalty—so it's not a deterrent there."

He also declared that, "We, as the State, should not be the ones to say that we are allowed to kill legally."

Continuing, Mr. Duffy said, "I have never known a wealthy man or woman who has been executed—meaning that if you have money to hire competent attorneys, a lot of research and help can be given to the man facing court that way." In his view, "it's just not the right thing . . . There are hundreds and hundreds of men who get lesser sentences, and it's not equal justice at all."

Said Warden Duffy: "I would like to see the death penalty eliminated throughout the whole United States and the world."

He contended further that, "Confinement itself is punishment. And from the moment a prisoner, man or woman, enters a prison gate, every effort must be made to make him a better citizen, a better individual. Both the prisoner and the prison staff work at this effort—through educational programs, counseling—and it often pays off, Warden Duffy said.

"Ninety-seven per cent of all people who came to prison are eventually released. About three per cent die in prison," he reported. "And in California," he added, "better than 65 per cent of all the men who leave our penitentiaries make good." About one-third return, and approximately one-half of that one-third—about 17 per cent—are technical parole violations, not new crimes, Warden Duffy said.

The program was moderated by the Rev. Dana F. Kennedy. It features a series of prominent personalities and their viewpoints in various fields. The program is carried on WOR in this area.

Speakers on capital punishment are available through the Diocesan Speakers Bureau, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., N. Y. C. UN 5-3617. ■

The Church's Stand

IN 1958, General Convention adopted a resolution opposing capital punishment. It read: "Inasmuch as the individual life is of infinite worth in the sight of Almighty God; and Whereas the taking of this human life falls within the providence of Almighty God and not within the right of man; therefore be it Resolved . . . that the General Convention goes on record as opposed to capital punishment."

In 1960, the Convention of the Diocese of New York endorsed this action taken by the representative legislative body of the National Church and voted to seek legislative action in New York State to bring about the abolition of capital punishment here.

Feeling that a broad grassroots opposition would be the most effective, the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations has taken a number of steps since that time. The Rev. Stephen J. Chinlund has appeared as Department representative at a number of hearings. On several occasions the Department has alerted clergy to the fact that executions were scheduled to take place. They, in turn, have sent letters and telegrams to the Governor and other state officials, and have encouraged their parishioners to do likewise. In addition, the Department itself as well as diocesan officials have sent telegrams and letters to urge the Governor to commute death sentences. The Department also has arranged memberships in the New York State Association for the Abolition of Capital Punishment for key clergy throughout the Diocese.

The Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center is at Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Church groups wishing to meet there may call the manager, Mrs. Carolyn Beattie, at ELmwood 1-4651.

These groups are scheduled to meet during the next month:

Clergy Conference, Diocese of New York, March 7-8.

United Church Board for Homeland Ministries, March 11-15.

Clergy Conference, Diocese of New York, March 21-22.

First Presbyterian Church, Englewood, N. J. March 23.

Clergy Conference, Diocese of New York, March 28-29.

Clergy Conference, Diocese of New York, April 4-5. ■

Over-60 Vacation Lodge Plans Two Camp Periods

The Summer vacation program for people over sixty has aroused such interest that two camping periods are planned this year instead of only one.

They will run from June 10 through 21, and from September 3 through 14.

Formally known as the Vacation Lodge for Older Adults, near Ivoryton, Conn., the program is sponsored by the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation, All Angels' Church, Grace Church, St. Thomas' Chapel, the Girls' Friendly Society and the Services for the Aged of the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations.

Last year, during a 10-day camping period, 35 men and women aged 60 to well past 80 had the time of their lives in the 500-acre property located in the foothills of the Berkshires on a private lake. They walked along country lanes, swam, fished, rowed, and gathered in the large recreation room at the lodge for songfests, discussion groups, games, handcrafts, dancing, costume parties, and just plain conversation. They took several bus trips to places of interest. A chaplain is a member of the staff.

The lodge includes single and double rooms, dining rooms, three screened porches with armchairs and rockers, and a community room with a large open fireplace. A regular nurse is on staff and doctors are on 24-hour call.

Anyone wishing to apply, or to obtain further information, should write to Andrew Katsanis, Director, Incarnation Church Camp, 240 East 31st Street, New York, 16, N. Y., or Miss Esther Stamats, Consultant and Advisor, c/o Diocese of New York, 1047 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, 25, N. Y. The fee per person is $60 for each session. Financial assistance is available on a sliding scale. The amount is determined in a personal interview with the Director.

All campers must be in good health.

The Vacation Lodge was started last year as an experiment. The Episcopal Church has many camping facilities for children and young adults in this Diocese, but older people never before were offered this sort of opportunity. According to Mr. Katsanis and Miss Stamats, it was recognized that older people of similar interest all too often miss the opportunity of friendship because of shyness and hesitancy. The Vacation Lodge was meant to be a way of passing those barriers.

Mr. Katsanis and Miss Stamats said: "The natural setting seemed to break down the walls that enclose all of us in our city lives, and these adults found a release that they feared no longer existed. People always think of 'doing something' for the senior members of their families and seldom achieve success. But basically the answer is simple—a camp experience will give older people a chance to be on their own with others of similar tastes and interests."

They also pointed out that, "It is no secret what even a brief vacation can cost these days. Therefore, it is easily understood that the program at Vacation Lodge is only possible because of the generous contributions of individuals and organizations concerned about the members of the sixty-plus group. These quiet supporters make it possible for the Camp to offer a program impossible in another situation. ■

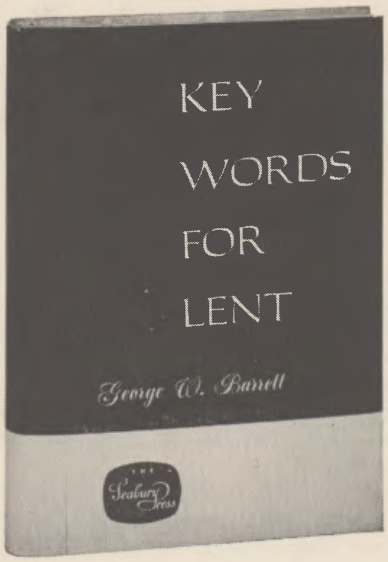
SUGGESTED LENTEN READING



"KEY WORDS FOR LENT"

by

GEORGE W. BARRETT

Rector of Christ Church
Bronxville, New York

Dr. Barrett examines words that have grown stale with repeated use and restores Christian meaning to such words as "repentance", "obedience", "commitment", "grace", "suffering", and "freedom". In this way he enables the reader to understand better the purpose of Lent.

The closing section of "Key Words for Lent" is a group of meditations for Good Friday, based on scripture lessons from the Old Testament, the Apochrypha, and the New Testament as customarily assigned for Good Friday reading.

The Church in the City

Several weeks ago more than 100 bishops, archdeacons, city-parish clergy and laymen in dioceses from Maine to Washington, D. C., got up at the crack of dawn and headed for one of the most unusual—and exhausting—conferences they had ever attended.

It was the Conference on Metropolitan Planning, sponsored by the Home Department of the National Council at the George Washington Hotel in New York City. It lasted for three days, from 7:30 A. M. to 9 P. M., with time out only for meals.

During those three days all the bishops, clergy and laymen became citizens of Metabagdad, a metropolitan area made up of two cities and assorted suburbs, sprawled over two states, separated by a river, and located in two dioceses, with a present population of 825,000, but expected to be 1,500,000 by 1980. True, Metabagdad was a "mythical" city, but its problems were those of every American metropolis today.

The participants were handed a large bundle of maps, sociological reports, newspaper clippings, church council survey analyses, and a Planning Association report, and told to get familiar with Metabagdad and its 25 Episcopal churches. Their assignment was to tackle the problems of the Church in the city in terms of its real relevance to human beings. Some of the problems sounded strikingly familiar:

• A city administration has been taking a get-tough attitude with its welfare program, especially aid to dependent children. The newspapers have been doing "case histories" of individuals who suffered as a result of the crackdown. What action does the Church take in this situation?

• The municipal hospital facilities are in very bad shape. But the Episcopal Hospital moved to a more upper-income suburb; so have a group of doctors; a new medical center has been built near the university in the suburbs. What responsibility has the Church in this situation, especially for the poor people?

• Because of automation, many of the former manufacturing processes require fewer workers. Many people have become permanently unemployed. Furthermore, new industrial growth requires new and special skills which the unemployed do not possess. Given a particular parish, one in a lower middle-class neighborhood, for instance, whose communicants are largely a minority group, what does the Church do?

These are only three samples of Metabagdad's problems. Other quandaries, injustices and inequities involved questions like where to put a new highway, what to do about a developing Black Muslim movement, a pending strike that will put 12,000 out of work, a sub-standard school system, a proposal for middle-income apartments committed to a policy of open occupancy, but opposed by some leaders because "we must be doing all we can to reserve open spaces in our community."

There were a few formal addresses. Dr. William Johnson, Professor of Ethics and Doctrine at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., discussed "The Modern Cultural Milieu in Theological Perspective." In his talk he grappled with modern notions such as "God is dead," the negative influences of too much soap-box piety, the Church's institutional irrelevancy, and its difficulty in judging culture because it has become so deeply enmeshed in that culture.

There was also Calvin Hamilton, Pittsburgh, Pa., city planner, who spoke on "A City Planner Looks at the Exploding Metropolis," and the Rt. Rev. Daniel Corrigan, Director of the Home Department, who discussed "What Does the Episcopal Church Look Like?"

Participants from the Diocese of New York rated the talks as "some of the finest conference addresses we've heard." They also applauded National Council's decision to make the three-day affair a forum where the depth and complexity of urban problems could be explored rather than attempt to create a reservoir for answers.

Attending from New York were Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore, Archdeacon Richard McEvoy, who is in charge of diocesan missionary work in the city; Archdeacon George E. Brätt, in charge of rural and suburban missions; the Rev. Clifford Lauder, Rector of All Souls' Church, Manhattan; and the Rev. Richard Gary, Priest-in-Charge of St. Mary's, Manhattanville.

New York has, of course, been a pioneer in the field of urban missionary work. (See THE CHALLENGE OF THE URBAN FRONTIER, January, 1963, Bulletin.). But the National Council conference did two things, the New York representatives reported. It tossed the gauntlet to dioceses in areas which are just beginning to recognize the symptoms of urban crisis, and it served to assure dioceses like New York that they are on the right track. It was apparent that easy answers and quick results in the city are impossible.

Here's the AMAZING New Hospitalization Plan Folks Everywhere Are Talking About

This unique plan for non-drinkers pays you $100.00 cash (tax free) for every week you are in the hospital . . . from the very first day . . . even for life!

Here's a plan that gives you peace of mind and freedom from money worries when sickness or accident strikes. The Gold Star Policy will pay you $100.00 weekly, from your first day in the hospital, even for life!

GOLD STAR REWARDS NON-DRINKERS

If you are carrying ordinary hospitalization, you are naturally helping to pay for the accidents, illnesses, and hospital bills of drinkers. Alcoholism is our nation's No. 3 health problem, ranking immediately behind heart disease and cancer.

Statistics show that those who drink are sick more often, and for longer periods, than those who don't drink. Until now, your insurance cost as much as theirs. Now, with rates based on the superior health records of non-drinkers, Gold Star rewards you instead of penalizing you for not drinking, by offering you lower premiums.

Remember, one person in every two families will be hospitalized this year. A sudden fall, a spell of illness, or an operation could put you or one of your loved ones in the hospital for weeks, perhaps months, and could cost you hundreds, even thousands of dollars.

CAN YOU AFFORD TO BE SICK?

Can you afford a long siege in the hospital, with costly but necessary doctors' bills, expensive drugs and medicines? Many people lose their savings, their cars, and even their homes trying to meet these ever-increasing costs. Don't take chances with your financial security, your future. Remember—once the doctor says it's your turn to enter the hospital, it's too late to buy coverage at any price!

LIFE PROTECTION—NO AGE LIMIT

Your Gold Star Policy can never be cancelled by the company, no matter how long or how often you are sick. Your protection is guaranteed for life. Only you can cancel. And the present low rate can never be raised as you grow older, or have too many claims, unless there is a general rate adjustment up or down for all policyholders!

Why not get the peace of mind and freedom from worry this amazing low-cost hospitalization plan offers? Send the coupon now for full information by mail. No salesman will call on you, now or ever. Since there's no obligation, why delay?

COMPARE THESE GUARANTEED BENEFITS:

- NO AGE LIMIT. Same liberal benefits whether you are 1 or 100!
- GUARANTEED RENEWABLE. Only YOU can cancel your policy. Your protection continues as long as you live!
- NO WAITING PERIODS. Full benefits go into effect noon of the day your policy is issued. And Gold Star pays from the very first day you enter the hospital.
- NO SALESMAN WILL CALL. Policy is mailed to your home. Claim checks are sent air mail special delivery, directly to you, and can be used for rent, food, hospital, doctor bills—any purpose you wish!
- GOOD ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD. Gold Star has satisfied policyholders in all 50 states and in many foreign countries.
- YOU PAY ONLY FOR PROTECTION. No policy fees; no enrollment fees; no membership dues!

ADDITIONAL GOLD STAR BENEFITS

Pays $2000.00 cash for accidental death. Pays $2000.00 cash for accidental loss of one hand, or one foot, or sight of one eye. Pays $6000.00 cash for accidental loss of both hands, or both feet, or sight of both eyes.

ONLY CONDITIONS NOT COVERED

Every kind of sickness and accident is covered, except hospitalization caused by use of alcoholic beverages or narcotics, preexisting conditions, mental or nervous disorders, any act of war, or pregnancy. Everything else IS covered!

OUTSTANDING LEADERS SAY:

THE REV. CANON ALBERT J. duBOIS, Executive Director, The American Church Union: "The low cost plan which DeMoss Associates has introduced seems to have real merit. As non-drinkers are considered less of an insurance risk than those who use alcoholic beverages, it seems fair for special insurance rates reflecting the savings to be made available to those who qualify."

THE REV. DR. SAMUEL SHOEMAKER, Rector Emeritus, Calvary Episcopal Church, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania: "At last someone has come along with a practical, low-cost hospitalization insurance plan for non-drinkers. There has been a preferential rate for auto-drivers who don't drink, so why not a hospitalization insurance for those who do not indulge? The Gold Star has my blessing."

JEROME HINES, leading bass with the Metropolitan Opera Company: "The non-drinker is a better risk and should be entitled to a better insurance rate. I am most happy to recommend this low cost Gold Star Policy. It should prove to be a real help and blessing to all who can qualify."

Gold Star is the only hospitalization plan recommended and endorsed by over fifty nationally known leaders!

Happy Policyholders Write:

Mrs. N. L. Kolb, Rochester, New York: "I am most grateful for the hospitalization I received through the DeMoss service to non-drinkers. It was the only insurance I found covering my age of 86 years. Almost before the ink was dry on my policy, I fell, cracked a bone in my leg, and received payment for every day I was in the hospital."

Mrs. Adaline T. Hall, Treadwell, New York: "Thank you again for the second draft. This is beyond my hopes. Little did I expect to use it so soon, but sickness is no respecter of persons. God Bless you and all your staff of workers."

L. Newton Hayes, Plattsburgh, New York: "Thank you for your very prompt payment of the claim for Mrs. Hayes' accident. Your Gold Star Policies deserve widespread and enthusiastic requests for coverage from those qualified to enjoy them."

SEND NO MONEY!

Everyman receives the Holy Communion before approaching death. The scene is from the play to be performed at St. Bartholomew's, Church on March 11, 12 and 13 as a program for Lent.

St. Bartholomew's to Give Medieval Drama 'Everyman'

By popular request, St. Bartholomew's Church is repeating its production of the medieval morality play "Everyman." The drama was given last year during Lent. It will be presented this year, again during Lent, on March 11, 12, and 13 at 8:15 P. M. in the chancel of the Manhattan church.

Although there will be no admission charge and no reserved seats, tickets will be required for each performance. These may be obtained by phoning the church offiice PL 1-1616. There will be an offering, which will go toward the establishment of a fund for the study and development of church drama.

"Everyman" is considered one of the great achievements in English drama. It was written in a period known as the "Dark Ages," but the universality of its message remains unsurpassed in the modern theater. The theme of "Everyman" is that of universal mortality—that every living thing must some day die, and that mankind must come to terms with the fact that every man is held accountable for his life and his actions. The text used at St. Bartholomew's is based on a version printed in London early in the 16th Century.

George Mallonee is director. John High, a professional actor, will repeat the title role he created last year. Special music has been composed and arranged by Jack Ossewaarde, organist and choirmaster at St. Bartholomew's, and it will be sung by the church choir. ■

Friends Plan Memorial for Coke-Jephcott

A memorial service for Dr. Norman Coke-Jephcott will be held at the Cathedral on Sunday, March 17, at 4 P. M. Dr. Coke-Jephcott was Organist and Master of Choristers at the Cathedral for 21 years. He died last March 14 in his sixty-ninth year.

The Winter meeting of the Choir School Alumni Association will be held after the memorial service. Just before this meeting, a specially commissioned oil portrait of Dr. Coke-Jephcott will be dedicated. His portrait will be hung in the rehearsal room at the Choir School, next to that of Miles Farrow, his predecessor.

G. Coerte Voorhees, Headmaster of the Choir School, has announced that alumni and friends who have not shared in the project to obtain Dr. Coke-Jephcott's portrait may still do so by contacting him.

The former Cathedral organist was a composer of international reputation, and was considered one of the world's greatest masters of organ improvisation. He was for 40 years a member of the National Examination Committee of the American Guild of Organists. He served at the Cathedral from 1935 to 1958. ■

Camp Has Places For Apprentices

The Apprentices Program for Camp Leadership Training, developed by the Episcopal City Mission Society, has openings this summer for 12 boys from 16 to 18 years old, and for 12 girls from 15 to 18.

The fee for the nine-week session is $100, but partial or full scholarships are available. Apprentices are campers who have their own program, living quarters, and staff. They divide their time into worship, work, study and recreation periods. About four hours each day is devoted to work assignments.

Prospective apprentices or their families may write to the director of the camping program, Mr. William W. Houtz, 38 Bleecker Street, New York, in N. Y. ■

Art Festival Opens March 22

This year's Festival of Religious Arts at Columbia University will open on March 22 with a choir concert. The singers will be the men and boys' choir of Corpus Christi Church, 121st Street near Broadway.

The Festival of Religious Arts, held each Spring, presents a variety of music and drama programs and exhibits of painting, sculpture, and various forms of the graphic arts. Its purpose is to be a communications medium for religion, through the arts. Although specifically planned for students, all events are open to the general public. This year's Festival will offer approximately a dozen events in March, April and May.

Events planned so far are as follows:

March 22, 8:00 P. M., Earl Hall, Corpus Christi choir concert.

April 9, Noon, St. Paul's Chapel, Program of Jewish Music for Passover.

April 11, 8:30 P. M., St. Paul's Chapel, a play, "The Sign of Jonah."

April 19, 8:00 P. M., Earl Hall, an address by Richard Gilman, drama critic for Commonweal, "Waiting for God in the Modern Theater."

Sponsoring the Festival are the chaplain and religious counselors of Columbia University and the Columbia College Alumni Association. The Rev. William R. Murry, Associate Counselor to Protestant Students at Columbia, and Minister to Students at Riverside Church, is chairman. Also on the planning committee are the Rev. John M. Krumm, Chaplain at Columbia; the Rt. Rev. Msgr. James Rea, Counselor to Roman Catholic Students; and Rabbi Albert Friedlander, Associate Counselor to Jewish Students. ■

. . . in brief

■ A BOOKLET entitled "THE ANGLICAN COMMUNION" has been published by the Parish of Trinity Church. Written by the Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Church, the booklet includes a center-fold map of the world, with the 18 autonomous churches of the Anglican Communion clearly outlined.

Other maps deal with the dioceses in Africa, the continent which Dr. Heuss believes will be "the most promising in the world for the missionary work of the Anglican Church in the next 25 years."

The text of the booklet was originally a sermon delivered by Dr. Heuss.

Copies may be ordered from the Episcopal Center, West Cornwall, Conn., at 12 cents each. Reduced rate for quantity orders.

■ TELEGRAMS and letters to their State representatives are being sent by Episcopal Churchwomen in Westchester in an effort to obtain legislation raising to 21 the legal age for the sale of alcoholic beverages in this state. At its January meeting the ECW executive board asked all members to take this action.

■ CANON William S. Van Meter, Executive Secretary of the Department of Christian Social Relations of the Expiscopal Diocese of Chicago, has become Executive Secretary of the Department of Christian Social Relations, Protestant Council of the city of New York. ■

As a chorister, this boy daily sings to the glory of God and learns to know and love the great music of the Church. During the school year he lives, studies and plays with forty-three other boys in grades 5 - 8.

The school program encourages him to take advantage of the variety of cultural opportunities Manhattan offers. Happy hours are spent in the spacious gymnasium and on reserved playing fields in Central Park.

Two housemothers and a large domestic staff insure his well-being and comfort. He receives a classical and sound education from a faculty composed of eight resident and three part-time teachers, one, his personal advisor. Classes are small, the atmosphere informal and personal. His progress is carefully evaluated through standardized tests. When he graduates from this unique school, he will be well prepared for entrance into a leading preparatory school.

Plan Programs on Cuban Refugees

Does your church want to help resettle a Cuban refugee family?

That is the basic question that the churches of the Diocese will be asked at the Spring convocation meetings on Monday, April 29.

(There are seven convocations — geographical areas — in the Diocese. Each convocation meets in the Spring and Fall. All convocations meet on the same day, though often at different times. See table at right for times and places.)

The program for the Spring meetings will be a presentation of the Cuban refugee situation in Miami and a discussion of what churches of the Diocese of New York can do to help.

The main speaker at each meeting will be someone who has had first-hand experience with Cuban refugees. Most speakers will be from Diocese of Newark parishes which have sponsored resettlement of a Cuban family. Emphasis will be on such practical matters as finding jobs and living quarters, obligations of the sponsoring parish, and what agencies are available to help the sponsor. Liberal time will be left for questions.

60,000 Cuban refugees are in Miami awaiting resettlement.

Many are unaccompanied children, sent here by their parents to avoid compulsory indoctrination in Communism.

The Episcopal Church has resettled 3,000 Cuban refugees.

A parish may resettle a family in its community, providing friendship, help in finding living quarters and employment.

A few days after the convocation meeting, parishes will be asked if they would like to sponsor a family. If the response is sufficient, a special flight will be arranged to bring families to the Diocese for resettlement by individual parishes.

Though the emphasis at the meeting will be on family resettlement, there will be a brief explanation of the Presiding Bishop's emergency appeal for Cuban refugee funds.

CONVENTION WILL CONVENE MAY 14

The Convention of the Diocese of New York will hold its 183rd annual meeting on Tuesday, May 14, in Synod House at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

The Convention, which is the legislative body of the Diocese, meets once a year to act on whatever business is necessary for diocesan operation. Delegates come from the 206 parishes, aided parishes and missions which make up the Diocese. They represent the Diocese's more than 90,000 communicants. Every parish elects three lay delegates, and each mission one. All canonically resident clergy may vote if so resident for six months. retired clergymen may also vote under certain conditions.

Of major interest at every Diocesan Convention is the address of the Bishop. He reports on the affairs of the Diocese and the state of the church in the Diocese. This includes a summary of all his official acts.

As chief pastor of the Diocese, he also speaks out on any matter which he thinks is of concern to the whole Church and sometimes recommends action. The missionary enterprise of the Church is also the Bishop's responsibility. He states the aims and aspiration of the departments of the Council for the ensuing year.

The Council's report of its activities during the past year is given by its secretary, Bishop Boynton, with a detailed report by the chairman of one of the departments.

Often resolutions are proposed recommending social action. These are studied by the Committee on Miscellaneous Business, which then reports its recommendations to the Convention. In the past, for example, the Convention has acted to oppose capital punishment and to favor raising the drinking age to 21.

Although seating facilities in Synod House are limited, visitors are welcome. As in other legislative chambers, they may watch the proceedings from the balcony, where there is room for approximately 300 spectators.

The day will begin with Holy Communion at 8:15 A. M. in the Cathedral with the Bishop as celeaspirations of the departments of brant, followed by breakfast for delegates in Synod House. The business session convenes at 10 A.M.

THE BISHOP'S EASTER MESSAGE

Easter made all the difference to the early disciples. After the tragedy of Good Friday they ran away in fear and disillusionment. Their hopes were shattered — all seemed lost. They had faithfully followed their Master, but when disaster came all but one forsook him and fled. It was not until the disciples came face to face with their risen Lord that they were ready to suffer and, if need be, to die for their faith in Christ "that died, yes, rather that is risen again."

The crucifixion made it seem that God had forsaken his well-beloved son. The resurrection was God's reply to the cry from the cross, "Why hast Thou forsaken me?" It was God's vindication of Jesus. Behind the resurrection stands the God who was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. By raising Jesus from the dead God gave the pledge of eternal life to all who believe in his only-begotten Son and the assurance of victory over pain, suffering, and death to all who put their trust in him.

As we link our lives with Christ we can share his triumph. But as Archbishop Temple reminded us, "Our share in Christ's victory always depends upon our readiness to share his endurance of life's trials and tribulations," We are as St. Paul says, "joint heirs with Christ if so be that we suffer with him that we may be also glorified together."

"If we endure with him, we shall reign with him

If we die with him, we shall live with him

If we deny him, he will deny us."

Through our worship, and through our communion may God grant us this Eastertide such a vivid awareness of our risen Lord that we will steadfastly endure all things for his sake and for the good of the Church, his mystical body on earth which is the blessed company of all faithful people.

" O God, who givest to us the yearly remembrance of thy dear Son, Jesus Christ who by his death hath destroyed death and by his rising to life again hath restored to us everlasting life; grant to us all we beseech Thee that our hearts being filled with gladness and our lips with songs of joy we may keep the feast with high and holy worship as those who are risen in Christ and who walk in newness of life. Give to us such swift recognition of his presence as came to Mary in the garden, such sense of close compaionship as came to those going to Emmaus, such revelation of his comprehending love as came to his disciples in the upper room at the close of Easter Day. And grant to us so to die daily from sin that we may evermore live with him in the joy of his resurrection who now livest and reignest with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God world without end."

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

When the word "missions" was used in this magazine last December to introduce a series of articles about diocesan departments, someone predicted: People are going to expect a description of the Church's work overseas. That's what people usually mean by "missions.'

But, as we have seen, a mission—a congregation aided by other Christians—can be anywhere. The Diocese's most direct concern is with mission churches in the city, suburbs and rural areas.

At the same time, the Diocese does not limit its concen to its own boundaries. This year, 56 cents out of every dollar paid on the total diocesan quota will go to National Council for work within the United States and overseas. Of this 56 cents, 21 cents will be earmarked for the Overseas Department of National Council. From its headquarters at 815 Second Avenue, New York City, this department carries out a far-flung program in 14 Missionary Districts, including Alaska and Hawaii. The Rt. Rev. John B. Bentley is director of this department, and he is assisted by five men. Around the world, the Church has 519 missionaries, 268 of them Americans appointed by National Council. The balance are appointed locally by the missionary bishop.

The American Church also cooperates with the Anglican Communion, of which it is a member, in serving people in all corners of the world. It helps a number of Churches—such as the Philippine Independent Church—which are not actually members of the Anglican Communion, but with which agreements of cooperation have been made. And the American Church participates increasingly in ecumenical work. Particularly in overseas seminaries, it cooperates with the missionary efforts of various denominations, including the Lutherans, Methodists and Presbyterians.

But to reduce this widely scattered activity to something which may be used as a handy guide, here is a list of the American Church's overseas missions, and a little about what they have done.

BEYOND

is divided into three Missionary Districts: Central Brazil, Southern Brazil and Southwestern Brazil. The country is as large as the United States, plus a second state of Texas. It covers half the South American continent and has a population of 68 million. One of every two South Americans is a Brazilian!

The Brazilian Episcopal Church, Igreja Episcopal Brasileira, was established in 1890 as an independent Anglican organization. It was received into the American Church in 1907 as tthe Missionary District of Southern Brazil. It was divided into three districts in 1949. At present there are several parochial schools, four Boys' Towns, two girls' orphanages, three homes for the aged and several clinics — in addition to its many parishes and missions (see table on page 12.)

"Not a bad showing for 75 years of hard work," comments Canon Howard A. Johnson in his forthcoming book, GLOBAL ODYSSEY, the story of his two-year survey of the Anglican Communion. But, he says, "Our whole effort—fine as it is—is but a drop in the bucket . . ."

The Brazilian Church's future, according to the National Council's Overseas Department, depends upon recruiting and training a national ministry. (Two of its three bishops are Brazilian.) Its major tasks, the Council says, are to increase penetration in areas where the Church has been at work, to achieve complete local self support, and to extend the work to central and northern Brazil, where no work has yet been done.

OUR OWN HORIZONS

formed in 1956 as a Missionary District, consists of five separate nations—Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

Throughout Central America, English-speaking North Americans and Europeans have been the largest group served by the Church. Now, however, efforts are being made to reach the Spanish-speaking population more effectively. All five countries are Spanish in background and culture, and all have a strong sense of nationality. The prediction is that these factors will influence the Church's work more than anything else.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

shares with Haiti the island of Hispaniola, halfway between Cuba and Puerto Rico. Its Episcopal Church, La Iglesia Episcopal Dominicana, is the largest non-Roman church in a predominantly Roman Catholic country. It began about 1897 when British West Indians arrived to work on the sugar plantations. Shortly before World War I, Americans began to come. It became a Missionary District in 1940.

According to the National Council, the major emphasis today is upon a wider Spanish-language ministry. The aim is to develop an indigenous and self-supporting Church.

VIRGIN ISLANDS

became part of the Missionary District of Puerto Rico in 1919, and were constituted as a separate District in 1947. The majority of the population are descendants of slaves, whose ancestors became acquainted with the Church of England because their masters were English planters and businessmen. Today the District's five churches are in its four main cities. Two operate parochial day schools: All Saints' School on St. Thomas was aided by a United Thank Offering some years ago. St. John's School, on St. Croix, moved into new quarters last year, helped in part by a grant from the 1962 Church School Missionary Offering.

CUBA

has been traditionally considered the gateway to the Caribbean. The Episcopal Church is virtually as old as the Island Republic, which was established in 1902, shortly after the Spanish-American War. Cuba became a Missionary District in 1903.

The Church has a strong elementary school program. And in cooperation with other denominations it educates its own clergy. The goal of the Episcopal Church in Cuba is to establish an autonomous, self-supporting Church. Today the Church in Cuba is continuing to function despite political changes. It is totally in the hands of Cuban clergy and lay people, under the leadership of Bishop Romualdo Gonzales-Agueros. Its greatest need is said to be adequate school and church buildings.

LIBERIA

in West Africa, is the oldest Missionary District. The Church began its work there in 1835, shortly after the country was settled as a haven for freed American slaves. Liberia became a Missionary District in 1850. It is one of the best known areas of the Church's work. Cuttington College and the Holy Cross Mission at Bolahun are both justifiably renowned.

Originally, the Church ministered primarily to colonists, but in recent years it has gone into tribal areas. There are 40 village elementary schools, one girls' secondary school (rebuilt in 1955 with United Thank Offering funds), and three high schools. The new Bishop Ferguson High School, Cape Palmas, opened in 1960, was aided by funds from the 1956 Church School Missionary Offering.

St. Augustine's Lays Cornerstone

St. Augustine's Chapel of Trinity Parish has laid the cornerstone for a new parish house. Bishop Boynton officiated at the ceremony, which was followed by a Confirmation service in the Chapel.

The new building is at Henry and Madison Streets, and when finished will form an ell around the present church. The brick building will have a one-story main section and a two-story wing. Its cost was not disclosed.

The structure will provide 17 classrooms for both Sunday and weekday education programs, offices for the Vicar, the Rev. William W. Reed, and the staff of the Lower East Side Mission; staff apartments, a kitchen and a conference room.

The roof, to be flat and finished with quarry tile, will be used for limited recreational activities and for meeting and study groups. Between the building and the street will be trees and benches placed there especially for elderly people of the neighborhood. Adams and Woodbridge, who designed the Episcopal Church Center, National Council's new headquarters, are the architects. ■

Missile Banks Are New

St. George's, Manhattan, has developed something new in the way of Lenten missionary offering banks. "Cardboard offering boxes with drawings of missionaries and native huts no longer suffice to stimulate the imagination of children who idolize spacemen and dream of becoming astronauts," asserts the Rector, the Rev. Edward O. Miller.

So St. George's banks are glistening silver missiles, topped by a sphere representing the universe. Put a coin on the "launching pad," press a button, and up it shoots into the "universe." The banks were donated by an anonymous friend of the church. ■

Nyack Fellowship Holds Debate on Existence of God

Does God exist? Four high school students argued the question before a packed house at Grace Church, Nyack, recently. They used formal debating techniques, and the outcome was determined by a moderator, according to a point system. The decision: God won, 8 to 7.

The Grace Church Youth Fellowship and the Nyack High School Debating Society sponsored the forum. The four taking part, all members of Grace Church, were John Capowski and Becky Conkling, pleading the affirmative, and Betsy Proper and Ronald Lemburger, arguing the negative. E. M. Patnode, faculty advisor of the high school debating society, was the moderator.

The affirmative team had the disadvantage of not being able to marshal proof, admitted the rector, the Rev. George F. Regas. But he said their preparation and eloquence were excellent. The opposition made the most of the fact that no one can offer rational proof. They said, "Man has created God in man's image, since all concept of good and evil are human concepts."

Mr. Patnode explained that a good debater can take either side of an issue, and, depending upon his skill at presentation, can win the debate. ■

Dr. Pollard, Nuclear Studies Director, To Address Laymen's Rally May 11

The Rev. Dr. William G. Pollard, research scientist and Executive Director of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, will address the Episcopal Laymen of New York at its 1963 diocesan rally on Saturday, May 11. All men of the diocese are invited to attend. For reservations, fill in and mail the coupon on this page. The only cost will be for the luncheon.

The conference will be held at West Point, beginning with celebration of Holy Communion at 10:30 A. M. in the Cadet Chapel. Bishop Wetmore will be the celebrant, assisted by Dr. Pollard and Chap- (Lieut. Col.) Gordon Hutchins, Post Chaplain at West Point.

A luncheon at the Hotel Thayer is scheduled for 11:45. At its conclusion, Dr. Pollard will address the rally on "The Church's Attitude Toward War and Peace." Ample opportunity for questions will follow Dr. Pollard's address. The conference is expected to end at 3:00 P. M.

The speaker has been Executive Director of the Oak Ridge Institute since 1947. For nine years he had been professor of physics at the University of Tennessee, his alma mater. The Institute is a non-profit corporation of 39 southern universities. It conducts programs under contract for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and other government agencies.

Dr. Pollard holds a Ph.D. in physics from Rice University, and in 1962 received the Rice semicentennial Medal of Honor for distinction in physics. In 1950, he received the Distinguished Service Award of the Southern Association of Science and Industry. He holds many honorary degrees. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Pollard helped to organize and was a member of the first Board of Directors of the American Nuclear Society. He is a theoretical physicist and has done research in the theory of beta radioactivity, the interaction of molecules with solid surfaces, gaseous diffusion and neutron diffraction.

He was ordained a deacon in 1952 and a priest in 1954. He was formerly a curate at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Oak Ridge, and now is the priest-in-charge of St. Alban's Chapel, Clinton, Tenn., a parochial mission of St. Stephen's. He is a trustee of the University of the South and was a member of the faculty of the Graduate School of Theology in 1956, 1960 and 1961. He was vice chairman of the Joint Commission on the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy of the General Convention of the Episcopal Church (1955-1958). As a result of this Commission's action, the gift of a nuclear research reactor was made by the Episcopal Church to St. Paul's University, Tokyo. Dr. Pollard has written a number of books. The most recent, "Space Age Christianity," was published this year. ■

■ A NEW Armed Forces chairman for the Diocese of New York has been appointed by Bishop Donegan. He is the Rev. Peter Chase, Canon Pastor of the Cathedral. He succeeds Canon West, who was chairman for a number of years.

Washingtonville Gets New Ch

They put up a church and parish house in two days last month at Washingtonville. Though no interior work was undertaken, the two connecting buildings themselves were completed except for roof shingles and minor finishing work.

The new structure was built for St. Anne's, a mission of the Diocese of New York. It's on a five-acre site on the edge of Washingtonville, a small village seven miles from Newburgh.

The parish house and connecting wing were erected on February 7 between 8:00 A.M. and 6:00 P.M.

The church itself went up a week later, the 14th. Work was started at 7:30 A.M. A heavy snowfall began at 2:30 and made the roof so slippery that work had to be halted at 5:00 P.M. The job was finished in one hour the next day, meaning that it could have been finished by 6:00 P.M. the previous day.

All sections of the church plant were shipped to the site on trucks—three for the parish house and connection, and four for the church itself. Two truck-mounted cranes were used to hoist the sections into place. Eleven men, including the crane operators, made up the construction crew.

The unusual church plant was fabricated at McDonough, N.Y., by Ivon R. Ford, Inc., a company that has been making sectionalized houses, schools and commercial buildings since 1935.

Contractor for the Washingtonville project is the H. C. Schwab Construction Co., Kerhonkson, N.Y. Men of both Ford and Schwab worked on the building during the two days of whirlwind construction.

Work is proceeding on the interior of the building. No completion date has been set, though the building should be in use by early Spring.

The church is 40′ x 72′ and will seat 125. An unusual feature will be a small sound-proof nursery room in the rear with a large window to enable mothers to see the service.

The parish house is 40′ x 48′ and will seat 125 for a meal. The connecting wing will contain the heating unit, the kitchen, and another room.

St. Anne's has been worshipping in Washingtonville's Grange Hall since its establishment as a mission five year ago. A census of the area convinced the Vicar, Advisory Board and the Department of Missions that the mission would grow only if it had its own building. Plans were drawn, but bids far exceeded estimates and the mission's capacity to pay. Things looked bleak.

Then St. Anne's Vicar, the Rev. Richard Elting, remembered seeing a Ford Factory-Built Home erected. Did Ford build churches too? Yes, the company was experimenting with church construction and had some basic models. But these wouldn't do; so with the Vicar's help a church and parish hall with a connecting unit housing the utilities were designed. The parish house was modeled after Ford's original chapel but was changed to make it less austere. The most prominent innovation was in the side-walls, which were changed to a saw-tooth design, as in Coventry Cathedral.

An engineer employed by the Department of Missions strengthened the truss structure. St. Anne's sits on a masonry foundation and is as "permanent" a building as any frame structure.

The Bishop matched St. Anne's pledges of $9,000. The balance of the $55,000 has been loaned from the Revolving Fund of the 175th Anniversary Fund. ■

Bishop Dedicates St. Margaret's

The reconstructed church at St. Margaret's, Bronx, was dedicated on February 24, with Bishop Donegan officiating. The church, which is a Mission of the Diocese, now has both a new parish house and a reconstructed church. The parish house, financed through the 175th Anniversary Fund, was opened in 1961. Reconstruction of the church was financed by the Department of Missions. Picture at top left shows the church before extensive work was begun last April. Right, new building. The only portion of the old church that remains is the roof and floor beams. The old walls were torn down to the base, and new footings for the foundation were put in place. The reconstructed walls are brick on the exterior and a fine-textured building block on the interior. As much as possible of the old St. Margaret's — woodwork, chancel appointments — was used in the new structure, although the altar was redesigned. See bottom photo. The undercroft, formerly used only for storage, was converted into two rooms for acolytes and choirs.—Photos by Joseph Martin.

Question Program Launched on Radio

Radio listeners in the Peekskill area are being offered a different type of religious program. Instead of a sermon, it consists of conversations between two Episcopal ministers. They ask and answer straight-from-the-shoulder questions.

The program can be heard every seven weeks, Tuesday through Friday, on station WLNA, Peekskill, from 10:05 to 10:20 A. M. The last series, which began Shrove Tuesday, was on "Temptation." The next series, Tuesday through Friday during Holy Week, will be on "Suffering."

Taking turns with these discussions are the Rev. Peter Marks of Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, who suggested the idea; the Rev. Ralph Fogg of Divine Love, Montrose; the Rev. William Reisman of St. Philip's, Garrison; and the Rev. Ernest Johns of St. Andrew's, Beacon. During the program on "Temptation," they considered questions like "Wasn't Jesus foolish not to turn the stones in the desert into bread as the tempter suggested? What would have been the harm? If God is the God of love, why did he lead Jesus into the wilderness?"

The Peekskill Area Ministers Association handles arrangements for the program. It is heard every week, various denominations taking turns providing the speakers. The station broadcasts to people in Westchester, Dutchess, Rockland and Putnam counties, and parts of New Jersey. ■

Dr. Barrett, Bronxville Rector, To Become Bishop of Rochester

The Rev. George W. Barrett, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, since 1955, has been elected Bishop of the Diocese of Rochester.

He was chosen unanimously on the second ballot at a diocesan convention February 6 at Christ Church, Rochester. There were six other candidates. He will be the fourth Bishop of Rochester.

The Diocese was constituted in 1931, when it was separated from the Diocese of Western New York. It includes eight counties and extends from Lake Ontario to the Pennsylvania border. It has 66 parishes and missions and 70 clergymen. In 1962, it reported 19,312 communicant members.

Dr. Barrett will succeed the Rt. Rev. Dudley Scott Stark, who served for 12 years and retired last December 31.

The new bishop's consecration is expected to be held this Spring, but approval of all bishops and standing committees of the Protestant Episcopal Church must be received before the date is set.

Dr. Barrett was born May 10, 1908 in Iowa City, Iowa. He is a graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles and the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. He has an honorary doctor of divinity degree from Occidental College, Los Angeles.

He became a deacon in July, 1933, and was ordained a priest in March, 1934. In 1936 he married the former Dee Hanford. They have three children.

Dr. Barrett first served churches in Oakland, Upland, and Monrovia, Calif. From 1942 to 1947 he was Rector of St. James' Church, Los Angeles. Before becoming Rector of Christ Church, he was Professor of Pastoral Theology at General Theological Seminary, New York City.

In the Diocese of New York, Dr. Barrett has served on the Standing Committee since 1958, and has been its president since 1960. He is a member of the Board of Examining Chaplains and a former chairman of the Department of Promotion. He was a deputy to General Convention in 1949, 1958 and 1961.

Dr. Barrett

Dr. Barrett has written a number of books and magazine articles. He was selected by Seabury Press to write its Lenten book for 1963, "Key Words for Lent." ■

New 'Inner City' Program Started By Yonkers Parish

A new "inner-city" program for youth in the southern Westchester area has been started at St. Andrew's, Yonkers. Some 50 boys and girls of varying racial and religious backgrounds joined the group when it was formed early in February. The number has since risen to at least 60.

The schedule of after-school and weekend activities includes basketball, swimming, chess, hikes and program meetings. William F. Pepper, a Columbia University law student, and a lay reader at St. Andrew's, is the adult leader. One of the group's first sports triumphs was the basketball team's victory over St. Peter's School, Peekskill. The St. Andrew's Men's Club is providing uniforms for the teams and transportation to the games.

The Rev. Henry S. Sizer, Jr., rector, told The Bulletin that while he hopes this venture will be successful simply as a youth program, he also hopes it will enable the church to reach into many homes in the neighborhood. ■ was an independent Church from 1869 to 1904. It started when a group of priests broke away from the Roman Catholic Church and formed La Iglesia de Jesus. The American Church supported and encouraged this Church as time went on, although it has always remained Mexican in spirit. The Church is staffed almost entirely by Mexican clergy.

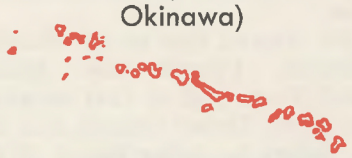
The National Council reports that expansion in Mexico has been difficult, hampered by poverty, revolution and a bitter opposition within a predominantly Roman Catholic population. Although churches do not operate many schools in Mexico, (and may not teach religion in these,) Episcopal children from rural communities live in Internados, or church boarding houses, while attending secular schools in the city.



became a Missionary District in 1902, when the Hawaiian Islands were annexed to the United States. It had been part of the Anglican Episcopate since 1862. Since Hawaii became a state, prosperity has been high. The tourist industry in particular has boomed, population has increased, and the Church has stretched to meet rising demands. The Hawaiian population is 632,772, of which more than 50% is under the age of 21. Thus, Christian education assumes a primary role in the Church's work.

also known as Formosa, was transferred from the jurisdiction of the Nippon Seikokai (Japan) to the Protestant Episcopal Church in 1960. It is the Church's newest missionary district. On this island of 10,232,200 people, the Church ministers chiefly to Chinese Nationalist refugees from the mainland.

On Taiwan the Church began, and has grown, primarily through the efforts of lay readers. Nearly all the congregations organized since 1954 were started by lay men and women. The most critical need is said to be the establishment of church day schools at the primary level, a boarding school at the secondary level, and funds for medical work.

is one of the oldest areas of missionary effort. About 1861, the Rev. James T. Holly, an American Negro priest, emigrated to Haiti with some 110 Negroes in hopes of establishing a colony. The colony failed, but the Church remained. It was recognized as a national Church in 1874 — the Eglise Orthodoxe Apostolique Haitienne—and Mr. Holly was consecrated as bishop. He died in 1911. Haiti became a Missionary District in 1913.

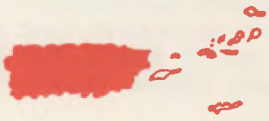
At present, the only American clergy, outside of Bishop C. Alfred Voegeli, are two priests serving at the seminary. The Church stresses the training of its future leaders — Haitian clergy attend their own island seminary and it maintains some 40 primary schools. Building a secondary school is one of its goals.

PANAMA CANAL

was constituted as a Missionary District in 1919. It includes the Panama Canal Zone and the Republics of Panama, Colombia and Equador.

In the Panama Canal Zone, the Episcopal Church serves many hundreds of military personnel, but its ministry is in both English and Spanish. Thirty years ago it became the first Church to hold services and make pastoral calls at the Leper Colony in Palo Seco. The Church also supplies chaplaincy service for the government hospital in Ancon and at the Gamboa penitentiary. It operates an orphanage in Panama, carries on a considerable amount of organized youth work, and has started schools.



PUERTO RICO

is the site of one of the most inter esting, and hopeful, developments of the Episcopal Church in Latin America — El Seminario Episcopal del Caribe (The Seminary of the Caribbean). Opened in September, 1961, it provides training for students from all over Latin America. The seminary is not, however, part of the District.

Puerto Rico is an area of rapid industrialization, booming tourist trade and mushrooming cities. The Church of England became established in 1872, but opposition by Roman Catholics and the Spanish government forced it to close. Then it operated only on a limited scale until the island became part of the United States in 1898. The District was created in 1901. The American Church began its work in rural areas, where most of the people then lived. Now the expanding cities present a growing challenge.

PHILIPPINES

contain the largest number of communicants in any overseas missionary district — 24,177 — as well as the greatest number of churches — 185. It was made a missionary district in 1901.

Education and health have been primary areas of work since the early days. Long before the government began its educational projects, the Church went to remote, unpenetrated areas to establish mission schools and dispensaries. Three of these have evolved into modern, full-fledged hospitals. St. Luke's Hospital, Manila, is known for its pioneering work in many fields. Expansion in all areas of the Church's work has been rapid as the Philippines cleared away the signs of World War II devastation.

In 1960, the Missionary District of the Philippines sent its first missionary overseas — a Filipino priest to the British Colony of North Borneo.

which is now the 49th state, cannot be considered an overseas mission any more. With the District of Honolulu, it actually should be listed among the domestic missionary districts, of which there are nine. But both districts are unique.

The Church in Alaska began in the 1860's, when clergy of the Church of England traveled far down the Yukon River. In the late 1880's, Episcopal missionaries began to live with Indians in the lower Yukon. A decade later, work was begun among the Eskimos. The District was created in 1892. The first Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Peter Trimble Rowe, who was elected in 1895, assumed that most of his work would be with native Alaskans, but the gold rush of 1898 brought quick and violent change. Churches and hospitals were built in the mining boom towns, and the Church found a fertile field. World War II was another boom period.

Today's needs, in a time of rapid economic changes, are for more missions in the growing cities and more clergy and trained laymen to reach the newcomers. Especially important will be the growth of a fuller ministry to the Indians and Eskimos.

Sketchy as this survey has been, it nevertheless indicates at least two general facts to be emphasized.

First is the Episcopal Church's strong concentration of work in the Caribbean, Central and South America. Of the 16 missionary districts described, 11 are in this area — although in some places it can be seen that Episcopalians constitute a small minority in a traditionally Roman Catholic stronghold. According to National Council spokesmen, Latin America will be receiving a great deal more attention. National Council's 1962 appropriation for these 11 areas was $1,375,314 out of a total overseas budget of $2,868,384. Honolulu, Liberia, the Philippines, Taiwan and Alaska received another $994,877 (with Liberia and the Philippines to get the two highest appropriations among all 16 districts.)

The rest of the budget, $516,193, was divided among the Church in many parts of the world.

Second, a glance at the American overseas missions shows a positive trend toward the development of indigenous clergy. In most places, national priests outnumber appointed missionaries.

Some time ago, Bishop Bayne, Executive Officer of the Anglican Communion, told an audience that, "It has been many years since the Anglican Communion has felt so deeply the urgency of mission. . ."

Why should there be an "urgency" about missions? Why should the average parishioner worry about converting the pagan Igorots? Perhaps they are happy in their own religion. Why should we disturb them? Why should we spend millions to support missions in Brazil or Haiti? What business is it of ours?

Next month's issue will tackle some of the answers.

Bard College President to Address Annual ECW Meeting at Cathedral

Episcopal Churchwomen from all over the Diocese will hold their annual meeting at the Cathedral on Saturday, May 11. The day will include Holy Communion at 10:30 A. M. at which the Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering will take place, luncheon in the undercroft of Synod House, and the annual meeting in the afternoon.

The Rev. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College, will preach at the Holy Communion service in the Cathedral. His topic, "The Place to Bear Witness," will be keyed to the ECW program theme for 1963-64, "Our Witness in This Changing World." The overall theme for the three-year period, 1961-64, is "Ministry of the Laity."

To emphasize the 1962-63 theme of "Persons of Special Need," Mrs. Woodson D. Scott, Diocesan chairman of Youth and College Work, and members of her committee, will have a part in the meeting. They will be in charge of exhibits in Synod Hall depicting the many areas of interest covered by this department, especially camps and conferences, and training available through Church-sponsored projects.

At the annual meeting the ECW will elect these officers: vice president in charge of public relations, corresponding secretary, director of the Church Periodical Club, chairman of education, chairman of youth and college work, and chairman of four convocations — Hudson, Ramapo, Westchester and Richmond. Bishop Boynton will address the meeting and install the newly elected officers.

Delegates are asked to provide their own box lunches. Sandwiches and coffee will be on sale in the undercroft.

The featured speaker, Dr. Kline, has been President of Bard College since 1960, and is its 13th president. The college, at Annandale-on-Hudson, was established in 1860 as St. Stephen's College. Its name was changed in 1934 to honor John Bard, its founder. Under the terms of its charter, the college has always had a relationship with the Episcopal Church.

Dr. Kline is a graduate of Middlebury College, Vt., received a Master of Arts degree from the University of Michigan, and a Bachelor of Divinity, cum laude, from Episcopal Theological School. Middlebury awarded him an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree.

The United Thank Offering will be the fourth in a total of six to be collected and held until the General Convention of 1964. Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd, diocesan chairman for UTO, reports that 9,641 women participated in the offering last Advent. This is second only to Advent, 1960, when 9,895 women participated. The 1962 Advent offering is $32,454.41. (See accompanying box for breakdown.) Again, this figure is the second highest on record, exceeded only by Spring, 1961, when the total was $34,941.79.

The total for the Triennium so far is $93,649.79, consisting of $30,137.89 for Advent, 1961; $31,057.49 for Spring, 1962; and $32,454.41 for Advent, 1962.

Two parishes participated for the firsttime in the Advent, 1962 offering. They are St. Mark's, Fort Montgomery and Christ Church, Piermont. ■

All Saints Pamphlet Brings Response

Not long ago, 3,300 families in Valley Cottage, Congers and West Nyack found a folded sheet of glossy white paper in their mailboxes. Opening it, they found it contained the picture of a church and these words: "HELLO! This is All Saints Episcopal Church in Valley Cottage. IF YOU HAVE NO 'CHURCH HOME' I would like to invite you to come and worship with us, and help us build up our congregation in this fast-growing area!"

There was a brief message for people of varying religious backrounds and for those thinking of joining a church for the first time. The hours of services and a quick resume of activities were given. It was signed by the Rev. Robert Pollard, Vicar.

He said he adapted the idea from a folder created and used with great success by a friend in Lake Worth, Fla., who was starting a new mission. Mr. Pollard wasn't sure he would get any direct response, but, even so, he thought the project might help make people more aware that Valley Cottage has an Episcopal Church.

This is what has happened to date: Three families came to church almost immediately after receiving the folder. A woman phoned to ask questions, and finally said she'd decided to go to church—either at All Saints or at St. John's, New City. Calls on new residents have been easier because the folder arrived ahead of the vicar. As he predicted, people (who should know better) have been saying, "Why, I never knew there was an Episcopal Church in Valley Cottage!" ■

Many Readers Liked Prayer Book Search

Measured by readers' response, the Prayer Book Search in the February Bulletin was a successful experiment. The editors are sorry that there could be only one prize, and that it had to be awarded on a first-solution-to-arrive basis. We realize this handicapped those in areas where mail takes longer to be delivered.

Many contestants took the time to write friendly notes of encouragement to enclose with their solution (editors do like to receive letters). The following is from Mrs. Barbara S. Moran of Warwick, N. Y.:

"Even if I don't win, this was quite a challenge and proved that even the busiest person can find time for the Prayer Book. I prepared supper and fed my five children and myself while finding it. To be truthful, I had no idea where to look. I read the entire back of the book first. Maybe it's good that I did, because I learned a lot . . ." ■

Officers and staff of the National Council of the Episcopal Church have moved into the new 12-story Episcopal Church Center at 815 Second Avenue. The new phone number is TN 7-8400. See next month's issue for pictures and full details.

As a chorister, this boy daily sings to the glory of God and learns to know and love the great music of the Church. During the school year he lives, studies and plays with forty-three other boys in grades 5 - 8.

The school program encourages him to take advantage of the variety of cultural opportunities Manhattan offers. Happy hours are spent in the spacious gymnasium and on reserved playing fields in Central Park.

Two housemothers and a large domestic staff insure his well-being and comfort. He receives a classical and sound education from a faculty composed of eight resident and three part-time teachers, one, his personal advisor. Classes are small, the atmosphere informal and personal. His progress is carefully evaluated through standardized tests. When he graduates from this unique school, he will be well prepared for entrance into a leading preparatory school.

Presiding Bishop Reveals Need to Curb Activities

The Presiding Bishop has announced that a physical disability is making it necessary for him to limit his activities.

In a letter sent to bishops of the Church and later released for publication, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger said that he has canceled all speaking engagements for the next few months and is assigning consecrations to other bishops. However, he added that he has no immediate plans for resigning his office before the next General Convention in 1964.

Subsequently, Bishop Lichtenberger disclosed that he is suffering from Parkinson's syndrome. This disability makes speaking in public difficult, but the condition is not always rapidly progressive, and it does not affect the mental powers of those who suffer from it.

The complete text of Bishop Lichtenberger's letter follows:

"It has been brought to my attention recently that a number of people are concerned about my health. I do have a disability which I had hoped might be corrected by surgery before it became very noticeable. With this in mind, I told the Council of Advice (the Presidents of the Provinces) about my situation at the last meeting of the House of Bishops in Columbia. However, it seems clear to me that I should be quite frank and open about this now. I am, therefore, writing to you and to all our bishops; also to the members of the National Council and to the Directors of the Departments of the National Council. Please feel free to use the information in this letter in any way you think might be for the good of the Church. I plan to use this letter for general distribution soon.

"The first symptoms appeared in a very mild form in 1960; these have increased gradually but not sufficiently to warrant surgery now. The prognosis is quite uncertain; there is no way of predicting how rapidly the disability will increase, or whether it will remain as it is at present.

"Most affected is my speech. I have a compulsion to rush headlong and to slur my words; it is quite difficult, therefore, for me to read the service or to speak in public. I am hoping to find a way around or through this. But very reluctantly, I must for the next few months, at any rate, assign the consecrations to other bishops and cancel all speaking engagements. I regret this exceedingly and I have hesitated to do this until it became quite evident that it was necessary and wise.

"Should I under these circumstances resign my office? I have given this much thought and I have prayed about it. I hope I have come to a right decision. If a Presiding Bishop is elected between sessions

CMS Coordinates Services

The Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society has coordinated three areas of service under a new heading entitled Services to Families and Youth. The Rev. Albert E. Snyder, former Assistant Minister at Grace Church, White Plains, is the director.

Port and immigration work, family service, and the casework at Westfield State Farm are the three divisions under the new director's general supervision. Each continues with its former personnel — Miss Barbara Bennett for family service, Mrs. Dorothy M. Bigelow for port and immigration, and Mrs. Mildred Marshall for Westfield State Farm. In addition to his supervisory duties, Father Snyder will do a considerable amount of casework.

Dr. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Society, said that, among other things, the new arrangement will enable his organization to expand its services to parishes throughout the Diocese as they seek help with social service problems. ■

Guild Announces Religious Tours

A series of Saturday pilgrimages to religious orders in the New York area is being sponsored again this year by St. Martha's Guild of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, 139 West 46th Street, Manhattan.

Each trip begins with Mass at 7 A.M. for those who wish to attend, followed by breakfast in a nearby coffee shop. The entire group assembles at 9:15 A.M. in church for a blessing. Buses leave immediately thereafter. Each person should bring a picnic lunch. The visit includes a tour of the religious community, a meditation, and a talk about the work done by the Order. The group returns about 7:30 P.M.

Round-trip fare is $5 for adults and $3 for children. No more than 12 tickets will be sold to one parish. Tickets may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a check made payable to St. Martha's Guild. Mail them to Miss Nancy Tutt, 288 Lexington Avenue, New York 16, N.Y.

The schedule of tours follows:

May 18 — The Community of St. John Baptist, Mendham, N. J.

June 8—The Order of St. Francis and the Poor Clares, Mount Sinai, L.I.

September 14—The Community of St. Mary, St. Mary's Hospital for Children, Bayside, L.I.

October 12 — The Order of the Holy Cross, West Park, N.Y. ■

The Bishop's Message

Since this issue of The Bulletin is devoted to overseas missions, and since he has spent many years in the missionary field as priest and bishop, I have asked Bishop Boynton to write this month's message:

* * * *

The note sounded throughout the article on Overseas Missions in this issue of The Bulletin is that of urgency.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations", is an urgent command.

Too little, to too few, for too little, in a radically changing world, adds to this sense of urgency.

The realization that Christians today are being "outpaced, outdistanced, and outbred by other religions and philosophies", only heightens the urgency that we be something to people as well as do something for people.

The fact that the world is moving faster than the Episcopal Church; and that, since we cannot slow down the world even if we would, we must of necessity speed up the Church, is the Gray Report's succinct summary.

If urgency is the correct word to describe the situation in which we find ourselves, let us feel the impact of its definitions. Urgency means

- need for action, haste;
- stress, importance;
- pressure, as of necessity;
- insistence;
- importunity —

In short, the necessity for an increased missionary endeavor on the part of all of us is a persistent one; one which refuses to be denied; a troublesome one.

St. Paul felt this sense of urgency:

"For though I preach the Gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the Gospel." (I Cor. 9:16)

Can we honestly say the same? We ought to. We must. God grant us the pressure of the urgency so that we will.

Ever most faithfully,

Overseas: Today

BISHOP BAYNE WAS RIGHT. Two years ago he said, "It has been many years since the Anglican Communion has felt so deeply the urgency of mission . . . we are on the threshold of what may be the greatest missionary era the Church has ever known . . . ." Today, if you walk into the Overseas Department of National Council, or talk to other church leaders, something of that urgency is in the air.

Of course, the "urgency" that Bishop Bayne describes has deep roots in the past as well as a reality in the tumultous present.

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations . . ."

Eric Ley, diocesan director of stewardship, calls these words the Church's "marching orders." They are our only purpose in life—the summons which compels a local church to thrust out into its neighborhood, the diocese into the city and suburbs, the national church into the nation and the world." The Rev. Howard A. Johnson, Canon Theologian of the Cathedral, insists that for "Christian soldiers" to question their captain's order is simply insubordination. "You cannot say 'no' to missionary work without saying 'no' to Christ," he insists. It is an "urgent" command.

But assuming that all of us, as members of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A., are not insubordinate, and do accept the captain's order, there are also practical considerations. How can we ourselves, who have families, jobs and other responsibilities, go and teach all nations — except through our money? And if we send our money, who will take it, where will it go, and what will it do?

Bishop Bayne
". . . the urgency of mission"

Here are some statistics:

- In its 14 missionary areas, the Episcopal Church has only 268 missionaries appointed by National Council and 328 who are natives of the countries they serve, a total of 596. (National Council figures)
- In these 14 areas, the population is 184,813,796, and there are 268,971 baptized Episcopalians. (Episcopal Church Annual, 1963)
- The average giving of American Christians for overseas missions in 1960 was $2.45 per member; the average for Episcopalians was $1.20. (Yearbook of American Churches)

The conclusions are inescapable: Episcopalians are giving too little money for overseas missions; too few missionaries are getting that money; and not nearly enough is being done with the money after they get it.

To be perfectly truthful, thoughtful clergy and laymen have acknowledged these facts for at least a decade. They are the basis for perhaps half of the sense of "urgency." The other half is to be found in the 19th century—in its attitudes, ideas, taboos, politics, and industrial achievements—and in the way in which these things have radically changed the world.

As Bishop Bayne puts it, "We cannot blame the 19th century for being the 19th century. The missionary represented his culture, and he spoke out of it and for it. In those days we did not see what was happening in the world; we did not understand that people would not obediently stay children all the rest of their lives. We did not understand that you cannot go into a primitive society and talk about brotherhood and liberty and equality and not be heard. We never really counted on being heard. We never really believed that we would be heard, save in the narrow confines of Church membership. But we were heard, and one of the consequences was that the world has been turned upside down for us. In the 20th century it is not the victorious and successful Christian West which knows all the answers; the Christian West itself is now being examined thoughtfully and somberly tested."

All during the last century, Bishop Bayne points out, the Church has chiefly striven to do something for people. "But the mission of the Church is not, first of all, to do something, but to be something."

In a world like ours, a materialistic and cynical world, where there are 15 times as many people to be converted to Christianity as in the first century—where it is acknowledged that Christians are being "outpaced, outdistanced, and outbred by other religions and philosophies," this mission to be something becomes "urgent."

The situation has not been entirely unrecognized by the Church's official agencies. For some years, National Council has been appraising its efforts and experimenting with new projects. But at the same time a spontaneous grassroots movement has arisen, and it has been urging a broad program of study and change.

Early in 1953, a small group of people—clergymen and laymen—in the vicinity of Washington, D.C., began to hold meetings to discuss the nature of the Christian mission and ways of carrying it out. This was the birth of the Overseas Mission Society, a group which describes itself as a friendly yet critical observer of the Church's program. Its executive secretary, the Rev. Theodore Eastman, is not only an administrator. He also travels extensively at home and overseas, and, by much reading and observation, acts as the eyes and ears of his organization. The Society publishes a unique magazine, the Overseas Mission Review, and a newsletter called Compass. It sponsors conferences and started an experimental program of overseas fellowships. It was the originator of Laymen International, a program through which laymen living and working overseas are trained to be emissaries for the Church.

The OMS does not recruit missionaries or send them overseas. Nor does it raise and budget money for missions. "These are rightly the functions of the Church's official agencies," says Mr. Eastman. It does see as its task "one of stimulation and supplementation—urging appropriate existing groups to fulfill their missionary responsibility more effectively, and then working itself only in areas where little or nothing is being done by others."

Asked by this magazine where he believes the Church has failed to reach its potential, Mr. Eastman answered frankly, "Everywhere." But he hastened to add, "This is not the fault of any particular group or agency. The Church as a whole hasn't engaged in a way commensusurate with its wealth, size and influence."

Mr. Eastman said his personal feeling (not necessarily as Society spokesman) is that the Church ought to increase its effectiveness on all fronts. "An obvious place is Latin America . . . . But while we have a background of having worked there, I do not think we ought to regard it as our particular preserve within the Anglican Communion. We also ought to go to Africa." He emphasized that missionary work does not begin and end with geographical boundaries. "If we really train our laity, dispersed around the world, we will be doing our greatest missionary work!"

OMS admittedly has been something of a thorn in the flesh. A critic is never popular. Its supporters insist that the organization from the first tried to be more than a mere critic; that it tried to work along with National Council rather than as opposition. Some church leaders feel that OMS was needed, as a critical force, and that it has been effective. But others say that official agencies already were rolling along in the same direction taken by OMS. Still others credit OMS with setting the first grass fires of public concern that brought about a now famous study project—The Committee of Conference on Overseas Missions.

Known unofficially as the Gray Committee, after its chairman, Bishop Walter H. Gray of Connecticut, this group was appointed following the 1958 General Convention "to make recommendatins to National Council for leading this Church into greater understanding, support and service in its world-wide mission." Bishop Donegan and Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse represented the Diocese of New York in this study.

Presenting its report in 1960, the Gray Committee offered 14 recommendations, together with an analysis of the Church's place and responsibilities in the world today. If the Gray Report can be said to have a theme, it is certainly that of "urgency."

"The time is short," the report admitted. ". . . the Christian Churches are threatened today as they have not been for a thousand years."

Some of its statements were couched in familiar language. "The mission of the Church is in its deepest sense God's, not ours. Everyone is a missionary . . . ."

But the report also faced the fact of a rapidly changing world."..Although there has never been a time when human society was not changing, the most startling fact of our time is the acceleration of social change . . . ."

It called attention to new developments in the mission field, "the most important of which is the rise of new national churches." It recognized the drive toward union among the Christian churches, as well as practical needs for unity.

An Irrelevant Survival?

The report outlined needs for new strategy. It suggested a change in policy of maintaining missionary districts bound authoritatively to the Church at home. It told of an overseas bishop who warned against becoming "an isolated and ingrown community, shying away from contact with other denominations and set apart from the life of the greater Anglican Communion." This warning came from an area where, after more than 50 years of work, Episcopalians number approximately 6,000 compared with 45,000 Methodists and 92,000 Presbyterians, the report indicated. "Unless we are able to change our methods and to promote autonomy, the forces of history may pass us by and leave our work an irrelevant survival in the foreign mission field."

Some of the other recommendations were these:

* Increase the autonomy of missionary districts, form new provinces, and improve relations with autonomous provinces already sharing American personnel and finances.

* Wherever work is begun in a new country, send a team headed by a bishop.

* Form a Permanent Advisory Council of Evaluation and Strategy on the Mission of the Church, whose first task would be to study the entire missionary policy overseas.

* Study "all relevant aspects of political, social and cultural life of the Spanish-speaking areas of South America; of Africa, and of the Pacific area, for the guidance of future overseas work.

* Consider making Liberia part of the Province of West Africa.

* Strengthen relationships with the Philippine Independent Church, and form an autonomous Church in the Pacific.

* Undertake work with the Chinese Dispersion.

* Make certain administrative changes at National Council.

* Expand the missionary recruitment program.

* Assign a regional assistant specifically to Latin America.

WHAT SOME PARISHES ARE DOING

Churches on the home front are discovering that overseas missionary work really begins to mean something when there is personal involvement. Nearly a dozen congregations in this diocese have joined the National Council's "Adopt-A-Missionary" program, and others have found ways on their own to help individual clergymen. One church recently pledged $2,000 for the construction of a badly needed clergy residence in a Philippine mountain village.

Another church enabled its missionary to buy a station wagon. A third sent a set of handmade pulpit falls. More often, the gifts are funds, "to use as you see fit."

Under the National Council program, the "adopted" missionary becomes part of the parish staff. Usually a church has a committee which keeps in touch. Some missionaries send regular newsletters to their "adopted" churches. Part of a furlough is usually spent visiting these churches.

Furthermore, the Church as a whole must move ahead, the report continued. This means the education of all church people—clergy and laity at home, missionary clergy, "national" missionary clergy, laymen in secular jobs overseas, and lay missionaries overseas.

"A beginning has already been made in the education of all people of the Church through plans for the 'personalization' of missions," the report disclosed. Ways to promote this personalization further were suggested: the Adopted Missionary Plan, under which a parish may "adopt" a particular missionary; the Companion Diocese plan, by which a diocese may "adopt" a missionary district; and internships and summer programs in non-pastoral missionary work.

In its concluding paragraphs the Gray Report declares that it was "..written in the hope that it will help to stimulate further thought and study, leading to prompt and decisive action. As things now stand, the world is moving faster than the Episcopal Church. We cannot slow down the world, even if we would; but we can and must speed up the Church."

Well, now, the Gray Report—in 54 pages—was published in 1960. The immediate reactions ranged from high enthusiasm to great disfavor. Some felt that the report had pointed up paramount weaknesses and that by following its recommendations, giant strides could be taken to remedy them. Oher observers said the report had not gone nearly far enough, but that, in fact, it had overlooked a number of shortcomings. Still others expressed chagrin that very substantial on-going projects of the Overseas Department apparently had been overlooked. One church leader declared that the Gray Report did more harm than good because it created the not altogether correct impression that after all these years the Church was doing nothing.

National Council's Reaction

As for National Council itself, that body could not be expected to applaud all of the recommendations with unqualified enthusiasm. After all, the report in many ways implied criticism of the official program. In April, 1961, the Overseas Department issued "A Response." It said that, on the whole, the report was "challenging and constructive." It announced having established the Permanent Advisory Council. On a slightly more cautious note, however, it remarked: "Obviously not all the recommendations can be accepted . . . nor can they be put into effect immediately." Some suggestions, it said, "appeared to have equal, or greater applicability to other Departments."

The Permanent Advisory Council now has been functioning for about a year and a half under the chairmanship of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Moore, who is an anthropologist as well as a clergyman, and an old hand at complicated and exhaustive surveys. So far he has done four studies in southeast Asia, and has conferred with the Southeast Anglican Council in Hong Kong to keep abreast of planning needs of the related churches in southeast Asia as far north as Korea.

One of Dr. Moore's particular concerns is the startling gap between population in the Church's 14 missionary areas and the number of baptized Episcopalians. "We certainly have to seek more creative efforts than in times past," he asserted, adding, "One reason why the Church has made so little headway in getting great numbers of members is that it has not been able to support overseas missionaries cheaply enough to make them go around. The Episcopal Church has tended to think in terms of professional clergy, and this has made personnel too expensive for many undeveloped cultures."

He continued, "In the early Church, Christ's followers were poor. There were no professionals; all Christians helped one another."

Following this line of logic, Dr. Moore offers a thought-provoking idea:

Why can't the Church today operate with many more unpaid, non-professional clergy and helpers?

He said some Church leaders are beginning to consider this idea seriously. It's a question of "urgency."

Another person at National Council who is well aware of the general urgency is The Rev. Samuel Van Culin, assistant secretary of the Overseas Department. "If we do not work together within the Christian tradition to help people face the inevitable changes confronting them, there may be a fantastic and tragic conclusion," he told The Bulletin.

Still, he said he believes that the Church can point to certain achievements within recent years. Certainly the ratio between population and baptized Episcopalians is depressing, Mr. Van Culin admitted. But he cautioned that figures alone are not always a reliable index. There's such a thing as the "hidden church," he declared—the Christian influence that permeates its surroundings. It can be observed in the case of men who, for political reasons, perhaps, are not Christians, but who are certain kind of men because of the direct or indirect influence upon them of Christian missionaries.

Mr. Van Culin also is among the church leaders who believe the most urgent overseas frontier is Latin America. Another is Bishop Boynton, who, before becoming Suffragan Bishop of New York, was Bishop of Puerto Rico. He said his recollection of the Caribbean is of an area offering "a tremendous harvest of people who need to be spiritually revived." And this despite the fact that some 90 per cent are baptized Roman Catholics. Actually, Bishop Boynton pointed out, Rome admits that fewer than 10 per cent of its people are communicants in good standing. He said, "These people need the Gospel brought to them in a very alive way, both for themselves and for the redemption of the community."

Quite in agreement is Canon Johnson, whose book describing his two-year trek throughout the Anglican Communion will soon be in local bookstores. In this book, Canon Johnson is candid about Anglicanism south of our borders. For instance, in discussing Brazil, he notes

Dr. Joseph Moore
"the early church . . . no professionals"

"figures alone . . . not always reliable"

that in 75 years of hard work the Church has made "not a bad showing," but "our whole effort—fine as it is—is but a drop in the bucket."

Bishop Boynton
". . . a tremendous harvest of people"

Bishop Bentley
"our chief bottleneck . . . the clergy"

It is true, of course, that in much of Latin America the Episcopal Church originally served colonies of North Americans who happened to be Episcopalians,or ministered to British West Indians with an Anglican heritage. Work among the Spanish-speaking peoples is comparatively recent. In fact, one of the most earnestly debated questions for some time has been whether the Church really has a mission in South America. The question was answered at the Cuernavaca Conference, and answered, tentatively, in the affirmative.

Meeting in Cuernavaca, Mexico, last January, were 20 leaders representing the Church of England, the Anglican Church of Canada, the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. and the Church of the Province of the West Indies. The Archbishop of York presided, and among those participating from PECUSA were the Presiding Bishop, Bishop John B. Bentley, Director of the Overseas Department; Canon Johnson, Warren H. Turner, Jr., a vice president of National Council; and the Bishops of Mexico, Central America, Panama Canal Zone and Southwestern Brazil. Bishop Bayne, as executive officer of the Lambeth Conference's Advisory Council on Missionary Strategy, had called the consultation.

Briefly, the result of Cuernavaca was a recommendation that the whole Church expand its ministry in Latin America, and that the work go forward as a concerted effort rather than, as at present, a piecemeal operation by each participating member of the Anglican Communion. Furthermore, it was proposed that a Bishop head all new efforts to establish missions. (This point recalls the Gray Report, which proposed much the same thing.) The more usual procedure has been to send parish clergy first. Also suggested at Cuernavaca was "experimentation in the development of fuller service of laymen."

There will be no actual decision on the South American program until the Advisory Council meets this Summer in Toronto. But many churchmen are optimistic about the outcome.

One of these is the Director of the Overseas Department, Bishop Bentley, who told The Bulletin:

"I came away feeling that this was the most significant and important conference I had attended in many years." He said he had dreamed for a long time that the whole Anglican Communion might be concerned with a larger program in Latin America, and that "I see the beginning of a realization of that dream."

Not One Dissenter

Cuernavaca was the second of two steps in a definite plan for South America, the area which the 1958 Lambeth Conference called "the neglected continent." Bishop Bentley said that in 1960, acting on Bishop Bayne's request, the National Council appointed him and the Bishop of the Panama Canal Zone to study Anglican work in South America. Their joint study recommended

1. that Ecuador be transferred from the jurisdiction of the Anglican Communion to the American Church. This was done.

2. that Bishop Bayne initiate conferences that might result in the realignment and assignment of jurisdictions, the election of new missionary bishops and the strengthening of Anglican work throughout Latin America. Cuernavaca resulted.

Bishop Bentley admitted that a feeling of conviction about the Church's potential in South America was not unanimous at the start of the Cuernavaca conference. "But I think when the consultation ended, there was not one dissenter there," he reported.

Although there was nothing binding about its actions, the Cuernavaca conference made two proposals which already are being implemented. They were in the form of recommendations to the Archbishop of Canterbury that both Chile and Argentina be constituted as missionary dioceses and given their own bishops.

So from all sides come indications of the "urgency" that Bishop Bayne voiced two years ago. But will it last? Or, Bishop Bentley was asked, could it peter out?

"There's always that chance," he admitted. "It's up to our Church leadership to keep us aroused, or the great impetus that we are feeling will peter out. At present, overseas missions have top priority. In my time there has never been a period of more concern."

Financially, this is certainly so. The Overseas Department budget has been doubled in nine years, according to Bishop Bentley. For 1963-64, the Overseas Department receives the single largest chunk out of the total National Council budget of $11,265,337. Its allocation is $4.450,015.

Still, Bishop Bentley observed ruefully:

Why should Christians bother to take their message of the Gospel to distant lands? Canon Howard A. Johnson tells of the agnostic who was a member of a scientific expedition to a South Pacific island. He was astonished to find the native chieftain reading the Bible.

"What are you reading that book for?" the visitor asked.

The native chief told him: "If I had not read this Bible, I would be eating you for lunch!"

Dr. William Kennedy, at right, greets visiting foreign students as they step off the gangplank. The next stop for each will be the home of a "hostess" who has volunteered to shepherd a student through what could be a bewildering first few days in a foreign land.

Hostesses Now Signing Up To Take Foreign Students

Every year hundreds of foreign students come to this country, hoping to find an enriching experience in study, travel and friendship. For all but the most sophisticated, their arrival entails something of a cultural shock as they grapple with a strange language and new customs. They are not tourists, here to sample the local color and then move on; they are semi-permanent residents who have to get along, somehow, on their own. For some time after they arrive, many of them feel friendless and lonely.

Through the Episcopal Council for Foreign Students, the Church has been carrying on a hospitality program for these young people for some years. The Council has its headquarters at Diocesan House. Dr. William Kennedy is its executive secretary, and its program covers the entire East Coast. It works like this:

A church or an individual family agrees to entertain a student for a specified period. It can be a week, a week end, an evening's outing or a day trip. If it is to be a house stay, it will probably occur between Labor Day and the period of college registrations.

The Council receives the names of students as they are admitted at colleges, and passes them on to parish chairmen for distribution to the hostesses during May and June. The hostesses then write the students and make arrangements for the forthcoming meeting. Often snapshots are exchanged in these letters, and a tentative acquaintance is begun.

In past years, churches in Manhattan and Westchester have been especially interested in this hands-across-the-sea effort. Many families have taken students into their homes for a week or so, and a number of parishes have organized group trips, such as a Winter skiing party to New England. Some parishes have an ongoing foreign student program. Last Summer, nearly a dozen Westchester families housed African students who had been hired by the County for a special, short-term project.

Mrs. Donald Bitsberger is diocesan chairman for the Council. This year, Dr. Kennedy and Mrs. Bitsberger are hoping that more host families than ever before will sign up for visiting students. People are needed for both short and longer periods.

One experienced hostess told The Bulletin: "Many of the families who entertain foreign students say that, in terms of cultural interchange and insight into other people's lives, they get more out of the adventure than the time and effort they put into it." She added, "With some students, there is no particular rapport, and you never hear from them again. But others keep in touch even when they return home, and you feel that your world is enlarging tremendously."

Those interested in the program are invited to write or phone Dr. William Kennedy, Episcopal Council for Foreign Students, 1047 Amsterdam Avenue, New York 25, UN 6-1430, or Mrs. Donald Bitsberger, 195 Adams Street, Brooklyn, 1, N.Y., JA 2-0016. ■

Mission Society Plans Benefits For Elko Camps

Plans for two Elko Lake Camp benefits have been announced by the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. They are being held as follows:

May 17—Bronx Convocation. Dinner-dance at Mayer's Parkway Restaurant, East 233rd Street, 8 P.M. Tickets, $5.50 each. Mrs. Andrew Bernero, 2950 Bainbridge Avenue, Bronx 59, N.Y., chairman, Mrs. Albert D. Ketchum co-chairman, and Mrs. Anita Combs in charge of entertainment.

May 24 — Westchester Convocation. The "Crystal Ball" at Brookside," estate of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Glenn Mook on Purchase Street, Rye, 9:30 P.M. Black tie. Subscription, $20 a couple, ($10 single) may be obtained from Mrs. G. Maxwell Ule, 5 Loch Lane, Port Chester. Mrs. Mook, through whose generosity the estate is being made available, is chairman of the ball. Barney Sorkin's orchestra will play. Celeste Holm is expected to be guest singer.

ECW Board Plans Annual Meeting

William E. Leidt will address the Diocesan Board of Episcopal Churchwomen at its annual conference May 21 and 22 at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park.

Mr. Leidt, who is on special assignment with the National Council to work on preparations for the Anglican Congress, will speak on the first evening. He will discuss the forthcoming Congress, to be held next August in Toronto, Canada.

"The Ministry of the Laity and Our Witness in this Changing World" is the ECW subject for special emphasis during the coming year. At the conference, the 1963-64 edition of the Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen will form the basis for considering next year's program.

Guests on the second day will be officers of ECW boards in the seven convocations. The morning session will be devoted to round-table discussions. ■

Incarnation Creates New Teenage Camp

The Board of Directors of Incarnation Camp has announced the opening of a Teenage Pioneer Camp for boys and girls from all over the diocese, 14, 15, and 16 years of age. As its name implies, the camp will be for youngsters who want to rough it. They will live in tents, cook two meals out of three themselves, and build many of the things they need.

Boys and girls will live and conduct much of their program separately, but there will be some coed activities such as recreational swimming, dramatics, trips and social programs. The teenagers' area will be completely apart from units of Incarnation Camp operated for younger children. However, it will also be a cooperative venture of the Church and Chapel of the Incarnation, All Angels, All Saints, St. James'. Grace Church and the Girls' Friendly Society. Andrew Katsanis will be the director. He said the campers will be supervised and chaperoned at all times.

In addition to in-camp activities, Mr. Katsanis said the program may include extended canoe and bus trips, and visits to summer music, drama and dance festivals.

The camp will have two four-week periods: July 1 through 29, and August 1 through 29, each accommodating 24 persons. The fee will be $200 for each period. This includes bus transportation, insurance, laundry and blankets.

In announcing the program, Mr. Katsanis advised: "Parents and teenagers should carefully consider the philosophy and structure of this program before applying. Not all teenagers would adjust to a living situation where tents and outdoor bathroom facilities will be used. It would be difficult, if not impossible for some teenagers to live without the luxuries of life."

Those interested in applying should write or phone Mr. Katsanis, 240 East 31st Street, New York, 16, MU 9-2151. ■ of General Convention he shall, according to the provisions of Article 1 Sec. 3 of the Constitution, 'serve until the next General Convention'. While it is likely that a man so elected by the House of Bishops would be elected again at General Convention and his election confirmed by the House of Deputies, he would until Convention continue in his Diocese and thus work under great difficulties.

"I believe, therefore, that I should carry on until the General Convention of 1964 when a successor could be elected in the usual way. I can continue my pastoral responsibilites; I can do my work as President of the National Council; I can preside at meetings of the House of Bishops. I plan to attend the sessions of the Anglican Congress next summer. It may be that this disability will reach a plateau and when I have learned to live with it that I shall be under no handicap and could continue until 1967. But I am not concerned with that possibility now. I do think, as I have said, that I can go on until 1964. If at any time I find that I cannot, I shall of course resign.

"Let me assure you that I am not a sick man. This is not due to the pressure of work; this could not have been foreseen in 1958. It may have had its origin, as with many who have this difficulty now, in a case of flu during World War I. But the onset of the trouble was quite unpredictable and unexpected.

"I regret very much that I cannot, for the time being, do all that I should be doing as Presiding Bishop, but I rejoice that I am still able to be of service to our Lord in his Church.

"I know you will pray that God will give me patience and a right judgment in the days to come."

Crucifixion Digs Out from Charred Ruins

"There's no question that we will rebuild in the same spot."

So said the Rev. Chiron W. Forsyth, Rector of the Church of the Crucifixion, 149th St. and Convent Ave., Manhattan. The church was destroyed by fire on March 25.

The five-alarm fire was discovered by neighbors about noon, when they saw flames licking up through several places in the roof. The blaze spread very rapidly, although the church was built of brick. The roof was wooden, however. Father Forsyth was making hospital calls when the fire started. The origin of the fire is still not known. Nobody was hurt.

The church itself, which seated 500, was totally destroyed. Only the walls were left standing, and even they probably will not be usable. The parish house adjoining the church was badly damaged, mostly by water, smoke and heat. The rectory, which also adjoins the church, had some water damage.

The total loss caused by the fire was estimated by Father Forsyth to be $500,000. The church, parish house and the contents of both buildings were insured for $224,000, the rector said. It is not known now, he added, how much of this amount the parish will actually receive.

The plant was built in 1906 as a Dutch Reformed church. It has been the Church of the Crucifixion for 25 years.

The parish has 607 baptised members, of which 527 are communicants. Since the fire, daily services have been held in the rectory living room, which was converted into a chapel. On Sunday, when three low masses are held, the dining room off the living room is opend up.

Father Forsyth says that the temporary chapel can, of course, accommodate only a small part of the parish. So parishioners have been asked to attend other churches if there is no room.

Bishop Donegan, who was at the fire scene in the late afternoon, offered the use of Synod House. The building is on the Cathedral grounds and is used for diocesan conventions.

The parish used Synod House on Palm Sunday and Easter. "But," Father Forsyth said, "we want to keep our services in the neighborhood as much as possible." ■

St. Peter's Plans Major Building Project

St. Peter's Church, Peekskill, is planning its first major building program since the early 1900's.

According to the Rev. Malcolm L. Foster, the rector, construction is scheduled to start July 15 on an addition to the parish house. Extensive renovations will convert the present rectory, a 13-room mansion, into a parish office building. A new rectory will be purchased.

The church is one of the oldest in the diocese. It was founded in 1767 and granted a Royal Charter by King George III in 1770. Its present sanctuary was completed in 1891. The structure being used for Church School and other educational purposes was erected in 1838, and is quite delapidated and will be torn down. The rectory, built about 1820, is a fine example of Federal period architecture, and the church wanted to keep it in use. But it stands at one of the busiest corners of the Peekskill business district, and for some years there has been a plan to move the rector to a more residential section.

Finally, Frank E. Dushin of Garrison, the architect, proposed turning the rectory into a parish office building, using four of the rooms as classrooms. Then, instead of a two-story parish house addition, as originally planned, this building would need to have only one story.

The project also will provide another advantage — easily accessible parking. The parish house addition will face a park behind the church. A new entrance will not only provide a pleasant access but also will bring municipal parking lots within a block's walking distance.

The cost of the entire project is estimated at $97,278. This includes $63,278 for the parish house addition, $4,000 for renovating the rectory, and $30,000 to purchase a new rectory. ■

Bishop Dedicates New Parish House At St. Edward

The first 175th Anniversary Fund project in Manhattan has been dedicated. It is a new parish house at St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, dedicated at a service of Evening Prayer on March 13, with Bishop Donegan officiating. The church, a mission of the Diocese, is on 109th Street, just off Fifth Avenue. It was thronged to capacity for the dedication.

The Bishop was accompanied by Bishop Boynton, Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy, and Canon Harold R. Landon, who acted as Chaplain to the Bishop. The service was conducted in both Spanish and English.

The new parish house is a two-story and basement structure adjoining the church. It is of cement block construction with brick facing, and contains a gymnasium, locker rooms, offices, classrooms, kitchen facilities and storage space. The complete cost was $336,185, including site acquisition, relocation of tenants on the site, demolition, and construction.

St. Edward, located in one of the city's most densely populated neighborhoods, has been carrying on an impressive program, both weekdays and Sundays, especially among young people in the area. The Rev. John H. Gill is the vicar, and he is assisted by the Rev. Donald C. Hagan and the Rev. Frank L. Knight.

According to Father Gill, the new building will be used for the mission's weekday recreation program, and for Church School classes on Sunday, as well as for coffee hours, meals, dances, and other special occasions. Having the new building will enable the mission to use the old parish house and rectory to broaden its remedial reading program. There are now approximately 30 teachers at work in this program, and it is hoped that now it can be expanded considerably. Father Gill said that new volunteers are being sought. ■

Old Friend Becomes New Assistant

An old friend from Bedford has joined the Rev. John C. Harper as his assistant at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square, Washington, D.C.

The Rev. F. Everett Abbott, Vicar of St. Luke's Church, Lanesborough, Mass., is the new assistant. When Mr. Harper was Rector of St. Matthew's, Bedford, Mr. Abbott served as a vestryman and superintendent of the Church School. He was a successful businessman, and served in the Army during World War II as a major.

Finally he left the business world and entered General Theological Seminary. He was ordained to the diaconate by Bishop Donegan in 1960 and became Deacon-in-Charge of the Massachusetts church. After his ordination to the priesthood by Bishop Robert M. Hatch of Massachusetts, he remained as vicar.

Mr. Harper left St. Matthew's, Bedford, for Washington, D.C., on February 1. St. John's Church, across from the White House, is known as the "Church of the Presidents."

Early in March, President Kennedy invited Mr. Harper to visit him at the White House, and a few days later the President visited Mr. Harper at St. John's. ■

Hard of Hearing May Sit Anywhere With This System

St. James' Church, Manhattan, has installed a novel system to aid parishioners who are hard of hearing. Unlike older systems, it involves no wires. Worshippers who can't hear well may now sit anywhere in church instead of in special pews equipped with hearing devices.

Since the installation of this system, the clergy have enlisted the aid of the entire congregation to help publicize its advantages — especially among those who have to strain to hear the service, but have not yet come to the point of recognizing an actual hearing loss.

Experiments to perfect the system have been going on for nearly a year. In order to receive the sound, persons may either borrow a hand-held, adjustable-volume "lorgnette" (which cost the church $100) or buy, for $85, an individual ear plug. The sound is broadcast over a wireless radio system incorporated into the church's public address system. Some persons have reported that their own hearing aids are able to pick up the radio waves directly, without additional receiving equipment.

Church officials said that they will be glad to demonstrate this new aid to any vestry or clergyman who would like to explore its use. The total cost for installing the equipment and broadcasting unit was under $500. This, however, involved using the existing public address system. ■

Rev. Kilmer Myers Named Director Of Chicago Urban Training Center

Fr. Myers

The Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, Vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, has been named director of the new interdenominational Urban Training Center in Chicago.

The Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang will succeed Fr. Myers on September 1.

This Center is a pilot project undertaken by eight churches. It will serve Christians all over the nation, and eventually those in overseas areas as well. It has been establishd to do these things:

1. Train and equip clergy and laymen to relate the work of the Christian church to the problems of large, metropolitan areas.

2. Gather information on such problems as planning, urban renewal and clearance.

3. Set up courses of study and programs for on-the-job training so that clergmen and lay people may understand urban culture better, and relate the Christian faith to it.

Father Myers is considered one of the leading authorities in the Episcopal Church on city-parish problems. Before going to Intercession, he was Vicar of the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Parish.

The eight churches supporting the Chicago Center are: the Episcopal Church, Lutheran Church in America, American Lutheran Church, United Church of Christ, Church of the Brethren, Reformed Church in America, Evangelical and United Brethren Church, and the Church of God. Episcopal Church support will consist of both manpower and funds. The Rev. James P. Morton, Associate Secretary of the Division of Domestic Missions, National Council; and the Rev. Gibson Winter, Associate Professor of Ethics and Society at the University of Chicago Divinity School, are on the Center's Board of Directors. National Council has appropriated $7,500 for the Center in 1963.

The Center's total budget for 1963 is $30,000, providing for a director and a skeleton staff. Full-scale operations will start in 1964, with an anticipated annual budget exceeding $250,000. ■

NEW CENTER OPEN FOR BUSINESS

With the completion of the new Episcopal Church Center, many Church agencies for the first time are housed under one roof. One by one, they have been moving in from near and far.

The most formidable part of the moving project was accomplished over the George Washington's Birthday weekend. The Department of Christian Education, which came down from Greenwich, Conn., was the first to arrive. Hard on its heels, over that weekend, came the departments and divisions which had occupied the 70-year-old Church Missions House at 281 Park Avenue South. At the same time, mail room operations were moved up from a building on 23rd Street.

Next to move in was Seabury Press, official publisher for the Episcopal Church—also from Greenwich. Then, in due course, came the Girls' Friendly Society, the Foundation for Episcopal Colleges, the Church Periodical Club, the New York Prayer Book Society, the American Church Building Fund, the Episcopal Church Foundation, and the Order of the Daughters of the King. The Episcopalian magazine, which is published in Philadelphia, opened a New York office in the Center.

Still to come, early this Summer, is the Council's Division of Research and Field Study, now located in Evanston, Ill.

The new building, a 12-story structure, is at 815 Second Avenue, corner of 43rd Street. It's two blocks from Grand Central Station. Both the building and its location are a far cry from the old "281," home of the Church's administrative arm since 1894.

Here are some of the salient features of the new headquarters:

* Its architectural design—modern but not cold; contemporary, yet retaining a medieval effect. Frederick J. Woodbridge, of Adams and Woodbridge, was the architect.

* Its basic construction—it is the first edifice in Manhattan to be constructed with a framework of the new, lighter-weight, higher strength steel. George A. Fuller Co. was the general contractor.

* The Chapel of Christ the Lord, on the street level, just off the main lobby.

* The story-and-a-half arcade with a double entrance—one to the main lobby, and the other to an Information Center and the Seabury Press book store.

* The lobby itself, in which may be seen a huge map of the world, fashioned out of 23,000 colored stones. Worked into this ceramic mosaic are animals and trees indigenous to the various countries.

* The spacious work areas on all floors. The building contains approximately 100,000 square feet of floor space, compared to 30,000 in "281".

* The Presiding Bishop's apartment at the top of the building.

The building cost $5,900,000, all reportedly in hand or pledged except $1,000,000. This total includes everything—land costs, construction and furnishing. ■

Missionary Study Starts In Richmond

The Diocese has begun a new missionary study plan in the Huguenot-Pleasant Plains area of Staten Island. The Rev. James W. Geen, a deacon, who recently was engaged in missionary work in the Bahama Islands, has been appointed by Bishop Donegan to head the study.

Mr. Geen also will be part-time assistant minister at St. Alban's Church, Eltingville.

The missionary study is an experimental program authorized by the Department of Missions to determine the potential for the Episcopal Church in a rapidly developing area between St. Alban's and St. Stephen's Church, Tottenville. Among other things, the neighborhood is on the fringe of a large urban renewal site now in the planning stage. Mr. Geen will be working directly with the Bishop and the Department of Missions on this program. ■

Women's Group Tours Cathedral

Twenty-one Episcopal Churchwomen from St. Mary's, Scarborough, recently spent a day at the Cathedral. The program, set up at their request, included Holy Communion in St. James' Chapel, followed by coffee and cake in the choir sacristies, a pilgrimage through the Cathedral, brief noonday prayers and an organ recital, a visit to the Exhibit Hall, luncheon, a quick tour of the Cathedral Library, and an inspection of the ECW workrooms in Diocesan House. The women arrived at 10 a.m. and left at 2 p.m.

Canon West was the celebrant at Holy Communion, assisted by Canon Landon. Canon West also led the pilgrimage through the Cathedral, showed some of the vestments used at the Cathedral and explained their significance. Canon Chase led the noonday prayers. Alec Wyton, Organist and Master of Choristers, gave the recital. Canon Johnson showed some of the color slides taken on his two-year Anglican tour. ■

letters . . . to the editor

Editor, The Bulletin,

I thought you might be interested in a most generous and entirely unexpected response to your recent article announcing this year's summer vacation program for people over sixty. The following is a letter from a woman who lives in Miami.

"In the March Bulletin, which is sent to me regularly, I read about the Summer Vacation Program for People Over Sixty.

"I would very much like to make it possible for one person to attend.

"Kindly inform me to whom to make my check for $60 payable."

We answered her letter and back came the check—but not for just $60. She sent $75! We were thrilled at the idea that someone who lives so far away felt prompted to help our project. You see, incidentally, how widely your magazine is circulated—and apparently read!

Esther Stamats
Director of Services for the Aged

Editor, The Bulletin,

Everyman written in the "dark ages"? (Bulletin, March, 1963, p. 14.) How could you!

Webster's Seventh New Collegiate defines the "Dark Ages" as "the period from about A.D. 476 to about 1000." To be sure, it continues, "broadly: middle ages." But that is broad indeed; simply a concession to popular ignorance. Surely the Christian church ought to know better!

By the time Everyman was written, Petrarch, Boccaccio, and Chaucer were long since dead; Botticelli and Leonardo da Vinci were at the height of their powers, and the first of the Tudors was on the throne of England. Probably, Martin Luther and Copernicus were grown men, and Columbus had discovered America.

This is the Dark Ages? Come now! Not unless that description fits everything before the Ninety-five Theses. And I would be most shocked to think that such was the thought of my church.

Constance B. Hieatt
Assistant Professor of English
Queensborough Community College

Editor's Note: Columbia Encyclopedia: "Dark Ages, see Middle Ages." "Middle Ages, period in Western European history following ancient times and preceding modern times. Exact dates . . . tend to be misleading .... For the beginning, one of the convenient dates is the fall of the Western Roman Empire in 476. For the end . . . the discovery of America by Columbus in 1492 ....The Middle Ages have been called the Dark Ages."

Overseas —

"I do not think the Church has ever solved the problem of how to keep the man in the pew adequately informed and challenged so far as his missionary obligations are concerned. There have been all sorts of answers. All kinds of panaceas. But it continues to be a problem.

"I think, rightly or wrongly, that our chief bottleneck is the clergy. Unless the parson in the parish is convinced and converted, and preaches the mission of the church, and invites speakers to do the same, there is no reason for people to be interested. Why should they be? Who is to tell them?"

There is a bright spot, however.

"Our faithful ally down the years has been the women of the Church," said Bishop Bentley. "They have been the people who have kept the missionary spirit alive and have prodded the clergy to do something about it." ■

A week-end retreat for all women of the Diocese will be held June 7-9 at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park. The retreat will begin with dinner Friday night and end with breakfast on Sunday. The cost, including room and meals, will be $14.50. Reservations should be made by writing or phoning the Suffragan Bishops' Office, Synod House, Cathedral Heights, New York 25, N. Y., UN 5-3600, Ext. 16. The retreat was arranged by Mrs. Douglas M. Glasspool, chairman of devotional life for the Episcopal Churchwomen, Diocese of New York.

There are 30 sermons in this collection, representative of great Christian preaching through the ages. Their scope is vast, extending from the fourth century to the twentieth, and they include some of Christianity's most famous preachers — Augustine, John Chrysostom, Thomas Aquinas, Wesley, Calvin, Luther, Donne, Schleiermacher, Newman, Inge, and a host of others.

The editor, who is now Vicar of St. James, Dover Plains, and St. Thomas, Amenia Union, originally presented a part of the collection during a series of noonday services while he was on the staff of St. Thomas, Manhattan. He is careful to explain that the sermons have been edited — "although the words and order remain those of the preacher" —and that the list of preachers is in no way intended to be inclusive. But the book is intended to be representative of a vast history which continues to impart light in our generation.

The book was chosen as the March selection of the Religious Book Club. It is Dr. Sadler's first book; he is planning another dealing with psychiatry and religion, the area of research for his doctoral dissertation at Harvard University.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AS ENGAGEMENT by David R. Hunter. $3.00. Seabury Press. 128 pages.

The Rev. David Hunter is the Director of our National Council's Department of Christian Education. He succeeded the Rev. John Heuss in 1952. During this period we have seen the production of curriculum materials for all ages and grades in the Sunday Schools, youth groups, vacation church schools, and adult groups. Behind all of this material stands a clearly defined philosophy or point of view with reference both to goal or purpose and to the kind of training which is needed in a parish if the goal is to be reached.

In this new book Dr. Hunter discusses both the purpose of Christian Education and the training process. Many of us have been exposed to some of the ideas in bits and pieces, but in this book we have the whole picture in an orderly, balanced manner. Anyone who wonders at times what the National Department of Christian Education is trying to do will find a simple answer here. Our own Diocesan Department is also working in this same general pattern, though not with the full scope of the National Department.

Dr. Hunter's thesis is that the role of Christian Education is to minister to people where they are now, and that it finds its focus on what God is doing. "Engagement" is defined as the moment when God acts in or upon the life of an individual and the individual faces the obligation to respond. This response must be seen as depending on the grace of God, and it develops a person who can change the culture of his times rather than simply conform to the culture. Obviously, a knowledge of how God has acted in the past is essential for the well-educated Christian and will help him understand better his response to God's action in his life.

The book is quite brief, but these points are all worked out in a lucid manner. I recommend it for everyone with any responsibility for education, and this includes most adults in the Church.

Care and Housing of Aged Discussed at Conference

The older person represents "the best untapped manpower reserve we have in the nation today!"

The words are those of William C. Fitch, Executive Director of the American Association of Retired Persons, who sounded the keynote of a Clergy Conference on the Care and Housing of the Aged. The all-day conference, held at the Cathedral on March 11, was sponsored by the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations and its Services for the Aged. It was particularly designed to inform the clergy who increasingly are confronted with the problems of older persons in their parishes. Clergy of several denominations attended, together with a number of laymen. The program, held in Synod Hall, was opened by Bishop Boynton. The speakers were introduced by the Rev. Robert C. Hunsicker, Chairman of the Advisory Committee, Services for the Aged, Department of Christian Social Relations.

Mr. Fitch, speaking on "An Important Commodity — Our Older Citizen," presented two main points: that many unscrupulous attempts are being made to exploit older persons, and that there is increasing recognition of older citizens' undiscovered values, talents and potentialities.

Mrs. Virginia O'Neill, Director of the Bureau of Special Services, New York City Department of Welfare, discussed the services of public welfare for older persons. Richard Hill, Jr., Special Assistant on Aging for the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal, described various kinds of aid available from state and federal governments.

Mrs. Marcelle Levy, Administrator of the State Office for the Aging, summarized recent legislation of interest to older persons and described services available from the State. Dr. Martin Taves, of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Washington, D. C. presented a survey of federal legislation. ■

Chapel Changes Name To All Saints Church

St. Thomas Chapel, which has been working toward parish status for some time, has reached another milestone. It has taken a new name.

On Easter Sunday, the Chapel officially became All Saints Church.

This does not mean the chapel's actual status is changed, emphasized the Rev. R. DeW. Mallary, Jr., the vicar. "But the separation in name from its mother church was a step both the rector (The Rev. Frederick M. Morris) and our own advisory board considered desirable at this time," he said.

St. Thomas Chapel, at 230 East 60th Street, has relied on the support and leadership of St. Thomas Church, Fifth Avenue and 53rd Street, for more than 100 years. Its movement toward independence began a little over two years ago. ■

Are Women 'Women' or Are They 'People'?

By LUCIA STICH

(Mrs. Frank Stich is diocesan ECW Chairman of Education)

Does the rest of the Church look upon women as "people," or does it just think of them as "women?"

This question was at the heart of a conference sponsored jointly by two departments of the diocesan Episcopal Churchwomen on March 27 at the Cathedral. Some 30 women, delegates of the seven convocations and the diocesan board, attended the conference. The sponsoring departments were Christian Social Relations and Education.

Miss Frances M. Young, Executive Director of the General Division of Women's Work, National Council, was the keynote speaker. She spoke first of women's unsuccessful efforts —since 1946—to become delegates at General Conventions. Present status of this effort is a proposal to change the word "layman" in the canons to "lay person." But every Convention so far has voted this proposal down, Miss Young said.

Women are not unduly discouraged or offended, she added. Still, encouraged as they are to work "as the Church," they don't quite understand that, while their contributions are gladly acceptable, they themselves seem not to be. Miss Young admitted that there are four women on the National Council. But she asked, "Do these women speak only as women, or are they full, contributing members?"

But by the same token, she said women are regarded with considerable kindness by those who work on the national level, and great effort is being made to coordinate the work of Christian Social Relations, Christian Education and the General Division of Women's Work—and, indeed, with the General Division of Laymen's Work.

Furthermore, more women are becoming vestry members, and many dioceses are seating them as convention delegates, she added, saying, "There is a growing recognition that the ECW is an invaluable channel for informing women about the Church's program, and for interpreting that program to and for the total parish." She urged women representatives to diocesan departments to explore creatively ways for increased cooperation.

But to understand how they can be more effective, women must understand what is happening to women in our present culture, the speaker warned. Her source was Betty Friedan, author of THE FEMININE MYSTIQUE, who claims that men today seem to be making a determined effort to make domestic life look appealing — to persuade women that what they really want is to retreat to the home. Advertising portrays modern homes as so glamorous and beauty aids so transforming that domesticity is irresistible. Still, more women are employed, and more are better educated. An "affluent society" has produced so much more leisure that educated women are more eager than ever to "do something worthwhile." Miss Young contended that the Church offers such opportunity—and abundantly.

After the address, the conference broke into three discussion groups, led by Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Diocesan President; and Mrs. Donald Roberts, CSR chairman. The writer led the third. As we reassembled, a surprising unanimity was evident.

Among the issues which seemed dominant were: wise apportionment of our time, the conflicting demands of family, church and world, being better parents and instilling Christian values into our children, putting these same values first always, the peace of the world, our relationship to men (and to other women), determining our identity, and, finally, death — which last addition brought a wholly new dimension to our discussion as we recognized how seldom we face this as Christians.

There was no hesitancy in listing the many obstacles confronting us as we try to meet the challenge of these issues: a serious lethargy prompting too many to accept things as they are; the difficulty of communicating when people don't really listen (or read); the serious absence of deep Christian conviction, resulting in lukewarm interest and motivation and lack of understanding; the difficulties of leadership; the need for education; the frequent lack of rapport (and support) between the clergy and the laity; the misunderstandings of spouses who feel relegated to second place—and children with the same responses. . . .

But, midway, the point was made that these issues and obstacles have nothing peculiarly feminine about them. They are problems confronting men, too. We are all in the same world. Though at times our points of view differ slightly, these are the concerns of us all as human beings. It was pointed out that, really, all the women want is to be thought of as people. The conference ended on this note: There are many questions, and some of them seem quite unanswerable, but we have the assurance that God means each of us to be a whole person. In serving him we can be made whole. ■

■ LEAKE AND WATTS Children's Home in Yonkers has elected the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector of St. Philip's Church, Manhattan, as a member of its board of directors. The Home, a 132-year-old agency, cares for some 470 neglected and dependent children on an inter-racial and inter-denominational basis. Before it moved to Yonkers, the Leake and Watts Home occupied the tract of land on which the Cathedral of St. John the Divine was built. What is now the Exhibit Hall once was one of the orphanage buildings.

■ MRS. ROBERT ANDERSEN, JR., of Los Angeles, has been appointed associate secretary of audio-visuals in the National Council's Division of Radio, Television and Audio-Visuals.

Mrs. Andersen, who began work April 15, will be chiefly responsible for the production of all Episcopal-related audio-visual materials. For the past nine years she has been script editor at Cathedral Films in Berkeley, California.

■ THE BAPTISMAL FONT on the cover of "Forward Day by Day" for Easter, 1963, is one of the photographs taken by The Rev. Howard A. Johnson, Canon Theologian of the Cathedral, during his two-year journey to all corners of the Anglican Communion. The font basin is a man-eating clam shell. Its pedestal is of dark wood decorated with religious symbols which are inlaid mother-of-pearl. The picture was taken in the British Solomon Islands. A booklet of photographs by Canon Johnson is being published by Forward Movement Publications for use at the Anglican Congress next August in Toronto. It is called "These are Anglicans."

■ THE EPISCOPAL ACADEMY has changed its name to The Episcopal School in the City of New York. According to Miss Priscilla Houghton, the director, tuition for Fall, 1963, will be $550, which is $50 higher than this year. A $10 non-refundable application fee will be required.

The school, located at 119 East 74th Street, was founded in 1961. ■

Five from Diocese Slated to Attend Anglican Congress

Five delegates from the Diocese of New York will attend the Anglican Congress to be held August 13-23 in Toronto, Canada. Some 1,000 Churchmen from all over the world are expected to attend these sessions.

Bishops, priests and lay delegates from the 344 dioceses of the worldwide Anglican Communion will be present. The Congress is not a legislative body. It is a gathering to deepen the fellowship of the Anglican Communion and be of educational value to the whole Church.

This year's Congress is the second to be held. The first was in Minneapolis, in 1954.

Representatives from this Diocese will be Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore, the Rev. Canon Howard A. Johnson, who will be among the speakers, and Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies of General Convention. ■

Atom Test Ban Would Promote False Sense of Security, Dr. Pollard Warns

Some 250 members of the Episcopal Laymen of New York heard the Rev. Dr. William G. Pollard warn against "a near hysterical reaction" towards a nuclear test ban.

Dr. Pollard is an Episcopal priest and a nuclear physicist who is executive director of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies. He addressed the annual conference of ELNY, held on Saturday, May 11, in West Point's Cadet Chapel.

Speaking on "Christian Answers on War and Peace," Dr. Pollard said that a test ban would lull nations into a false sense of security. "A ban on testing is not a ban on manufacturing."

He listed two other grounds for questioning the wisdom of a complete test ban: (1) the dangers of fallout are negligible; (2) testing would allow development of bombs that would be small enough to destroy military targets without destroying nearby cities.

Commenting on the Christian view of a test ban, the priest-physicist asserted:

"The majority of people assume that the only possible Christian position on this issue is an uncompromising insistence on a test ban. But is the ostrich necessarily exhibiting a Christian virtue when he buries his head in the sand to avoid the sight of unpleasant realities?"

On war itself, Dr. Pollard declared that, "There comes a time when every Christian must defend what he stands for." He emphasized, however, that a country must have well defined objectives when it enters a war and that it must cease fighting when these objectives are reached.

The ELNY conference began at 10:30 A.M. with Holy Communion in the Cadet Chapel. Bishop Wetmore, who is advisor to ELNY, was the celebrant. He was assisted by Chaplain Gordon Hutchins, Alexander Brown and the Rev. Colley Bell.

After the services, chartered buses took the men to lunch, some at Hotel Thayer and some at nearby Church of the Holy Innocents, Highland Falls. The buses then returned the men to the chapel for Dr. Pollard's address. ■

2,600 Children Throng Cathedral for Annual Presentation Service

An estimated 2,600 children, together with hundreds of parents and friends, thronged the Cathedral on May 25 for the annual presentation service.

Church School banners of many colors and designs led the delegations of vested choristers from all over the diocese. This annual service is the one at which missionary offerings, saved in mite boxes and given in special contributions, are offered at the Cathedral altar. This year's total was $24,797.

Bishop Donegan gave the address. A particular feature of the service was a group of exhibits prepared by Church School students and Girls' Friendly Societies in 17 churches. ■

St. Peter's Celebrates 25th Year; Dr. Leeming Resigns as Headmaster

Commencement exercises at St. Peter's School, Peekskill, were especially festive this year because the school is celebrating its 25th anniversary.

The ceremonies were held on June 8 with Bishop Donegan as the speaker. He also was the guest of honor at a luncheon attended by school officials, the graduates, and an estimated 100 alumni.

St. Peter's School was founded by the Rev. Dr. Frank C. Leeming. He has served as its only headmaster, but will resign August 1 because of illness.

From its beginnings in 1938 on borrowed property and with a bank balance of $20.60, St. Peter's has grown to the point where it owns 75 acres of land assessed at $1,300,000. From its original enrollment of 24 boys, it has grown to 117. Nine of its graduates have been ordained to the ministry.

On May 3, also as part of the anniversary program, the school held its annual glee club concert at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City. Nearly 600 attended. ■

THE COVER: The emblem for the Anglican Congress, designed by Canon West. The emblem centers in the Cross of St. George, which is surrounded by a circular band bearing the legend, in the original New Testament Greek, "The Truth shall make you free." Radiating from this band are the points of the compass, which illustrate the world-wide spread of the faith. At the North compass point is a mitre, time-honored symbol of the Apostolic Order which is essential to the Churches constituting the Anglican Communion.

Bishop Outlines Plan for Diocesan Reorganization

Major changes in the administrative framework of the Diocese of New York were advocated by Bishop Donegan in his annual message to Convention on May 14.

Most of these changes were subsequently approved by the delegates in their adoption of the Assessment and Council budgets. (See story on page 4.) The canonical changes necessary to effect the new program will be voted upon next year.

The four main items, which were approved, are:

1. Appointment, as soon as possible, of an administrative assistant to the Bishop and Council.
2. Employment of an administrative coordinator in the Department of Missions.
3. Employment of a person to direct a development program.
4. Redefinition of the responsibilities of the Treasurer of Convention, and assignment of his administrative functions to a controller.

Other Recommendations

These are the items involving permanent budget increases, the Bishop told the Convention. Developing from them were several other recommendations: Reorganization of the business office under the direction of the administrative assistant, a controller and an office manager; mechanization of the accounting system; institution of a single operating budget; improved financial reporting, including interpretive comments; and the development of a comprehensive personnel policy.

The division of the Department of Promotion into two departments has been proposed, the Bishop said — a Department of Development and Information, and a Department of Stewardship. He said the Council is studying this proposal and will make its recommendations next year.

Also to come next year will be recommendations to revise the role of the Treasurer of Convention. The Bishop said that the proposal is to make the position of Treasurer unsalaried—like that of the Chancellor. The administrative duties of the Treasurer, as they are defined at present, would be the responsibility of a controller. This has no budget implications, but does mean a change in the Constitution and Canons.

Bishop Donegan reported that the reorganization had been a matter for "constant and serious concern" during the past year, "not only because it involves a person who served this Diocese long and faithfully, but also because it has revealed the need for the reorganization . . . in order to meet the challenges and opportunities for Christian witness which we shall face during the next decade."

The personal reference was to Dr. Theodor Oxholm, diocesan Treasurer. "A little over a year ago," the Bishop said, "it was evident to him, as it was to me, that the burden had become too great for any one man to carry." Plans were to have been made to divide the responsibilities of the Treasurer, and to prepare for his retirement in 1965. Then last year, just before Convention, Dr. Oxholm became ill.

Burden Heavy

He suggested that a firm of management consultants be employed to study the functions of his office. With the unanimous consent of the Committee on Diocesan Finances, Cresap, McCormick and Paget were engaged, and their report was filed last March 27, the Bishop told the Convention. General approval of this report was voted at a joint Committee and Council meeting.

The Bishop said the Council proposed that steps be taken now to engage the administrative staff. Then a committee could be appointed to consider the canonical changes, and submit them in 1964. "With the Treasurer (Dr. Oxholm) thus relieved of his innumerable duties, he could serve as a consultant to the committee," the Bishop said.

In placing the proposal before the Convention, the Bishop traced the growth of the Diocese from the latter years of Bishop Manning, when "the Treasurership of the Convention was an unsalaried position involving no administrative duties whatever," and "there was no diocesan structure such as we now have." With the support of Bishop Manning, however, Dr. Oxholm gradually centralized the finances and prepared the first comprehensive missionary budget."

As the years went on, the diocese grew, its missionary responsibility grew, and parishes asked for more leadership in the fields of Christian Education, Christian Social Relations and Promotion, the Bishop said. The Bishop-and-Council type of diocesan structure was established in 1951. As time went on and communities changed, church buildings grew old and needed renovation, a survey was made to determine the most critical area for urban work. As a result of this survey the 175th Anniversary Fund Campaign was launched.

Its accomplishments have "vitally strengthened and expanded the witness and work of our Church," but even while the campaign was under way more urban churches sought aid, the Bishop reported. At the same time, additional assistance for the Bishop became necessary, and a second Archdeacon and a second Suffragan Bishop were added to the staff. And still the work continued to grow.

The Bishop said, "This period of expansion and growth has placed additional responsibility on the Bishop, who by virtue of his consecration is the chief pastor in the Church, and at the same time, chief administrative officer. He is expected, beyond

Racial Integration, Diocesan Changes, Are Key Topics at 183rd Convention

Integration was a recurring subject at the 183rd diocesan Convention.

The subject arose initially with the introduction of a resolution commending the mission of the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., and his associates in Birmingham, Ala. The topic was underscored at two different places in the Bishop's annual message to Convention, and it came up again in a resolution on urban renewal, presented by the Department of Christian Social Relations.

Other important business at the Convention included the proposed diocesan reorganization (see the Bishop's address, page 3) and the decision to accept formal membership in the New York State Council of Churches. Some 1,100 clerical and lay delegates attended the Convention held in Synod House on May 14. The day began with Holy Communion at 8:15 A.M. in the Cathedral, with the Bishop as celebrant. The legislative session opened at 10, following breakfast in Synod House undercroft.

Introduction of the Birmingham resolution was one of the first items of business, although its passage, by unanimous vote, took place later in the day. Copies of the resolution were sent to President Kennedy, the Governor of Alabama, the Bishop of Alabama, and the Rev. Martin Luther King.

The resolution called upon clergy, laity and parishes of this Diocese to support, by prayers, vocal support and financial aid, the efforts of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Birmingham and elsewhere. It urged the maintenance and extension of civil rights in all areas of this Diocese.

Bishop Donegan, who said he had not known about the Birmingham resolution, took a firm stand on civil rights in his annual address. He said, "The Episcopal Church never has, and never will, regard itself as an instrument designed to keep any group in a servile or minority status." He declared, "As Christians, and as Americans, all of us are humiliated and shamed by the tragic happenings in Birmingham."

Later, referring to the interim report of the Committee on Clergy Placement, (See story on page 6), the Bishop appealed for a responsive attitude toward integration within the ranks of the clergy.

The resolution on urban renewal contained the statement, "In order for urban renewal to achieve the maximum benefit for all, there must be included as a major purpose the fostering of good inter-group relations through active promotion of racial integration in housing."

Discussion of the diocesan reorganization began shortly before noon, with the introduction of resolutions calling for adoption of the Assessment and Council budgets. The Assessment budget, $343,976, is $28,510 higher than last year but because of $10,000 to be appropriated from cash on hand in the Assessment Account, the actual levy to parishes will be $18,510 larger.

Included in the budget are these new items: salary of the administrative assistant to the Bishop and Council, to start at $25,000 per year, and a machine costing $6,000 with which to mechanize the bookkeeping function of the Treasurer's office (a non-recurring item).

The Council budget, $643,439, is $50,041 higher than last year. The largest increase is in the Department of Missions, where a general increase in clergy salaries amounting to $10,000 has been made. Pension premiums increased about $7,000. A sum of $15,000 is budgeted for the salary of the new administrative coordinator in the Department of Missions, $10,000 for an associate director of stewardship (budgeted last year for $7,000 but not implemented) and $10,000 for a person whose job will be to find ways to finance capital expenses and other special needs which do not properly belong in the Council budget.

Six persons spoke on the resolutions to approve these budgets, which incorporate the recommendations of the management consultants. They were as follows:

The Rev. Frederick M. Morris, Rector, St. Thomas, Manhattan. He said that while he approved the appointment of the administrative assistant, he would suggest the diocese wait and see what recommendation this new man has to make about the rest of the program.

The Rev. John Heuss, Rector, Trinity Parish, Manhattan. He said he believed that in the interest of the health of the Bishop and of the Treasurer, the program ought to be adopted, and that it would be done in steps.

Charles F. Bound, member of the Finance Committee. He declared himself in favor of the reorganization program, and said he wondered how Dr. Oxholm has ever been able to wear so many "different hats."

The Rev. W. Colin Lee, retired Rector of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco. He called for more explanation of the program.

The Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector, St. Philip's, Manhattan. He asked the Convention to vote for the administrative assistant now, and take the necessary steps to make the rest of the program possible. "The need and urgency are such that we will find the funds," he said.

Richard H. Mansfield, former

Business at the 183rd Convention

PASSED

Amendment to Constitution to permit election of a controller. To be presented again next year.

Adoption of a 1964 Assessment Budget of $343,976 and a Council Budget of $643,439.

Resolution to accept formal membership in the New York State Council of Churches.

Resolution commending the mission of the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., and his associates in Birmingham, Ala.

Resolution recording two convictions about Urban Renewal: That it must be based on considerations of social justice and in its planning anticipate an environment meeting the highest social as well as economic objectives; and that it must include a major purpose of fostering good inter-group relations through active promotion of racial integration in housing.

Resolution commending parishes which have studied and planned housing needs for older persons, and urging other parishes to do likewise, either as a parish endeavor or in cooperation with other church and community groups.

Resolution requesting the Bishop to establish a committee to study both state and federal plans to enable legitimate sponsors to construct housing for the aged. This committee is to determine the feasibility of the Diocese of New York serving as a sponsor for such housing, and report at the 1964 Convention.

Resolution that the Convention will "encourage" Congress to enact a hospital insurance program for all senior citizens.

TABLED

Resolution from All Saints Church, Briarcliff Manor, urging "all members of the Christian family to unite in a careful examination of our literature, entertainment, news channels and advertising" on the ground that "that which is found wanting in good taste or offensive to moral sense should not only be rejected but decried."

NO ACTION

Resolution to change the voting procedure at Convention.

Resolution sanctioning the membership of women on committees of the Diocese as well as on the Council. (The Committee on Canons suggested that parishes be asked their views on this subject, all replies to be in before January 1.)

28 Elected to Diocesan Council, Boards and Delegations

Delegates to Convention elected seven new members to the Council of the Diocese, two members of the Standing Committee, eight deputies to the 1964 General Convention, four deputies to Provincial Synod next fall, and four provisional deputies to the Synod. Three men were nominated to the Cathedral Board of Trustees.

Those elected were:

To the Council (an executive committee of the Convention that exercises its powers between conventions, and directs the work of the five departments of the Diocese.)

The Rev. H. August Kuehl, Rector, St. Barnabas, Irvington; the Rev. David B. Weden, Rector, Grace Church, White Plains; the Rev. Orin A. Griesmyer, Rector, Transfiguration, Manhattan; Godfrey R. de Castro, attorney, Crucifixion, Manhattan; Thomas C. Pollock, educator, Ascension, Manhattan; and William A. McRitchie, banker, Christ Church, Bronxville, all Class of 1965, and the Rev. Raymond Cunningham, Rector, Grace Church, Millbrook, Class of 1964.

Standing Committee (a council of advice to the Bishop)

The Rev. Charles H. Graf, Rector, St. John's-in-the-Village, Manhattan, and Willis L. M. Reese, professor of law, Transfiguration, Manhattan, Class of 1967.

Convention Here?

It is not too soon to plan for the 1970 General Convention of the Episcopal Church, Bishop Donegan declared during his address at diocesan convention. He asked this Diocese to consider being the host for 1970. The 1964 General Convention will be held in St. Louis, and arrangements are well under way for 1967, the Bishop said.

The diocesan convention authorized him to appoint a committe which will study the proposal and report next year. New York has not been the host for a General Covention since 1913. Synod House was especially built for that occasion.

Ministry Scored as 'Segregated Career'

A committee on clergy placement, reporting at diocesan Convention, scored the ministerial profession as "the most segregated aspect of our Church." It added, "Worse still, it seems to be one of the most segregated careers in our society."

Commenting on this report in his annual address, Bishop Donegan declared: "As your Bishop I stand ready to give my wholehearted support to a policy of the placement of qualified clergymen to any position in this Diocese regardless of race, and I appeal for the understanding and open response of rectors and vestries of parishes to do the same."

The Bishop said, "..The issue of race relations is indeed critical and urgent . . . and the Church must not lag behind, clinging to forms of discrimination which even the world condemns. Let us make no mistake about it. We live in a revolutionary age . . . and we can no longer talk in terms of a gradualism which is so gradual as to be at a snail's pace."

The Committee on Clergy Placement was created as the result of a resolution of last year's Convention. It asserted that "the placement of clergy should be on the basis of merit and without racial discrimination," and it authorized the Bishop to appoint a group which would "study this situation and recommend constructive action . . ."

The resultant report was read at Convention by Dr. Charles R. Lawrence, a committee member and Director of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Brooklyn College. Other members are the Rt. Rev. Charles F. Boynton, chairman, the Rev. Messrs. Richard Gary, Clifford Lauder, C. Kilmer Myers, Benjamin Minifie, Frederick M. Morris and M. Moran Weston, and Henry L. deRham, William Logan, Clifford Morehouse, Carlos Munos and William Peebles. The group met three times during the past year, and will continue to meet.

Thus far, the Committee has explored the extent to which Negro clergymen are being employed in predominantly white parishes, or in other posts not having to do primarily with Negroes or race relations, both in the church at large and within the diocese.

In the church as a whole very few Negroes were found to be so employed. Aside from the Negro Suffragan Bishop of Massachusetts, this was the report: Three rectors and two curates in predominantly white parishes; two Negroes who have been serving in diocesan positions (both directors of Christian Social Relations); a priest who is a curate and university worker in Philadelphia; and a former staff member of National Council.

"Many will call this list an evidence of progress. Others will reply with the correct word of opprobrium —tokenism!" the report noted.

Within the diocese, a questionnaire was mailed to all parishes and missions, with "a gratifyingly high proportion of returns—61 per cent." Out of 208 sent, 127 were returned.

Of these 127, 22 represented all-white congregations. Nine were virtually all Negro. The rest were from 60 to 99 per cent white. Of the 122 predominantly white parishes, 87 indicated a willingness to employ a qualified Negro clergyman in some capacity ranging from rector or vicar to seminarian on field work assignment. But, said the report, "despite this overwhelming expression of favorable attitude, it should be noted that only four predominantly white parishes or missions reported that they currently employ Negro clergy or seminarians."

Further, many responses conveyed a feeling that Negro clergy could only properly minister to Negro parishes or Negroes within a parish. An occasional respondent felt that the Committee was "meddling or stirring up trouble where none existed."

"Your Committee is impressed with the magnitude and urgency of the task of the Church in this field," the report noted. Discussing the clergy, it continued, "It is one of the few professions in which Negro young men of ability have little chance of moving into fields of service beyond the segregated community. This fact undoubtedly has a negative effect upon the recruitment of clergy from among more promising Negro youth, and to the extent that this is true, the loss is one the Church can ill afford."

Treasurer of the Convention. He told the Convention that the management consultants who were employed specialize in religious and philanthropic work, and that their advice should be heeded. He declared that "the work of the Church would go forward more strongly" if the program were approved.

Acceptance of membership in the Council of Churches represented the third attempt to obtain this action. Similar resolutions had been presented in 1961 and 1962. This time, the Committee on Miscellaneous Business recommended tabling. But the Rev. James W. Kennedy, Ascension, Manhattan, moved to allow both sides to be heard. The motion passed.

Speaking in favor of joining the State Council were the Rev. J. Norman Hall, Rector, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations; the Rev. Arthur L. Kinsolving, Rector, St. James', Manhattan, President of the Protestant Council, City of New York; and the Rev. Richard Gary, Vicar, St. Mary's, Manhattanville. Generally, their position was that the Church is already participating in Church Council activities, that it might just as well do so on a formal basis, and that the cost would not be excessive.

Speaking in opposition were the Rev. Charles H. Graf, Rector, St. John's-in-the-Village, Manhattan; the Rev. Wendell Tamburo, Rector, Holy Innocents, Highland Falls; and Godfrey deCastro, lay delegate from Crucifixion, Manhattan.

Their position, generally, was that Council membership would be expensive, that it would duplicate the work of the Council, Diocese and Provincial Synod, and that the Council of Churches sometimes has professed to represent its members not only on matters on which all were agreed, but also on those where there was not agreement.

The vote was 203 for, 164 against.

The resolution to approve membership in the State Council of Churches was proposed by the Department of Christian Social Relations. The Department also was the author of resolutions on urban renewal, church and housing, housing for the aged, and health insurance. Before the Convention met, the Department drew up five guide lines about legislation on the aging.

*Such legislation should not discriminate as to race, color, religion or national origin.

*Provision should be made for all persons, whether or not they are presently covered by Social Security.

*Legislation should include provision for home services as well as for institutional care.

*Assistance should be available for those who need prescribed medication and are not able to pay.

*Such legislation should provide adequate administrative machinery to carry out the above considerations.

Bishop of New York Crosses were presented four laymen in recognition of their outstanding services to the diocese. They were George W. Burpee of Christ Church, Bronxville; Dr. Charles R. Lawrence, St. Philip's, Manhattan; Newell S. Covert, St. Mary's, Cold Spring; and Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, St. Luke's, Katonah. The Bishop is shown making the presentation. William A. McRitchie, next to the Bishop, received the cross for Mr. Burpee, who was unable to be present. Next in line are Dr. Lawrence, Mr. Covert and Mr. Morehouse. Inset shows closeup of the cross.

Bishop Outlines Plan —

his pastoral duties, which are primary, to be aware of, and responsible for, every activity carried on in the name of the Diocese; and he also has responsibility for the affairs of numerous Church-related organizations as well.

"To make this possible, and to provide a framework for administering the Diocese in the future, which will inevitably bring additional responsibilities, the management consultants make (their) recommendations."

The Bishop sketched the duties of the three new administrators.

The administrative assistant would be directly responsible to the Bishop. He would direct and supervise the work of the controller, coordinate and help provide leadership to the staff of the Council, serve as the diocesan budget officer and as personnel officer for lay employees. He would be expected to "develop and maintain cooperative arrangements with the parishes, serving as a source of reference. . . ." The Bishop said he had considered appointing a clergyman, but decided that "in my judgment it would be unwise."

The coordinator in the Department of Missions (which owns 64 properties) would plan and coordinate studies in conjunction with the Archdeacons in defining the needs for missionary expansion . . . direct and supervise property maintenance, develop annual and long-range capital expenditures, budgets for major repairs and new construction.

Concerning the development program, the Bishop declared, "I believe that if Diocesan long range plans were constantly before our people—if they knew what we wanted to do in the next five years, ten, fifteen years, and if they knew why we wanted to do this, our people would find ways to fulfill them.

"At present we have no regular capital budget for long term building, planning and growth. If a capital budget could be developed and supported apart from the missionary quota, I feel confident, a confidence shared by competent business executives, that the funds necessary would be forthcoming from sources presently unaware of our Diocesan needs. Sources presently untapped."■

THE SERMON'S THE THING . . .

that occupied the Bishop and his clergy during a series of conferences.

Clergymen must pay more attention to their preaching if they want their parishioners to do the same.

That's what Bishop Donegan told priests of the Diocese who attended one of the Clergy Conferences held at Tuxedo Park this Spring. There were five duplicate conferences in March and April. Each conference was from supper through lunch. Total attendance was 153.

These clergy conferences were established by Bishop Donegan in 1960. The purpose is to enable small groups to come together at the Conference Center for lectures and discussion and to become better acquainted with the three bishops and with each other. Topics at previous conferences have been pastoral counseling, evangelism, and the priest's own spiritual life.

Lecturers at this year's conference, on preaching, were Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton and Bishop Wetmore.

"What Is a Sermon?" was the first lecture, delivered by Bishop Donegan at the evening session.

The Bishop stressed the role of the preacher as "a transmitter, a channel of communication from the living God to the living souls who are there before him. The preacher goes into the pulpit . . . daring to trust that God has something to say through him."

Defining a sermon specifically, the Bishop said: "The sermon is the spoken word about God's word to men; it is not a showpiece; it is not a lecture; it is not essentially literary. A sermon is a person-to-person, face to face encounter; one who has met a Person, presenting him to his hearers."

Bishop Donegan called upon the clergy to give more attention to sermon preparation. There are so many demands upon a priest's time, he said, that this can easily be neglected.

"No immediate demands are made of the preaching office. People appreciate good sermons, but they are patient with mediocre sermons. They have learned to expect little, and often their expectations are fulfilled."

Stressing the place of the sermon, the Bishop declared, "Never let us underestimate the importance of preaching and the great privilege we have of preaching the Gospel."

The next morning at the clergy conference, Bishop Wetmore spoke on the preaching of doctrine.

He stressed the teaching aspect of a sermon, pointing out that, "Every occasion of preaching is an occasion of teaching."

Expanding on this, he declared:

"The Church has recovered, I think, from the terribly weak position that its primary teaching responsibility must be directed to children, and is now fully aware, at least in theory, that it is the teaching of adults that is the Church's primary teaching task. For a very high percentage of the congregation, the sermon in the regular church service is the only possible teaching impact."

Calling upon preachers to present the whole Gospel, to not arrest the people's spiritual development, Bishop Wetmore asserted:

"We have all been nauseated by sermons that never take Jesus out of the cradle and put him on the cross. Likewise, we cannot preach about Jesus' constant communion with his Father, and ignore the word from the cross: 'My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?' "

Alluding to a famous dean who used to try out his sermons on his scrubwoman, Bishop Wetmore declared:

"We must never forget that we are preaching to the dean's scrubwoman; but we must also remember that we are preaching to some of the smartest people alive. And when we are expounding the Church's doctrine it is easier for us to violate the good sense of the scholar than to damage the faith of the scrubwoman."

The final speaker at the clergy conference was Bishop Boynton, whose topic was "Sermon Preparation."

"There are four stages of congregational reaction that we must meet," Bishop Boynton said.

The reactions, and the preacher's responses to them, he listed as follows:

1. HO HUM.
   Start a fire.
2. WHY BRING THAT UP?
   Build a bridge.
3. FOR INSTANCE?
   Get down to cases.
4. SO WHAT?
   Ask for action.

Here are some of Bishop Boynton's comments on the four-section outline. (The outline is taken from the book "Public Speaking As Listeners Like It." ©1935 Harper Brothers.)

Ho-Hum

"We have no right to assume that our congregation is waiting with eager eyes and bated breath to receive our message. In the first section of the sermon — if possible, in the first sentence—start a fire."

Elaborating on each point, Bishop Boynton called on preachers to avoid the pitfalls of monotony, sterility and unintelligibility.

Why Bring that Up?

"Having caught the attention, the second thing we must do is to build a bridge from where our people are at the moment to where we want to lead them.

"All listeners live on an island—an island of their own interests. It would be amusing, were it not to prove so shocking, to analyse the islands of immediate interest of those who make up a congregation on an average Sunday morning.

"There would be those hungrily seeking guidance; the holier-than-thous; worried people, and hence distracted; stock market analysers; "Did I turn on the oven-ers?"; genuine skeptics; pillars, obedient to their bounden duty as members of the Church. You name them. They are all there. No wonder we must first build a fire, and then answer the question, 'Why bring that up?' "

For Instance?

"Let us assume that you have introduced your sermon interestingly, arresting the ho-hums; that you have convinced your listeners in your second section that the subject really has to do with them where they are. Now you must key your sermon to the hearers' relentless reaction — 'For instance?'

"It is in this, the body of the sermon, that one presents the information one wants the hearers to retain."

So What?

"The sermon should conclude with an appeal for action. In terms of a secular address, it would be Join! Contribute! Vote! Buy! Enlist! Write! In terms of a sermon, it should be Repent! Confess! Believe! Obey! Forgive! Love! Pray!

Concluding his talk, Bishop Boynton said:

"I hope you have not been offended by the informal—almost secular, but I hope not too flippant — presentation of how one might organize a sermon. I could have presented the subject in the ponderous words of St. Augustine in his monumental work entitled "On Christian Doctrine" Book IV, in which the most learned doctor deals with the method of teaching the Truths of the Scripture. His points are really quite the same as the four I have outlined, and in the same order."

In addition to the three speakers at each of the five clergy conferences, there was a great deal of discussion among those attending, both during the formal conference sessions and during many impromptu informal sessions afterwards.

DEPARTMENTS REVIEW YEAR'S WORK

A report from the Council of the Diocese of New York, and each of its five departments, is one of the most important items of business at each diocesan convention. Here are excerpts from these reports:

THE COUNCIL

Bishop Boynton, as Secretary of the Council, reported on meetings and decisions during the year. The Council has agreed to "participate in the general Protestant witness" at the New York World's Fair (1964-65) and provide funds for the Protestant Center being planned by the Protestant Council of the City of New York. National Council and the Dioceses of Long Island, Newark and South Florida have pledged their financial assistance. Bishop Wetmore has been the Bishop's representative in this program.

At its February meeting, the Council adjusted the 1963 budget to anticipated income, reducing it from $593,398 to $481,711. But it was noted that in 1962, total giving exceeded $1 million for the first time. National Council received $560,667 of diocesan funds in 1962, and is expected to receive $571,009 in 1963. Once again it will support the General Program of the Church "with the largest amount it has ever contributed, and with the largest amount ever paid by any diocese."

The Council approved the 1964 Council Budget (preliminary to consideration by Convention) and held a special meeting to discuss the "Study of the Functions of the Treasurer's Office." It passed two resolutions. One attested to the Council's general agreement with recommendations contained in the report. The second urged the Convention to authorize necessary action.

MISSIONS

Presented by Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy, for urban work, and Archdeacon George Brätt, for suburban and rural missions.

Specific projects undertaken in urban areas included completion of a new parish house and renovated church at St. Margaret's, Bronx, and a new parish house at St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan. Both were part of the 175th Anniversary Program, said Archdeacon McEvoy, and represent the final steps in carrying it out. Future plans include extensive renovations at St. Peter's, Chelsea; St. David's, Bronx; and St. Ann's, Bronx (where the cost will be borne by both the diocese and the parish). The Archdeacon mentioned also a "growing ministry to the arts" at St. Clement's, Manhattan, and a survey of the Church's potential on the south shore of Staten Island.

Articles and pictures in the diocesan Bulletin during the past year have kept church people well abreast of the Department of Missions' work, Archdeacon Brätt pointed out. He said activities have included the construction of a new church and parish house at St. Anne's, Washingtonville; and two consolidations which resulted in parochial independence — Ascension, West Park, and Holy Trinity, Highland; Grace Church, Port Jervis, and St. James, Callicoon. Eric Ley, Director of Stewardship, was credited with great aid in the "development of a realistic stewardship program" for these four congregations.

Archdeacon Brätt also reported the purchase of land in Lake Mahopac and Hopewell Junction for the construction and relocation of churches there.

PROMOTION

Presented by the Rev. Charles H. Graf, department chairman. The report was divided into three sections:

1. The diocesan magazine, The Bulletin, which is sent by Convention's authority to contributing members of the Diocese. During 1962, it received the Presiding Bishop's Award as the best diocesan magazine in the church.

2. Promotion in terms of publicity and the "impact" of the Diocese. Activities included operation of a Speakers' Bureau, counseling on individual public relations matters, obtaining Episcopalians to appear on radio and television programs sponsored by the Protestant Council, answering inquiries from newspapers, magazines, free-lance writers and individuals. The Director of Promotion was in charge of press relations and radio-TV appearances for the Archbishop of Canterbury when he was in New York in October. The director conferred with parishes of one convocation to discuss extending the Church's outreach in the community.

3. Stewardship. Recommendation to divide the Department of Promotion into two departments "because stewardship in particular has become a recognized separate function." The stewardship program, in its present form, is approximately three years old. During that time 50 congregations with more than 20,000 members have had direct exposure to the program through diocesan personnel. Clergy and laymen from 100 parishes have attended conferences. Fr. Graf said: "While we are at great pains to point out that the Division is not primarily a fund-raising organization, it should be made clear that we are deeply interested in better giving by church people; but our great concern here is that the giving

Bishop Presents 1962 Statistics

Bishop Donegan reported at diocesan Convention that 3,443 were confirmed and 252 were received during the past year, a total of 3,695.

The Bishop ordained 10 candidates to the Diaconate, and then advanced these 10 to the Priesthood. At present there are 78 men, from 50 parishes, preparing for Holy Orders. There are 530 clergy officiating in the Diocese, of which 439 are canonically resident, and 91 licensed to officiate. There are 159 lay readers, and six Deaconesses. ■ be for the right reasons." In the 50 congregations, there was an increase of 52% in the number of persons or families pledging, and an increase of 56% in amount pledged.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Presented by the Rev. H. August Kuehl, department chairman. He said, in part, ". . . Our Department is responsible for the work of the chaplains on college campuses in the Diocese; for the training of leadership in Church schools, in youth groups, and adult study groups. We are deeply concerned for the fine work of the boarding and day schools affiliated with the Episcopal Church. We are, in short, involved in the lives of persons from baptism to burial.

". . . There may well be some who would like to speak up at this point and say, 'But you still haven't told me to my satisfaction how the work of the Department affects me. . . '

"Here is my answer . . . we are all pastors to one another, each of us ministering according to the gifts God has given to him. The chief task of this Department is to expedite this ministry. No one here is untouched by this ministry of education, however indirect the contact may be. . . ."

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL RELATIONS

Presented by the Rev. J. Norman Hall, department chairman. The Department, "with great regret" received the resignation of its executive director, Albert E. Brownbridge.

Its year's work included study and action as the result of several resolutions passed by Convention last year—on extremists, on raising the age limit for drinking from 18 to 21, on housing for senior citizens, and on medical care for the aged. 1963 Convention resolutions entitled "On Church and Housing," "On Housing for the Aged," "On Amendment to Kerr-Mills Act," and "On Health Insurance" were presented by the Department as an outgrowth of its study in these areas.

The Department held a two-day meeting last October to set goals for a two-year period. Services for the Aged co-sponsored a pioneer project in camping for older people, and held a one-day clergy conference on Care and Housing of the Aged. In one church-related institution, a series of consultations on integration was held, and specific changes in practices resulted. A consideration of the topic "Public Policy with Regard to Social Welfare" was begun. A Department member has taken the responsibility to promote a program for the abolition of capital punishment in New York State. The entire Department cooperated with the Department of Missions in its Migrant Labor Ministry, and will do so again. It worked with Christian Education on conferences designed to make both clergy and laity understand better their role as church people in the community, on the job, and in the home.

FINANCE

Presented by Boudinot P. Atterbury, department chairman. He spoke of the necessity to pare down the 1963 budget because parish payments failed to meet quotas, and he described the preparation of a 1964 budget. "Dollar figures, showing growth in the Council's budget of over 100% since 1952, do not begin to tell the story, because a still greater multiplication of its services to the Diocese has resulted from the Council's economy and the conscientiousness of its servants," he said. Mr. Atterbury added, "The Missionary Quota deficits that have so greatly concerned us in the past will, I am sure, pass away as, with the help of the organizational changes which the Bishop has described, the good news of the Departments' effectiveness becomes better known and constant use of their unique facilities becomes a parish habit throughout the Diocese." ■

Intellectual Front Crucial, Kline Tells ECW

"In every age, the Church, when true to its mission, has been at the focal point of human destiny," Dr. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College, told several hundred Episcopal Churchwomen on May 11 at the Cathedral. He declared: "The crucial front today for the Church is the intellectual front," because in today's world "the new reaches of the human mind and new social patterns which are emerging are the frontiers of discovery."

Dr. Kline delivered the sermon at the Holy Communion service and Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering. The day's events also included luncheon in the undercroft of Synod House, and the ECW annual meeting.

Dr. Kline urged the ECW "to put your special and unstinted strength back of the Church's witness to the new and fast-emerging community of intellect." He particularly urged support of the eight colleges (Trinity, Bard, Hobart, Kenyon, Shimer, St. Paul's, St. Augustine's, and University of the South) which have a special relationship to the Episcopal Church. He said: "I believe the issue is very clear. What is happening on college campuses and in laboratories, in social research, and among younger leaders in literature and the arts, is the modern counterpart of the discovery of new lands . . ."

The Church's "witness" in the areas of mind, study and research means chaplaincies, Dr. Kline observed, but even more important, it means "training more of our best young people all the way to the doctorate in the major branches of learning, so that they can tell of God in the language of the learned — so that Christian conviction can be set forth on just as intellectually respectable a level as is post-graduate chemistry . . ." Bishop Boynton officiated at the service.

The United Thank Offering total was $32,618.70, from 8,771 women.

Here is a breakdown by convocations:

2 Staff Members Leaving Diocese

The Department of Christian Social Relations will lose two staff members in August.

Albert E. Brownbridge, Executive Director since 1957, will leave August 30 to join his family in England. Before coming here, Mr. Brownbridge was Director of the Contributor's Information Bureau of the Community Council of Greater New York.

Miss Esther C. Stamats, Director of Services for the Aged, has been asked to become Organizing Executive of hospitality houses operated by the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers' Association in Washington, D. C. She will also be director of the hospitality house run jointly by these organizations at the Hotel Dodge in the nation's capital. Miss Stamats, who came to the Diocese a year ago, previously had been with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and helped plan the 1961 White House Conference on the Aging. She will leave August 1. ■

St. Alban's Church Leads In Staten Island Fire Relief

It's one thing to contribute to disaster relief when the disaster is on the other side of the world, but it's quite another thing when the disaster is right where you are. The almost spontaneous mobilization of Staten Island residents to help their burned-out neighbors testifies to this.

One of the leaders in disaster relief after the island's destructive fire was the congregation of St. Alban's Episcopal Church.

The series of fires began about 10:00 A.M. on Saturday, April 20. Fanned by high winds, the flames gutted 100 homes and left 500 persons homeless.

One St. Alban's family and two St. Stephen's families had their homes destroyed. The fire did not touch any Episcopal churches, though it came within three blocks of St. Stephen's.

On Sunday, as the ruins of the previous day's disaster still smoldered, the congregation of St. Alban's gathered for services.

The rector, the Rev. Robert W. Renouf, spoke about the fire and what the parish could do to help its victims. There was a special offering at all three services. Clothes and other necessities were sought.

The offerings came to $700, including two $100 checks. Parishioners began to bring clothing and other materials to the parish house shortly after the first service.

Father Renouf decided that the parish should help fire victims in one particular area, an area five miles from the church known as Sandy Ground. One reason Sandy Ground was selected was that the Rev. James W. Geen, a missionary for the diocese, had been making a study of the area. He knew some of the people, especially a resident named Bromley Munro.

A distribution center was set up in the Munro home, but the rooms soon became so crowded with clothing that the center had to be moved to the basement of nearby A.M.E. Zion Church. Members of Zion and of St. Alban's worked long hours sorting the mountains of clothing. Clothing, kitchen utensils and appliances, blankets and other items for the home poured into the center. Most of it came from St. Alban's parishioners at first; but, as the word got around, people brought things from other Staten Island Episcopal churches and from Brooklyn, New Jersey and Queens.

Several Staten Island rectors preached on some aspect of the fire. The Rev. Meredith M. Calvert, of St. Stephen's, took note of the fact that erratic winds caused one house to be burned while one right next to it was spared. He cautioned against too much talk about "God spared my house," lest it be concluded that God also burned the house next door. ■

Ascension Day Youth Program Held in Yonkers

Teenagers from Yonkers' six Episcopal parishes went to church instead of school on Ascension Day.

Taking advantage of a state law which allows absence from school for special religious observances, they gathered at St. Paul's Church for a "Day for Youth." Bishop Boynton and the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, diocesan Director of Christian Education were the speakers. The theme was "The Church, the Youth, and the World Today."

The youngsters checked in as usual at their respective schools, and were then transported to St. Paul's for Holy Communion at 9 A.M. Father Cragon delivered the keynote address, which was followed by a film, discussion, lunch, more discussion and the final prayer. Bishop Boynton gave the closing address.

The film — "The Rim of Tomorrow" had an Oriental theme. But the teenagers noted that an individual's role as a Christian is not too different no matter where he lives. The problems — one's political conviction, marriage choice, role in society — have certain aspects common to all, the young people agreed.

Father Cragon described the program as "a day well spent," and said his Department would like to see other communities take similar advantage of the state's provision for released-time projects on religious festivals. ■

Gallaudet Home Fills Deep Need

by Joseph Martin

Katherine Kriesworth is a woman you can't feel sorry for, because it's so obvious she doesn't feel sorry for herself.

Miss Kriesworth is 73 years old, blind, deaf and mute. BUT — she reads the newspapers, writes letters to people all over the world, carries on lively "conversations," and gets around by herself.

Miss Kriesworth is one of 15 men and women who live at the Gallaudet Home for Deaf Mutes, the only institution of its kind in the East. The home is in Poughkeepsie and is operated by the Church Mission for the Deaf. Bishop Donegan is the president and Archdeacon McEvoy is secretary. Dr. Theodor Oxholm was treasurer for many years, though the present treasurer is Russell E. Aldrich, a member of the Diocese's Standing Committee.

When this reporter visited Miss Kriesworth in her room, he was introduced by Mrs. William Hamilton, a staff member who is deaf but can speak as well as a hearing person. She used to teach deaf children.

The two ladies conversed by holding hands and signaling with the fingers. The introduction over, Miss Kriesworth handed me a card offering a few hints on communicating with the deaf and blind. The gist of it: relax, don't be self-conscious or embarrassed.

Then we began conversing—in a strange yet effective way. Miss Kriesworth "spoke" by typing on a regular typewriter. I replied by speaking. Mrs. Hamilton read my lips and took Miss Kriesworth's hand to pass on what I had said. Surprisingly, the communication was fairly rapid.

A highly inventive person, Miss Kriesworth has devised many ways of meeting her blindness handicap. She knows what's in a drawer or box by feeling the shape or size of a button attached to it. She also uses signs—signs that she types herself on her Braille typewriter.

There are books and magazines neatly stacked around the room. Through her lightning-fast fingers, she read a newspaper and then typed out for me what she had read.

Miss Kriesworth was born deaf but did not go blind until she was 46. She had two brothers. One was blind, the other blind, deaf and mute.

The Gallaudet Home as an institution was founded in 1885 by the Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes. It was named for the Rev. Dr. Thomas Gallaudet, who founded St. Ann's Episcopal Church for the Deaf, in Manhattan, and the Church Mission.

For 49 years the Gallaudet Home was located in Wappingers Falls. In 1950, it was moved to a large Victorian mansion in a wooded residential section of Poughkeepsie. Men and women of all creeds are accepted. Each resident has a private room.

The home has a staff of six, who are under the supervision of the Board of Lady Managers. Miss Annette I. Young is President.

Members of the family (a term used consistently at Gallaudet Home) pay for all or part of their care. But the total payments are not enough to operate the home and maintain the building and also provide such extras as birthday parties and holiday events. Gifts from churches and individuals help keep the home open. Donations may be sent to: The Gallaudet Home for Deaf, Inc., c/o Miss Blanche Horton, Box 5, Fishkill, N. Y. ■

Dr. Barrett Is Consecrated Bishop

More than 1,000 persons, including parishioners and friends from this diocese, attended the consecration on May 11 of the Rev. George W. Barrett as the fourth Bishop of Rochester.

Bishop Donegan served as consecrator. Eight other bishops also participated in the centuries-old rite, which took place in Rochester's largest church, Christ Church.

Dr. Barrett, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, for the past eight years, was elected at a special diocesan convention last February 5. He succeeds the Rt. Rev. Dudley S. Stark, who retired in December after serving 12 years.

The new bishop's pectoral cross was a gift of the Women of Christ Church, Bronxville, and his episcopal ring was given by present and former wardens and vestrymen.

Nine bishops participated in the consecration. In addition to Bishop Donegan, they were Bishop Stark and the Rt. Rev. Daniel Corrigan, Director of the Home Department, National Council, the co-consecrators; the Rt. Rev. Donald J. Campbell, Executive for Development at Episcopal Theological School, and the Rt. Rev. Lauriston L. Scaife, Bishop of Western New York, the presenting bishops; the Rt. Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., Bishop of Massachusetts; the Rt. Rev. Walter M. Higley, Bishop of Central New York; the Rt. Rev. George L. Cadigan, Bishop of Missouri; and the Rt. Rev. Charles B. Persell, Suffragan Bishop of Albany and former Archdeacon of the Diocese of Rochester.

The sermon was delivered by the Rev. John M. Krumm, Chaplain of Columbia University. Dr. Krumm said that the role of a bishop in today's world has "wholly new and unprecented dimensions." It is neither that of a "chief martyr," as it was in the second century, nor that of a "prince-prelate" as it was in Tudor England. Today, Dr. Krumm said, a bishop must see the Church as it is, including its weaknes, must know the strength God can bring out of such weakness, and place trust in the future.

The service was televised, with Canon West narrating.

Other clergy from this diocese who participated were the Very Rev. Lawrence Rose, Dean of General Theological Seminary, and the Rev. Charles W. Scott, Associate Rector at Christ Church, Bronxville.

A luncheon at the Sheraton Hotel, attended by 100 members of Bishop Barrett's former parish in Bronxville, followed the consecration ceremony. Bishop Stark was the speaker. Later, a reception in honor of Bishop and Mrs. Barrett was held at Diocesan House. ■

East-West Division Getting Year's Trial By Westchester ECW

The Westchester Convocation of Episcopal Churchwomen has reorganized its four divisions into three. They will run east and west, rather than north and south as in the past.

The change was approved by the ECW at its 75th annual meeting at Hastings-on-Hudson on May 16.

According to the plan, the Northern Division will include all communities north of Ossining and North Salem; the Central Division, all communities south to Hastings and Larchmont; and the Southern Division, all parishes in Yonkers, Mount Vernon, the Pelhams and New Rochelle. Each division will be further broken down into "areas." The plan will be used on a trial basis for one year. ■

Trinity History

A limited edition is off the press of Volume VI of A HISTORY OF THE PARISH OF TRINITY CHURCH IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK. It was written by the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Bridgeman, historiographer of Trinity Parish. The book deals with the rectorship of the Rt. Rev. William T. Manning while he was at Trinity (1908-1921), and previews his future work as the Bishop of New York. The author covers major movements in the Church during that period also. The book may be obtained from Trinity Parish, the publisher. ■

Second Contest Opens; Previous Winners Out

Diocesan magazines and newspapers within the Episcopal Church have been invited to enter the second competition for the Presiding Bishop's Award. Any publication may enter—except those which won last year's contest.

Last year The Bulletin of the Diocese of New York was judged the best magazine in the nation, and The Olympia Churchman, Diocese of Olympia, Wash., the best newspaper.

The competition is sponsored by The Episcopalian, national monthly magazine, with the approval of the Presiding Bishop and the cooperation of the National Diocesan Press Association. ■

. . . in brief

■ BISHOP DONEGAN officiated at the blessing of the new chapel at the American Church Union house, Pelham Manor, on June 11. The chapel was set apart with a dedication to St. Athanasius. A plaque was blessed commemorating the gift of the entire house to the ACU in memory of Ethel Kurth and William T. Haebler. Also blessed was a crucifix in memory of the late Bishop Manning.

■ THE STORY of Canon Howard A. Johnson's epic journey to 80 countries of the Anglican Communion will be the first book to be offered by the newly formed Living Church Book Club. The book, GLOBAL ODYSSEY, is being published this month by Harper & Row at $5.95, but will be available to Book Club members at a substantial saving.

The Club was organized by The Living Church, weekly news magazine which deals with the work and thought of the Episcopal Church. Club members will receive four books a year. They may either pay $16 a year in advance, or pay for each book as it is received. Canon Johnson's book has been timed to coincide with preparation for the Anglican Congress, to be held in Toronto in August.

■ HENRY McCORKLE, editor of The Episcopalian, monthly magazine of the national Church, has been elected president of the Associated Church Press. He succeeds Edwin H. Maynard, editor of The Methodist Story.

■ GENERAL Theological Seminary has elected the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang to its Board of Trustees. Father Lang, Rector of St. Peter's, Westchester, (the Bronx) for 20 years, will become Vicar of Chapel of the Intercession, Manhattan, on September 1. Also elected to the Board was the Rev. Stanley P. Gasek of Utica. Both men will fill unexpired terms caused by the election of the Rev. James W. Montgomery as Suffragan Bishop of Chicago and the Rev. Albert A. Chambers as Bishop of Springfield. ■

Diocese Appoints Rev. Richard Kirk

Fr. Kirk

The Rev. Richard J. Kirk, until last July the Rector of St. Mark's, Yonkers, is now serving as the new Associate Director of the Department of Christian Education.

According to the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of the Department, his primary responsibility will be youth work. The position was authorized in the budget approved by Diocesan Convention last May. Fr. Kirk began work on August 1.

His appointment brings the department staff up to three. The other member is Miss Irene Henderson, Associate Director, who is principally in charge of children's work and released time. Mrs. Viola Pinder is the department secretary.

Fr. Kirk, 32, was Rector of St. Mark's for nearly five years. For two years previously he was Vicar of St. John's Church, Maple Shade, N.J. He was graduated from Princeton University with a bachelor of science degree in engineering (with honors) in 1953. He attended General Theological Seminary, was ordained in 1956 and earned his master's degree at Temple University in 1960.

In the field of youth work, he started in the Diocese of New Jersey as president of the diocesan Young People's Fellowship, and member of the Provincial and National Youth Commissions. After his ordination he was advisor for the Young Laymen's Organization in New Jersey. He was youth advisor for the Westchester Convocation for two years and chairman of the Youth Division, Department of Christian Education in this Diocese for a year. Last year he served on the Wooster Conference staff and directed a session of the Wilderness Conference. He also was a clerical delegate to the North American Ecumenical Youth Assembly and the Convocation of Episcopal Young Churchmen. ■

Convocations to Discuss Race

Integration will be the topic of the fall Convocation meetings this month. Every church member is invited to attend the meeting in his own geographical area. They will be held as follows:

Richmond: Sunday, Oct. 20, Christ Church. Evening prayer, 4 P.M., with procession of clergy, vestrymen and vested choirs. Panel discussion by group from Epiphany, Manhattan, on their impressions of the March on Washington.

Manhattan: Wednesday, Oct. 30, 8 P.M., in Synod Hall at the Cathedral. Topic, "The Church and Integration in Our City." Speaker, Whitney Young, Jr., Executive Director of the National Urban League. Panel discussion on education, housing and employment will follow.

Bronx: Sunday, Oct. 20, 4 P.M., at Trinity Church, Trinity Ave. and East 166th St. Speaker, the Rev. Richard B. Martin, Rector of St. Philip's, Brooklyn, and formerly Archdeacon of Southern Virginia.

Westchester: Sunday, Oct. 20, Christ Church, Bronxville. Choral Evensong, litany, 4:30 P.M. Social hour and box supper. Round-table discussion, 6:30 to 8 in the parish house. "What it Means to Be a Negro in Westchester County." The Rev. Henry S. Sizer, Jr., Dean of Convocation, will be moderator. Discussion leaders—the Rev. Arthur C. Moore, Rector, St. Simon the Cyrenian, New Rochelle, "What it Means to Be a Negro Priest and Pastor"; Joseph Jackson, Chairman, Westchester Negro Labor Council, "What it Means to Be a Negro Seeking Adequate Employment"; Mrs. Sidonia Trommer, Vice Chairman, Housing Council of the Westchester Urban League, "What it Means to Be a Negro Seeking Decent Housing"; Paul Zuber, Harlem attorney, legal representative of Negro communities in New Rochelle and Englewood, N. J., "What it Means to Be a Negro Seeking Full and Adequate Education for his Children." Resource persons will sit with these four and assist in answering questions.

Dutchess: Sunday, Oct. 20, St. James', Hyde Park. Evening Prayer, 5 P.M. Talk by Dr. Calvin Waite, local chairman of the NAACP, on "Difficulties in Housing." The Rev. Raymond Cunningham, Rector of Grace, Millbrook, will report on the March to Washington. After dinner, provided by the Women of St. James', the BOMED players will give a drama on "The Christian in an Urban Society." The event is a joint meeting of the Convocation and the Episcopal Churchwomen of Dutchess Convocation.

Ramapo-Hudson: Joint meeting. Sunday, Oct. 20, 8 P.M., Good Shepard, Newburgh. Speaker, Dr. Tollie L. Caution, Associate Secretary, Division of Domestic Mission, Home Department, National Council. "The Church and the Racial Crisis." ■

Cathedral Holds Forum On Religious Liberty

A college professor and a Roman Catholic priest took part in a summer forum entitled " An Ecumenical Encounter: Religious Liberty," given at Cathedral House on July 14. The speakers were the Rev. John B. Sheerin, editor of The Catholic World, and the Rev. William L. Miller, Associate Professor of Social Ethics at Yale Divinity School. A discussion period followed their prepared talks.

The Rev. Peter Chase, Canon Pastor of the Cathedral, who was the moderator, reported that the overwhelming amount of agreement in this Catholic-Protestant dialogue made a deep impression upon the clearly ecumenically-minded audience. ■

The Bishop's Message

OCTOBER IS, FOR MOST OF US, a time of beginning again with new zeal and interest in the church's task. The five of us who represented this Diocese at the Anglican Congress held in Toronto, August 13th to 23rd, have the value of that splendid experience to start us off with greater vision. So also do the dozens of clergy and laity from this Diocese who visited the Congress.

Anglicanism is indeed a miracle to behold! From the great services in Maple Leaf Gardens, to the huge plenary sessions and smaller discussion groups we were all confronted with reminders of our history, our great size, and our awe-inspiring inclusiveness.

We were required to do hard thinking by our giants, the Primates, Archbishops and Presidents of Provinces. Meeting before the Congress met, they surprised even themselves when they developed the document entitled, "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ." They presented it to the Congress for our information and reaction, but the press has wrongly considered it as a document approved by the Congress. I believe the Congress would have approved it if this had been within its power, but in fact this tremendously exciting program for Anglicanism will only become official as each separate branch of the Communion studies it and accepts the huge responsibilities involved.

The whole Congress was, however, an exercise in mutual responsibility and interdependence. It is my hope that every priest in the Diocese of New York will, as the Congress did, study the frontiers on which he ought to be working, and lead his people to do likewise. The concept of Church which was assumed in the Congress program—reminding us of our responsibilities on the religious, cultural and political frontiers—should mark the chief lines of planning and action for our parishes.

We who were at Toronto will not soon forget the inspired leadership of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Primate of All Canada, Bishop Stephen Bayne, Canon Max Warren, and many others. We will try through the next year to convey to our clergy and laity as much of the vision as time will allow.

We are on the edge of what the Archbishops called a "rebirth of the Anglican Communion, which means the death of many old things but infinitely more—the birth of entirely new relationships." This will be costly for us all. A whole set of priorities is called for—priorities in our prayer life, in our parish planning, in our present expenditures, and in our loving concern for Anglicans of many tongues and races.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

500 Persons from this Diocese Join March on Washington

by Joseph Martin

An estimated 500 persons from churches in this diocese took part in the March on Washington August 28.

Of these, 255 went on six buses chartered by the diocese's Department of Christian Social Relations; and 180 members of St. Philip's, Manhattan, traveled on four buses chartered by that parish. Other New York Episcopalians went with neighborhood associations, NAACP and CORE branches, and union locals.

This reporter made the trip on one of the Department of Christian Social Relations buses, which left from Synod House, on the grounds of the Cathedral.

Assembly time was 3:30 A.M., and most of the "marchers" were on time.

Seven parishioners of Grace, Millbrook, began the drive to the Cathedral at 1:30. They, as well as many others who made the trip to Washington, had only two or three hours' sleep or none at all.

Despite the unholy hour, people were in good spirits as they gathered in the undercroft of Synod House for coffee and doughnuts.

As departure time neared, instructions were given by the Rev. Richard E. Gary, who was in charge of the caravan. Interspersed with the many "what to do when" details, Mr. Gary warned that three of the buses are normally used to take people to racetracks.

"You people on those buses may never get to Washington. We have to pass Laurel. Those buses may just home in on the track."

The six buses left Synod House at 4:45 and were well out on the New Jersey Turnpike when dawn broke. Along the route, detailed instructions were given: where to march, what to do if insulted or struck, location of facilities.

We arrived at the Washington line at 10:30. All buses were met by the police, who escorted six buses at a time to the Washington Monument grounds. Because of the escort and because the streets of Washington were almost deserted, we were at the Monument in 15 minutes.

No attempt was made to keep the occupants of all six buses together. Once we left New York, each bus was on its own. The people of each bus did stay more or less together, however.

The March itself was highly informal. There were no marching units, no floats, no bands—simply a sea of people walking along two broad avenues from the Monument to the Lincoln Memorial. But it was this informality, this lack of snap and precision, that made the protest march more an expression and less a show.

We will not go into the Lincoln Memorial part of the program, as it was fully reported by the press. New York Episcopalians, like everyone else, sat on the grass and watched the proceedings.

The return trip to New York was uneventful. The last bus arrived at the Cathedral at 1:45 a.m.—exactly 21 hours after it left.

And those seven from Millbrook? They got to bed at 4 a.m., over 27 hours after arising.

Only time will tell the effects of the March on Washington. Regardless of its other consequences, however, it gave Negro and white Episcopalians a chance to know each other better. Who can remain strangers after 13 hours together on a bus? ■ a cement truck in an attempt to stop work at the Rutgers housing project on the Lower East Side. Charging the unions working there with racial bias, they were attempting to stop construction until the city enforced existing anti-discrimination laws.

All of the nine, except one, live and work on the Lower East Side. The three Episcopal priests are the Rev. William D. Dwyer and the Rev. Michael Allen (see above) and the Rev. Richard E. Gary. Mr. Gary, priest-in-charge of St. Mary's, Manhattanville, took part in the demonstration as Manhattan chairman of Christian Social Relations for the Protestant Council. The deacon is the Rev. Thomas F. Pike, curate at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie.

The other five arrested were two Baptist ministers, a Presbyterian minister and a seminarian, and a social worker.

The nine men, charged with disorderly conduct, were held in jail one morning and then released for later trial.

At the trial, Criminal Court Judge William E. Ringel gave the men suspended sentences after rebuking them for "taking the law in your own hands."

Bishop Boynton appeared for the defense. In a prepared statement, he quoted the Presiding Bishop's support of demonstrations and then gave his own support for "clergymen and lay people in this diocese to take part in public desegregation demonstrations held anywhere under responsible leadership."

The General Presbyter of the Presbytery of New York City and a Baptist spokesman also read supporting statements.

The Rev. Richard J. Bowman, Rector of St. Luke's, Katonah, has a word with John McMahon his parish lay reader.

The Washington March consisted of quiet, serious people. No bands, no floats, no official units. These are just a few of the marchers from the Diocese of New York.

Counsel for the Episcopal defendants, and the attorney who presented the case for all the defendants, was Frank Patton, Jr. Mr. Patton, who was engaged by the diocese, is a partner of William Stringfellow. He attends St. Mary's, Manhattanville.

In Katonah last June, the Rev. Richard J. Bowman spoke out against apparent racial discrimination in that Westchester community's fire department. The department is a volunteer organization, though its equipment is purchased with public funds.

Father Bowman is rector of St. Luke's and a chaplain in the Katonah Fire Department. Last spring, he sponsored the application of James Jones, a Negro, to become a member of the all-white fire department. Mr. Jones, a life-long resident of Katonah, serves as part-time sexton of St. Luke's. (The church is directly across the street from the fire house.) Both he and Mrs. Jones are members of the parish.

The Katonah Fire Department uses the black-ball system for membership applications; and Mr. Jones was black-balled.

Neither he nor Father Bowman was notified of the rejection, though Mr. Jones was warned by an official of the fire department that he might be black-balled if he applied.

When the black-balling became known, Father Bowman sought an explanation from fire department officials. No explanation was given. Father Bowman then exposed the whole affair during a sermon.

In subsequent interviews, he attacked the black-ball system, pointing out that it can cloak prejudices and that it has no place in an organization that is partially supported by tax funds.

Though fire officials denied any racial prejudice, they appointed a committee to investigate the whole matter of membership.

Mr. Jones will probably apply again this fall. ■

They Got Caught

Two men who tried to steal the car of a March on Washington participant were discovered and apprehended by the sergeant of the guards at the Cathedral.

At 12:30 P.M. on the day of the March, Sgt. Franklin Wrighten noticed the two men in the car of Peter Taylor, of St. George's, Manhattan. He remembered seeing the car being parked there about 3:30 A.M. by one of the "marchers," so he kept his eye on the pair.

Unable to start the car, the two men got out. Sgt. Wrighten followed them into a nearby drug store, where he apprehended them. The druggist called the 26th Precinct. A squad car was there in two minutes.

Both of the culprits have long records—which were made six months longer on convictions for attempted car theft.

Diocesan Churches Aiding 3 Cuban Refugee Families

Three Cuban families are receiving aid from churches in this diocese so far in the program to help these displaced people, reports the Rev. E. Walter Chater, chairman of the diocesan committee. The parishes which "adopted" them are in White Plains, Harrison and Mount Kisco.

In addition, churches in Lake Mahopac, Rye and Bedford are planning to participate in the project.

But, Mr. Chater said, response from the diocese as a whole has been considerably less than had been expected following the generally enthusiastic reception of the refugee relief plan at the Convocation meetings last spring. The Department of Christian Social Relations sent a memo to each Dean of Convocation, asking whether the churches would help. The answers have been rather discouraging, Mr. Chater reported. He added the hope, however, that interest will pick up now that the churches are planning their programs for the new season.

Churches interested in aiding a refugee in any way at all are asked to call Mr. Chater, Rector of All Saints, Harrison. Single men, as well as those with families, are seeking to be re-settled in this vicinity.

The first family to arrive under the diocesan plan were Mr. and Mrs. Kemel Cereceda and their infant daughter, Nora. They are living at the Osborne Home, Harrison, and Mr. Cereceda has found work with a firm which manufactures swimming pools. In Cuba, Mr. Cereceda operated his own terrazzo business. Two of his brothers are pilots with the resistance movement.

Although this family's sponsor was officially All Saints, Harrison, it was a man from St. Stephen's, Armonk, Eugene Curry, who found them a home and thereby made it possible for them to come. Mr. Curry is Executive Director of the Osborne Home. Christ Church, Pelham Manor, contributed funds to buy food when the Cerecedas arrived.

St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, is sponsoring Mr. and Mrs. Guillermo Ortega, their three boys, Raul, George and William; Mrs. Augusta Mendez, the grandmother; and Miss Elaine Mendez, an aunt. Mr. Ortega, an assistant administrator to an association of grocery importers and distributors, felt the effect of Castro's Cuba more than three years ago, when his firm was nationalized. He refused to work with a Castro-dominated company because he was convinced, from the beginning, that Castro was a Communist. For some time, Mrs. Ortega, a bilingual secretary to the manager of the Royal Bank of Canada in Havana, was the family's sole wage earner. They applied for permission to leave Cuba, but were refused, time after time. Finally, they wangled passage on an American freighter which had delivered medicine in exchange for prisoners. They arrived in Miami last May.

On August 7 (their 15th wedding anniversary) Mr. and Mrs. Ortega rounded up their family and started for New York. They were met by the Rev. J. Norman Hall, Rector of St. Bartholomew's, and a parish welcoming committee. The Couples' Club of the Church had prepared their new home at 33 Sterling Ave., White Plains, and there the Ortegas started a new life.

Difficulty in finding a place to live for the Luis Garcias delayed their arrival in this country nearly four months. The sponsoring church, St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, had made a commitment, however, and each month the Rev. Marcus B. Hall, Jr., the Rector, sent the family a check from his discretionary fund. Mr. Garcia had operated a men's clothing store and record shop in Havana before they were nationalized by Castro.

Mr. Garcia came north in September and obtained employment. His wife, Elvira, a son, Fernando, 16, and an infant daughter, Teresita, will join him shortly. Although they will probably live in New York City, the family is still under the sponsorship of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco. Another daughter, Maria, has been studying at the Julliard School of Music for the past two years on a scholarship. ■

FOR CHRIST'S SAKE

BY O. FIELDING CLARKE, VICAR OF HAZELWOOD, ENGLAND

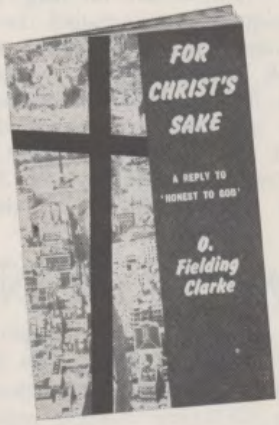
A REPLY to the controversial book HONEST TO GOD by the Bishop of Woolwich.



FOR CHRIST'S SAKE is a thoughtful and searching examination of the Bishop of Woolwich's HONEST TO GOD, showing some of the serious faults in its argument. The book is divided into two sections: Part one is a critique of HONEST TO GOD, chapter by chapter; Part two, a re-statement in modern terms of what Christianity stands for and how it should apply today.

People and Parishes

● Historic St. Paul's, Eastchester, experimented this summer with the idea of re-establishing a service of Evening Prayer on Sunday afternoons.

The Rev. Jonathan L. King, vicar, reports a modest but encouraging success. For five Sundays during July and August, neighboring clergy consisting of the Rev. Messrs. Cleasby of Mount Vernon, Sizer of Yonkers, Snodgrass of the Bronx, Philips of Pelham and Lund of Eastchester, conducted the service. Afterward, Fr. King and Daisy Webb (who knows all there is to know about old St. Paul's) conducted a brief tour. "Part of the aim, of course, was to make church people more familiar with this historic landmark," admitted Fr. King. St. Paul's is officially known as the Historic Shrine of the Bill of Rights.

● A Procession for the Unity of all People was held at St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, on Aug. 25. The procession, which included the clergy, parishioners and friends, marched through the grounds of the newly opened James Madison Houses and nearby side streets. The destination was St. Edward the Martyr, where Mass was celebrated at 11 A.M. by Father Gill, assisted by the Rev. Messrs. Knight and Hagen. The procession and Mass had been especially planned to open the week in which the great civil rights demonstration was held in Washington.

● A three-day healing service was held at St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, last month. The conductor was the Rev. Edward Winckley of the Diocese of Natal, the Church of the Province of South Africa. The Mission consisted of morning and evening services on Sept. 22, 23, and 24.

● Most suburban residents are familiar with the Welcome Wagon, an organization which officially greets newcomers to a neighborhood with product samples and information about various goods and services. In Mamaroneck, part of the Welcome Wagon largesse is a brochure containing pictures and service schedules of ten houses of worship. Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups are represented. St. Thomas's Episcopal Church, which had a great deal to do with preparing this booklet, is on the cover. The Rev. G. Clayton Melling, Rector, reports that his curate, the Rev. Geoffrey Armstrong, did the real spade work to get the rabbis and Roman Catholic priests into the venture.

Two Win National Contest

Two Church School pupils from this diocese are among the 20 winners of the 1963 Church School Missionary Offering contest, sponsored by the National Council. The contest entailed writing letters to Chinese Christian children on Taiwan. Nearly 2,000 entries were submitted.

The New York winners were Miss Anne W. Adams of Grace Church, Nyack, and Miss Carol Johnson of Yonkers, who attends St. James the Less, Scarsdale.

In addition, a letter by Miss Bambi Bedell of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, was among 21 chosen for honorable mention. The winners will receive gifts from Chinese shops on Taiwan.

Carol Johnson

The contest letters were written in response to letters from young Episcopalians on Taiwan, a country receiving an overseas portion of the missionary offering this year.

Vicar Named At St. Ann's For the Deaf

For the first time in its more than 100 years of history, St. Ann's Church for the Deaf has been assigned a priest who is not deaf himself.

The church, a diocesan mission, holds services at St. Michael's, Manhattan. It is the only church for the deaf in this diocese. Members come from all over the metropolitan area.

The new vicar is the Rev. Eric J. Whiting, 52, a Canadian, who for the past 14 years has been Rector of Trinity Church, St. Clair Shores, Mich. Before assuming his new position on Sept. 15, he studied for a period at the Gallaudet College for the Deaf, Washington, D.C. In order to expand the church's work with the deaf in this area, Mr. Whiting expects to be in close touch with the Home Department, National Council.

The vicar who preceded Mr. Whiting was the Rev. Edwin W. Nies, who had served St. Ann's since 1949. Dr. Nies became a member of that congregation in 1914 and a lay reader in 1920. A dentist for more than 35 years, he gave up that profession to study privately for the priesthood. He retired on Sept. 15. ■

Rectory at Montrose Damaged by Flames

The rectory at the Church of the Divine Love, Montrose, was swept by fire on August 19. Damage was estimated at between $8,000 and $10,000.

The blaze was discovered at 2:30 P.M. by a neighbor's child, who went upstairs and then rushed down to report that the bathroom was on fire. The bathroom and another upstairs room were destroyed, while the remainder of the house suffered water and smoke damage.

Three companies answered the alarm and fought the blaze for two hours. There were no injuries.

The rector, the Rev. Ralph E. Fogg, Jr., and his family were home at the time, having returned two days earlier from vacation.

The Foggs will be unable to occupy the house until about November. They lived with a vestryman and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Smith, for the first few weeks and then were planning to buy a trailer to use as a temporary rectory. ■

Cathedral Plans Festival For Episcopal School Week

Episcopal School Week will be observed from Oct. 27 through Nov. 3 this year. Robert H. Porter, headmaster of St. Thomas Choir School, Manhattan, is again serving as the national chairman.

Our Diocesan School Festival will be held at the Cathedral on Sunday, Nov. 3 at 4 p.m. It will be a service of Evensong, with the Rev. J. Burton Thomas, Rector of Heavenly Rest, Manhattan, as the preacher, and massed choirs in the procession. Faculty, students and parents from schools all over the diocese will attend.

After Episcopal School Week observances are over, many school administrators, teachers and interested churchmen will gather in Washington, D.C. for the triennial conference of the Unit of Parish and Preparatory Schools and the Episcopal School Association. From this diocese, the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of Christian Education, will be joined by many headmasters and faculty members.

The conference theme is "The Church's Ministry of Reconciliation in the Field of Education." Among the speakers will be three persons from this area, the Rev. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College, Dr. Virginia Harrington, a professor at Barnard, and the Rev. David Hunter, Director of the Department of Christian Education, National Council. ■

Headmaster Named At St. Peter's School

The Rev. William H. Crawford, Jr., has been named Headmaster of St. Peter's School, Peekskill. He succeeds the Rev. Frank C. Leeming, its founder, who retired in June after serving for 25 years.

The new headmaster, 56, has had wide experience in both teaching and publishing. Most recently he was the editor of Seabury Press. Previously he was associated with Oxford Press for ten years. He is a Harvard graduate, taught in Cleveland, Ohio, was co-founder of a boys' school in Williamstown, Mass., and for four years was chaplain of the Pomfret School. Since 1948, during his summers, he has been associate director of the Pine Island Camp for Boys in Maine. ■

Bishop Ordains Nine to the Diaconate

Bishop Donegan ordained nine men to the diaconate at a service in the Cathedral on June 11. The order of deacons is one of three orders of the ministry in the Episcopal Church. The other two are priest and bishop. Usually a deacon is advanced to the priesthood in six months or a year.

Stewart C. Zabriskie of St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, Assistant Minister at Incarnation, Manhattan.

Richard M. Shaw of All Angels, Manhattan, Assistant Minister of Calvary, Summit, N. J.

Edward W. Schmidt of Ascension, S. I., Assistant Minister at Christ Church, Pelham Manor.

Thomas F. Pike of St. Andrew's, New Paltz, Assistant Minister at St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan.

The Bishop

Stewart Pierson of Holy Trinity, E. 88th Street, Manhattan, Assistant Minister at Calvary, Pittsburgh.

Charles W. Patterson of Epiphany, Manhattan, tutor at General Theological Seminary.

Borden W. Painter, Jr., of St. Margaret's, Bronx, Assistant Minister at St. John's, New Haven, Conn.

Peter A. Molnar of All Saints, S. I., attending Chaplains' School.

George C. Brower of St. Thomas's Mamaroneck, Assistant Minister, Christ Church, Suffern.

The words "Episcopal college work" have a nice, safe, academic sound, suggesting ivied walls and the scholarly atmosphere of a professor's book-lined study. But listen again. There's a dull rumble in the background, which means someone is sending old icons crashing around. "College work" is giving the church a headache — and a challenge.

College work is nothing new for the Episcopal Church, and the church is no amateur at it. In the 1920's, National Council created a college work division, because a great many Episcopalians were going to college and "we have to take care of our own." In the 1930's, the Church Society for College Work was organized. Among its goals were fund-raising for chaplains' salaries and the establishment of Canterbury Clubs all across the country. Actually, the Canterbury Clubs became a national student movement and grew at a rather gratifying rate until the 1950's, when the thing petered out — for reasons which will become apparent later.

More locally, the Second Province (which comprises the eight dioceses in New York and New Jersey, including our own, and six Caribbean missionary districts) maintains a Provincial Secretary for College Work, the Rev. Eugene A. Monick. He is responsible for the planning, evaluation, strategy and support of work throughout the Province.

In the Diocese of New York, the Department of Christian Education, of which the Rev. Miller M. Cragon is the director, includes a Division of College Work.

Both Fr. Monick and Fr. Cragon point out that New York, because of its geographical location and cultural importance, is one of the most strategic academic centers in the country. Also, except for two dioceses in California, the greatest number of students of all religious affiliations attend schools in this area. There are some 160,000 students in 40 institutions within this diocese.

The diocesan Department of Christian Education allocates a portion of its yearly budget to college work. It pays the salaries of chaplains or college workers, employed either full or part time, at New York University, Columbia, Vassar and Barnard. It makes funds available for program at Columbia, Vassar, NYU, Bennett Junior College, the State College at New Paltz, and others, on request from the local clergy working there. (One woman and 11 priests, mostly rectors of nearby parishes, work as volunteers in nine colleges. Most of these are outside the city.) The Department also makes grants to the Protestant Foundation at Colombia, the University Christian Foundation at NYU, the Protestant Association at Hunter College, and it gives a sum each year to the foreign student program. Last year the appropriation for all this was $24,095 — $15,357 from diocesan sources, $4,550 from National Council, and $4,188 from other sources.

Just one more statistic.

Church leaders estimate that of the church's "lapsed" members, 50% are lost within ten years of Confirmation. There is a strong suspicion that much of this happens between 18 and 22 — the college years!

On the surface, the problem might seem to be simply one of concern at the level of church membership among Episcopal youth — tomorrow's leaders — and the solution might seem to be more chaplains and more money.

If it were only that simple.

The truth is that even with more chaplains than it knew what to do with, the church still would face three very sticky problems:

- The question of friction between the secular world and the church in a contemporary culture which puts a premium on "success" — income, status and power.
- The nature of today's college student and the influence of the academic world upon his thinking.
- The attitude of the church itself toward "the secular" — especially as this is found in the university, and the church's communication with it.

Along with the first problem come all the ramifications of today's mixed-up world, one in which automation, inflation and frustration have joined hands to encircle us all. Everything moves too fast, even ideas. What was "truth" even ten years ago, is just the beginning of a new chain of reasoning today. Knowledge is acquired by the scientific method. Analyze, codify and scrutinize. Never assume anything. Most important, never believe anything some "authority" tells you, unless you have first proved it to your satisfaction. The incarnation and Christ's atonement? The academic man asks how he — a scholar — can make the leap from reason to faith when all his life he has been trained to ask "why is this true?" and urged to prove it. How can he accept God as an authority so formidable that it will, by its nature, limit the questioning that he is dedicated to pursue?

The secular world also asks: How can any man dedicated to the pursuit of science acknowledge the existence of an active God when this signifies that his work is at the mercy of an uncontrollable and unpredictable force — a force that on a certain day in human history overruled all laws and allowed a man to rise from the dead? How can you accept a concept of miracle and revelation, especially when an intellectual argument is to follow directly from such a basis? As for the church as an institution, how can a man dedicated to the principle of free inquiry accept an agency which — within fairly recent history — threatened scholastic freedom and seriously limited research? How does he know it will not do this again?

These questions are hardly new. Theologians like Tillich and Niebuhr have offered some modern answers, but many feel that the academic community has been so busy shouting that it has not heard anything but its own voice. "Part of the church's task on the campus" declares the Rev. John Wing, Episcopal chaplain at New York University, "is to reestablish some sort of communication." He added, "The church is fighting for its life! American schools, which in many cases owed their existence to the church, have grown apart from it. It never occurs to teachers and students today that the church might have anything of relevance to say in their field. As recently as 30 years ago, you'd find a number of clergy teaching ethics and metaphysics. But you don't anymore. Nor do you find many historians who look upon history as the unfolding of God's will. Slowly the distance has widened until both parties are simply talking to themselves."

On the other hand, to hear a student tell it, whatever arguments the church has advanced have not seeped down to where the baffled undergraduate can get at them.

One young man who is now a priest, but not long ago attended a large metropolitan university, told The Bulletin:

"There were always these challenges to faith and religious commitment, and they sounded so convincing. I just didn't know how to answer them. None of us did. We didn't want to look like idiots, so we kept quiet. I know enough now to put up a good case, but I didn't then. No, we didn't go to a clergyman. We were afraid we'd just get more of the vague stuff that was giving us all the trouble."

There is a growing feeling that articulate and well-informed professors might greatly improve communication between the world of scholarship and the church. At both Columbia and New York University, chaplains reported great interest in programs for the faculty — a luncheon, perhaps, which includes a dialogue between historians and theologians "to see if there is any common language."

"When students become aware that the faculty, whom they respect, are also people who believe a theological position has relevance and merit, and that the church and its corporate worship has something to say to modern man, only then will it begin to regain lost ground," declares Chaplain Wing.

So, first the church must speak, and then it must be heard in the right places. This is the first challenge for "college work" in the 1960's.

As to the nature of the college student, here is the way he appeared to a random sampling of chaplains from several large and small campuses:

Today's young people are the "uncommitted generation." They play it cool. They never get terribly worked up about anything — or at least do not seem to. Even bristling social issues attract a minimum of activity. "You'd think they'd go in for strong civil rights demonstrations on the campus, but they don't," remarked one chaplain. Even extra-curricular activities — sports and clubs — have suffered a decline. (That's partly why Canterbury Club membership declined — a casualty of the times.)

"Students are seemingly in college with a single-minded purpose — to digest their courses, get decent marks, get a degree and get out of there so they can make their mark quickly in today's competitive world," said another chaplain. Going to church on Sunday and to Canterbury Club meeting on Tuesday, is, if nothing else, something you just don't have time for.

How does the general subject of religion fit into this picture?

About church-going the average student couldn't care less. First of all, one's college years are the rebellious ones. "Church" represents home and mother, and that is what young people often go to college to escape. They are impressed by the rationality of science and logic as it unfolds in their classrooms. "I've heard students complain that what the Church has to offer soon comes to appear childish, inane, shoddy, and very far from meeting their new intellectual standards," one of the college workers reported. Still, apparently the campuses are not godless.

A group of sociologists who surveyed 11 universities across the country reported that 75% of the students questioned said they believe in "some sort of God." But the survey group concluded that "even if religious belief is widespread, religious commitment is rare."

All the same, there is a bright spot. While he will not go to chapel, a student will take courses in religion, the chaplains reported. In fact, they line up eagerly at the registration desk. "The church is reaching students," declares Chaplain John Krumm at Columbia University. "It is not producing the kind of thing it expects to produce — conversions — but it is finding an audience." The next thing, though, is that the church has to retain this interest. One man recounted, by way of an "it-shouldn't-happen-here" illustration, a British clergyman's observation that membership in the Church of England is declining again after an encouraging upsurge. "People explored the subject, but we missed the boat somewhere," he is said to have explained.

Chaplains, college workers, and college work administrators in the Diocese of New York are insistent that the church cannot afford to miss the boat. Attitudes towards college work have been and are undergoing some intense examination.

The Rev. Phillip T. Zabriskie, Executive Secretary for the Division of College Work, National Council, says much of our thinking "derives from assumptions that the church's task is to take care of its members while away from home, give them the services and care of the church, steady them through periods of doubt, and then return them safely when dangerous college days are over. Such assumptions — very deep in the unconscious of most of us in U.S. Christendom — are deadly to the church's work."

"College work," Mr. Zabriskie asserts, "is a mission, not simply or centrally a chaplaincy."

...in God, but Play it Cool...

Agreeing wholeheartedly are the Rev. Miller M. Cragon, Director of the diocesan Department of Christian Education and the Rev. Eugene A. Monick, Provincial Secretary.

"The church has a way of stirring in new ways," says Father Cragon. "You do not have to throw out the faith when you try to do things in new ways, either. And today we have to recognize the fact that we, as the church, either move into the university community with an attempt to try to evangelize, or we literally are going to lose the leaders of our society in the next generation."

Father Monick sees five points of emphasis which are particularly important:

1. On college work as "mission," as opposed to purely pastoral care for people already identified as Episcopalians.

"This would include a widespread effort to demolish the image of the church as something interested in intellectual obscurantism, of feathering its own nest, of being unrelated to the world, which, for the university, is so important. The church does realize the secular is sacred, but not many people think we believe this, because we don't act as if we did."

2. On the centrality of the Eucharist as the main act of the church in the university.

"This means the gathered church, as opposed to club meetings, social life and unrelated discussions. We find our identity as churchmen at the altar. Whatever flows from this, in terms of program and activity is derived from the church's offering itself at the altar for the salvation of the world, wherever and whatever it is."

3. On graduate students and faculty work.

"This is a new thrust. We must open avenues of conversation with those who are on the growing edge of scholarship. We are terribly hindered now because we of the church have lagged so far behind. We don't understand the 'secular' language of the university and the university does not understand how 'sacred' we consider its pursuit to be."

4. On an increasing unity with other denominations in college work.

"The basic purpose of having the Episcopal Church on a campus cannot be limited to our peculiar Anglican interests, important as they are. The question of whether revelation can be a valid means of knowledge is urgent for every Christian. This is why this diocese is participating so enthusiastically in the University Christian Foundation and the Heights Christian Foundation at NYU, and in the interdenominational chaplaincy program at Columbia, to name just two. The impetus for being ecumenical is missionary."

5. On an overall change in mood.

"We are encouraged by a new feeling, not of hostility or competition between the university and the church, but of cooperation and shared interest. The university's search for truth is carried on regardless of where it may lead, and we approve. The old days of protecting students from the agnostic university are over. We feel that we must help with the process of learning, rather than do battle with the university. This stems from our understanding of the Incarnation — the dignity and importance which Christ gave to the world through this identification with it. We do not expect to agree entirely at all points, but we can go in freely to explore new truths."

This, then, is an outline of the situation, the church's position, and a statement of what it expects to do.

What can the people do?

First, church leaders say, they must understand the problem. They must have a psychological acceptance of the fact that college students are going to be rebellious and "different." People must be patient with them, and listen.

Second, they must recognize and respond to the need for funds and manpower to accomplish the critical and demanding task.

Third, they, themselves, must be actively concerned. Very few parishes actually pay much attention to their college students. Rectors frequently serve as volunteer chaplains, but the people? One college chaplain told The Bulletin that he received just one letter last year from a parish which was sending a student to the campus he served. It was a brief letter, expressing the hope that he would look in on this freshman once in a while. The letter contained a small donation "for your general work with the students." The chaplain, bless his heart, said he was overcome with astonishment.

"If only more people would show that they cared," he said. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. Most of us know people who never go to church but act like better Christians than many regular church goers. What will happen to these people at the last judgment? Will they go to hell because they didn't go to church?

A. As far as I know, that would depend on the reason they didn't go to church. If they avoided going to church because they were interested in avoiding other people, then I think quite possibly they'll go to hell—in the exact sense in which the Church uses that word. If, on the other hand, they have not been exposed to the Christian religion through the laxness or inattention of fellow Christians, then indeed the fellow Christians may be the ones who will have to go to hell for failing in the first responsibility laid on them by the Lord Jesus Christ. In talking of anyone going to hell we must be rather certain that we are not using some medievally contrived notion of hell. Hell means a state in which one is conscious of being separated from God. The medieval pictures of eternal fire and tormenting demons was on the whole rather tame compared to the actual state of the man who knows himself separated from the source and object of all love by his own stupid or thoughtless actions.

Mrs. Pembroke Hand Donegan, mother of Bishop Donegan, died at her home on June 12. Funeral services were held at the Cathedral on June 14, and she was buried in Trinity Church cemetery at Intercession Chapel.

letters . . . to the editor

It is shocking to know that a person can be a clergyman and also interested in the making of nuclear bombs. War in this day and age is not war against a nation or nations but a war against God.

Certainly to destroy thousands or perhaps millions of people made in God's image and to destroy the world which God made and "saw that it was very good" is horrible to think of. This is not the way for a "Christian to defend what he stands for."

Since this is the only nation that has ever dropped a nuclear bomb on any people, it is up to this nation to take some risk in seeing that such a thing does not occur again.

J. Louise Owens

Ed. Note: It is presumed that this letter was prompted by an article in the June Bulletin reporting a talk given at West Point by the Rev. Dr. William G. Pollard, a priest who is also a nuclear physicist.

---

It is not clear to me why in your June issue Dr. Charles Lawrence was said to be from St. Philip's Church, Manhattan. I can only infer this mistake was made because Dr. Lawrence is a Negro. If this is the case then it is disgraceful. The fact is, Dr. Lawrence is Junior Warden of St. Paul's Church, Spring Valley, not a predominantly Negro parish but an almost entirely white parish, and he is Junior Warden not because he is Negro but because he is the most qualified man to hold that office, having served on the vestry for a number of years as well as having been called on by the Bishop of New York and the Presiding Bishop for his services many times. It is not evident to me why the most elementary care and research should not have precluded such a mistake being made about a recipient of the Cross of the Bishop of New York. Apparently it is not clear to The Bulletin that there are parishes in the exurbs of New York that are in fact color-blind and that St. Paul's is one of them. This seems even more an abomination to me in the light of the fact that this particular Convention was focused on the struggle for human rights as few in the past have been and that Dr. Lawrence himself delivered a distinguished report proving in his own person that there are in point of fact parishes in this Diocese where distinguished men whether Negro or white represent white parishes. I should think this would have been of some interest to the editors of the Bulletin. Apparently not. I have searched the Bulletin for any reference to it.

Yours very truly,

Frederick F. Johnson
Rector, St. Paul's Church
Spring Valley

Ed. Note: In the caption on page 7 The Bulletin sincerely regrets having failed to give St. Paul's Church the credit for possessing the membership of Dr. Lawrence. Any church would claim him, and churchmen like him, with pride. The cause of the error is incorrectly stated by Mr. Johnson. Note, please, that Dr. Lawrence is described as a member of St. Paul's in an article on page 5. It should also be noted that the June Bulletin contained rather full coverage of Dr. Lawrence's report of work done by the Committee on Clergy Placement, (Page 6) as well as other articles dealing with race relations.

On this day, June 16, being the first Sunday after Trinity, I finished the regular visitation for Confirmation to all the missions in the Diocese. Next Sunday will be my first Sunday "at home" since the first Sunday in January. During the course of the past six months I have spent not only Sundays visiting the missions but also stretches of whole weeks holding at times three or four services per day. When I arrived home today I looked for something to read and I picked up The Bulletin of the Diocese of New York. I wanted to see how things were going in the outside world, and The Bulletin was a pretty fair source of information even if it was the April issue.

The above preliminary is no news in the ordinary life of any Ordinary. The news is in what I read in page 12 of The Bulletin, where I discovered that it had taken me about six months to visit six churches. Distance is shrinking in our idolatrous world, and sometimes so is the Church, but not so fast, I thought. A second look at your table of statistics led me to the conclusion that Santo Domingo had usurped the place of Cuba, or vice versa. We in Cuba don't mind that for we love the "dominicanos" and they love us. But knowing Bishop Kellogg I am of the conviction that he would not like to sail under false colours and that he would much prefer to stick to his own statistics. Don't you think so too?

And finally, all that I have said hitherto is a mere excuse to thank you for giving us some publicity and to congratulate you for the well done summary of the missionary work of the Church. We need more of that, believe me. Remember us in your prayers. Thank you.

Sincerely yours,

Romualdo Gonzalez Agueros
Bishop of Cuba

Ed. Note: Regrettably the statistics for Cuba and the Dominican Republic were inadvertently reversed on page 12 of the April issue. To both bishops, our apologies!

Bronx Convocation To Hold Lectures

For the second season, the Bronx Convocation will hold a School of Worship on three Wednesday nights during October. They will be held on Oct. 9, 16, and 23, with the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral, as the speaker. All three talks will be devoted to the theological basis of the Church, the Church's ecumenical obligation, and the liturgical expression of both.

The series will be held at St. James' Church, Fordham, Jerome Ave. and 190th St., at 8 P.M. All of the lectures are open to the public. The Rev. Basil Law, Rector of St. James' and Dean of the Bronx Convocation, reported that last year some 400 persons from 13 Bronx churches attended the series. The speaker was Dr. Robert C. Dentan of General Theological Seminary. ■

Car Port Burns

Fire, believed to have been caused by careless smoking, severely damaged the car port at Grace Church, Bronx, this summer. The Rev. Arthur Hambrett, rector, said the blaze occurred about 9 P.M. on August 3. Some of the shingles on the church roof were ignited, but quick action by the Fire Department prevented any serious loss, Mr. Hambrett said. Total damage was estimated at $7,000. ■

GLOBAL ODYSSEY

By HOWARD A. JOHNSON

Canon, The Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, New York City

Vibrant with the sights, sounds, and distinct drama of foreign lands is this exhilarating report of encounter with the Anglican Communion throughout the world.

An attractive volume — highly readable and often witty in its documentation — GLOBAL ODYSSEY presents the fascinating chronicle of Canon Howard A. Johnson's recent 200,000-mile, 730-day travels into every province of the Church (with the exception of China). His is no dry account, but one alive with the unique adventure of a bold modern pilgrimage.

At once informative and inspirational, this book significantly depicts the hopes and fears, the accomplishments and failures of Christians in every corner of the globe. Here indeed is a compelling portrait of just what it means to be true brothers in Christ in a universal Church.

Toronto: A Historical Event

By the Rev. Howard A. Johnson

Canon Theologian, Cathedral of St. John the Divine

The Anglican Congress, held last August in Toronto, is now history. Its effects, however, are going to create history. The future has the possibility of being different because the Congress was held.

While waiting at the Toronto airport to return to New York, I was pressed by a reporter to answer the question: "Did the Congress live up to your expectations, or was it a disappointment?" To this there was but one reply: "Not a disappointment, certainly; it was, in fact, exactly what I expected."

It was, to begin with, honest — and that (heaven be praised!) is something that you can expect of Anglicans. The Congress spoke truthfully about the weaknesses, follies, and failures of the Anglican Communion. There was no abject breast-beating or self-laceration about this. It was, rather, an accurate accounting of our stewardship — and the candid admission that we are woefully behind in our accounts. This honesty was all the more impressive when you consider how everything at Toronto was designed to minister to our ego. The vast Canadian Room of the Royal York, where the sessions of the Congress were held, was jammed with saris, sarongs, kimonos, etc., etc. In short, an international style show. And then, that on two separate occasions the colossal Maple Leaf Gardens should have been packed to the rafters — not for hockey but for C. of E. & Co. — was expressly calculated, as it were, to build us up in our own eyes. In these circumstances the Congress might easily have degenerated into a "hip-hip-hooray for Anglicanism" jamboree. For we were impressive by the force of our numbers, by the variety of our costumes, and by an almost Babylonian confusion of languages. Even non-Anglican citizens of Toronto were impressed. They turned out by the thousands to watch Anglicans in procession. There was a thrill in all this, but mercifully it did not betray the Congress into becoming a mutual self-congratulatory society with overdeveloped biceps from the exercise of patting ourselves on the back.

No, what the Congress did was take stock, soberly and sincerely. This meant reckoning up the credit side as well as the debit side. For we do have assets, after all; and the Congress was as honest in assessing our attributes as it was unflinchingly realistic in self-criticism. Thus, the Congress inquired earnestly about vocation. What is it that God, who knows both our shortcomings and our long suits, calls us to do? Unless the Congress was deaf to his call, or heard amiss, we learned that there are certain tasks for which he has equipped us and that now it is a matter either of obedience and sacrifice or else the dire penalties of insubordination and exile.

Besides taking stock, the Congress took action. It received and welcomed for study a brief and revolutionary document which had been prepared in advance by the Archbishops, Primates, and Metropolitans of the Anglican Communion. Every Episcopalian ought to commit it to memory. It would change the face of the world.

The chief points of the document appear elsewhere on this page, and the full text was printed in many newspapers of the world. When Anglicans do, on occasion,

Key Points of the Anglican

The document was prepared jointly by Anglican leaders from all over the world, and presented by the Archbishop of Canterbury at the Anglican Congress on August 17. It electrified the delegates and dwarfed all other discussions.

The Manifesto consists of four parts, which contain, briefly, the following ideas:

I

A new dimension is to be recognized in the relationship between Churches of the Anglican Communion. To talk of "giving" and "receiving" Churches has become irrelevant. "The key-notes now are equality, interdependence, mutual responsibility." And these key-note words must "find a completely new level of expression and corporate obedience." Our need is not therefore simply to be expressed in greater generosity by those who have money and men to spare. Our need is rather to understand how God has led us . . ."

II

From the foregoing, follows these necessities—

1. To study needs and resources throughout our Communion . . .

2. To have each Church now join in an immediate commitment to increased financial support—$15,000,000 in the next five years, above existing budgets. This is not to be understood as a once-in-a-lifetime appeal. "It is no more than a first step forward . . ." Nor is it a new central fund, but a "higher level of mutual responsibility." Needs are in three main categories—training of clerical and lay leadership; construction of churches and related buildings; "a beginning on the great needs of new provinces."

3. A parallel commitment as to man-power. The shortage of priests is measured in thousands. Their training is one of the primary needs to be met by increased support. "But we think as seriously of the laity, of their longing everywhere to be involve more deeply . . ."

4. To continue and extend the whol process of inter-Anglican consulta tion. Appointment of an executiv officer (Bishop Bayne) "has been step in the right direction." It is no proposed to add regional officers "t further this process of planning, com munication and consultation."

5. Each Church must "radicall study the form of its own obedienc to mission and the needs it has t share in the single life and witnes of our church everywhere. Mission i not only a giving to others, it i equally a sharing and receiving."

6. To face "maturely and withou sentimentality the nature of the An glican Communion, and the implica tions for us all . . ."

III

In the face of the above necessities the following program is proposed "t every Church . . . without exception:

More than 300 delegates from the United States gather around a bright red banner as they form for procession for the opening service of the Anglican Congress.

gird themselves for action, the world still has enough respect for us to take note.

Our Bishop was present at the Congress, as were his two Suffragans. The Lay Delegate from the Diocese of New York was Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse; and you had to put up with me as your clerical representative. Many other New Yorkers attended as observers. I think they will bear me out in my principal observation: Toronto gave us a vivid sense of our universality as a Church, of our dependence upon one another, of our

(to page 18)

Congress Manifesto

1. To join in immediate commitment or increased support in money and manpower, "through existing or new hannels, in cooperation with the ther Churches . . ."

2. To begin at once "a radical study f its own obedience to mission," inluding a study of structure, theology f mission, and priorities in decision.

3. To seek ways of receiving as well s giving, asking "what other churchs may bring to its life, and eager to hare its tasks and problems with thers."

4. To examine every activity "by he test of mission and service to thers . . . The church is not a club r an association of like-minded peole. Nor is our communion, named for s historic roots, a federation commissioned to propagate an English-peaking culture across the world."

5. To develop "swiftly every posible channel of communication with s companions in the Anglican Communion—indeed in the Church of Christ as a whole." This is a matter "of deep and deliberate involvement in another's affairs and life. It means the re-orientation of much of our teaching in parishes. It means a radical change in the structure of our prayers. It means massive exchange programs of men and women . . ."

IV

Such a program "if it is seen in its true size and accepted, will mean the death of much that is familiar . . . It will mean radical change in our priorities—even leading us to share with others at least as much as we spend on ourselves. It means the death of old isolations and inherited attitudes. It means a willingness to forgo many desirable things, in every church. In substance, what we are really asking is the rebirth of the Anglican Communion, which means the death of many old things but—infinitely more—the birth of entirely new relationships . . ."

Canon Johnson's Book Is Critical Of Much of Anglican Communion

There is something reassuring, comforting, almost inflating about the term "World-wide Anglican Communion." We Episcopalians take pride in being among the 40 million Anglicans scattered around the world in 18 national churches.

But how scattered we are! How thin are our lines!

This is the central message of "Global Odyssey": the feeble though often determined efforts of Anglicans in much of the world, and the fewness of our numbers.

In some countries, we are being defeated by our own smugness, in others by internal frictions, and in nearly all countries by an unbelievable lack of manpower and money.

Readers of The Bulletin will recall articles about Canon Johnson's two-year trip around the world to gather material for "Global Odyssey." Dr. Johnson, who is Canon Theologian of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, visited every part of the Anglican Communion except China. During those two years he talked with literally every kind of Anglican there is: all races, all shades of Churchmanship, all degrees of humility and vanity, all levels of dedication.

They all march across his pages—and they march as individual men and women, not as statistics. One of the fascinating things about Canon Johnson's style is his ability to relate facts and statistics in flesh and blood terms.

The book abounds in anecdotes, little stories that rivet you to the pages and then cause you to look up a moment to reflect on the point the tale makes.

"Global Odyssey" is not an official evaluation of the state of the Anglican Communion. It is, as Canon Johnson explains in the preface, "subjective, impressionistic." It is not a committee report, praise be, but a highly readable and informative view through one pair of trained eyes. To use journalistic terms, this is a book of interpretative reporting.

"Global Odyssey" is not muckraking. It does not point with alarm and then fold its hands. It screams "Fire!" and then tells the Church how it might form a bucket brigade. It is constructive criticism at its best.

Though the Anglican Churches come in for strong criticism—with a few exceptions—there are many human heroes in this book. Canon Johnson's admiration for them is unstinting as he relates feats of physical and spiritual endurance.

Besides being a required course for every Episcopalian with a conscience, this is a book that is wholly absorbing. You may stay up late reading. You may even lose sleep by thinking about it afterwards.

special vocation as Anglicans, and of our need for a concerted grand strategy of missionary outreach.

The Congress represents the breakthrough of a new concept: The 18 Provinces constituting the Anglican Communion can no longer go it alone, each acting for itself and by itself. We need one another. We must act in concert. If we are, for example, to make an effective missionary thrust in South America, we must do it together. The Archbishop of Canterbury had the last word and the great word when he said, "The Church that lives to itself will die by itself."

We are no longer, narrowly, an Anglo-Saxon Church. We are multilingual, multi-cultural, multi-racial. We have talents which we bury. Toronto didn't only call a spade a spade. It gave us a spade. And the orders now read "Dig." ■

'Tests of the Spirit' Is General Topic For 1963 Diocesan School of Worship

Canon Landon

Dean Schmemann

Dr. Parker

Rev. S. J. Wylie

"Tests of the Spirit" will be the topic of the Diocesan School of Worship this year. Once again it is scheduled for the four Mondays in November, with morning sessions at the Cathedral and evening ones at four Manhattan churches. In addition, the two middle lectures will be given in Dutchess County for the convenience of people who live in the northern part of the diocese.

This year's series is the third in a planned sequence on the doctrine of the Holy Spirit. According to the Rev. Howard A. Johnson, Canon Theologian of the Cathedral, who is in charge of arrangements, the four lectures will deal with ways of knowing what the Holy Spirit is saying to the churches. "This question, always urgent, has a special insistence in our day—when even staid Episcopalians claim that they are at last speaking in tongues," he commented,

The School is sponsored by the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral Church and the Episcopal Churchwomen.

The lectures, open to everyone in the diocese, will be as follows:

November 4: "Catholic Consent." This lecture derives its title from the fact that the Church tests every spirit by reference to certain beliefs held everywhere and in all times by the world body of the faithful. The Very Rev. Alexander Schmemann, Dean of St. Vladimir's Orthodox Theological Seminary, will speak.

November 11: "Holy Scriptures." Anglicans have always maintained that nothing may be taught as necessary to salvation (and therefore of the Spirit) that cannot stand the test of the Holy Bible. Speaking on this subject will be the Rev. Pierson Parker, Professor of New Testament, General Theological Seminary.

November 18: "Reason." The Rev. Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor of the Cathedral, will consider Anglicanism's consistent point of view that nothing can be derived from the Spirit of God if it is not consonant with the sure findings of human rationality.

November 25: "Religious Direction." One test of the Spirit is bound up with a whole galaxy of words and realities, such as guidance, governance, pastoral counsel, auricular confession. The Rev. Samuel J. Wylie, Rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston, will investigate some of these words.

The sessions at the Cathedral will begin at 10:30 A.M. and end at 1:00. Evening lectures will last about two hours. All will begin at 7:30 P.M., except the last, which will be preceded by Holy Communion at 6.

Host churches for the evening sessions are:

Nov. 4, Church of the Ascension, Fifth Ave. and 10th Street; Nov. 11, St. James', Madison Ave. and 71st. Nov. 18, Church of the Incarnation, Madison Ave. and 35th St; Nov. 25, Church of the Heavenly Rest, Fifth Ave. and 90th St.

The lectures by Dr. Parker and Canon Landon will be given at St. Paul's Church, Poughkeepsie, on Tuesday, Nov. 12 and 19 at 1:00 P.M.

Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., represents the Episcopal Churchwomen on the planning committee, which consists also of Dean Butler and the four Canons. Mrs. Henri Barjou is day chairman, Miss Valerie Franklin is evening chairman, and Mrs. C. Howard Ellis is chairman for the Dutchess County lectures.

To register for any of the lectures, ask your rector for blanks which are being sent to each church in the diocese. The fee is $2 for the series, or $1 for an individual session. ■

. . . in brief

■ PETER DAY, Editor of The Living Church, has been appointed Ecumenical Officer of the National Council of the Episcopal Church. He will assume his new position shortly after Jan. 1.

The Presiding Bishop, in announcing the appointment, noted that Mr. Day has been a valuable member of the General Board of the National Council of Churches for several years, and that he "will now establish and maintain a close relationship with the NCCC and the World Council of Churches." The position was created at General Convention in 1961. The Living Church is an independent, weekly news magazine dealing with activities of concern to Episcopalians.

■ FOR THE FIRST TIME in its history, the Girls' Friendly Society (now known as the GFS, Society for Girls) has elected a man to its national Board of Directors. He is the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector of St. Philip's Church, Manhattan. Dr. Weston has been interested in the organization for some years, having served as chaplain at one GFS National Assembly, and as keynote speaker at another. An active GFS branch meets regularly in his parish.

■ THE REV. CLEMENT W. WELSH, who since 1957 has been the editor of Forward Movement Publications, became director of studies at the College of Preachers in Washington, D.C., on Sept. 1. He also was named Canon Theologian of Washington Cathedral. ■

The Return of the Prodigal Son

Edmund Beazley Is Appointed New Administrative Assistant

Bishop Donegan has appointed his new administrative assistant. He is Edmund J. Beazley of New City, an industrial executive and certified public accountant. The position was authorized at the Diocesan Convention last May. Mr. Beazley assumed his duties at diocesan house on Oct. 21.

In addition to acting as the Bishop's administrative assistant, Mr. Beazley will be chief budget officer and lay personnel director for the diocese.

The new administrator, 48, has been controller of the Gurran Oil Co., Stony Point, for the past five years. The firm is a distributor of Esso products. Previously he was controller and later treasurer of Bright Star Industries, Clifton, N.J., flashlight and battery manufacturer. He also has been controller of Arco Welding and Machine Works, Jersey City, N.J.

He is a member of St. John's Episcopal Church, New City, where as treasurer and vestryman he recently played an important part during the construction of a new church building.

A native of Hopkinsville, Ky., Mr. Beazley attended Western Kentucky State College and was graduated from Bentley College, Boston, Mass., where he majored in accounting and finance. He also took special courses at Rutgers University for two years. He is married and the father of three children.

The appointment of an administrative assistant was proposed in Bishop Donegan's annual message to Diocesan Convention last May 14. It was one of several recommendations in an overall plan for diocesan reorganization, a question which, the Bishop said, "had been a matter for constant and serious consideration" for the past year.

Edmund J. Beazley

The Bishop pointed out that Dr. Theodor Oxholm, the present Treasurer of Convention, had urged a division in the responsibilities of the Treasurer. He had asked the Bishop to plan for his retirement in 1965. Then, when Dr. Oxholm became ill in 1962, a firm of management consultants was employed to study the functions of the Treasurer's Office. This firm's report, among other things, recommended the appointment of an administrative assistant.

The man holding this position, the Bishop told the Convention last May, will "direct and supervise the work of the controller, coordinate and help provide leadership to the staff of the Council, serve as the diocesan budget officer and as a personnel officer for lay employees of the diocese." Mr. Beazley will be directly responsible to the Bishop.

In describing his duties, the Bishop also said that he will be expected "to develop and maintain cooperative arrangements with the parishes, serving as a source of reference on questions of an administrative or financial nature." ■

Bookmarks Offered For Bible Reading

The annual observance of Worldwide Bible Reading—often described as the world's largest Bible reading class—will mark its 20th anniversary this year with the theme "The Word of Truth." The program begins on Thanksgiving and continues through Christmas. Christians throughout the world will join in a spiritual fellowship by reading the same pre-selected passage of the Bible each day.

The program is sponsored by the American Bible Society and co-sponsored by more than 50 denominations, including the Episcopal Church.

Fourteen million bookmarks which list these daily readings are being distributed free by the Society. Any version or translation of the Scriptures may be used. Also being made available are booklets of pocket size which contain the Christmas story according to the Gospel of Luke. It can be had in the King James and Revised Standard Versions, and for the first time this year, the New English Bible translation.

Single copies of the bookmark and the Christmas story are available without charge by writing to this magazine. Address requests to The Bulletin, 1047 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, New York, 10025. ■

Diocesan Clergy Get Honorary Doctorates

Among eight clergymen to receive honorary degrees of Doctor of Sacred Theology at General Theological Seminary commencement exercises this year were two from this diocese. They are the Rev. Canon Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral, and the Rev. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson.

An S.T.D. also was given to the Rt. Rev. George W. Barrett, Bishop of Rochester. He formerly was Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville.

Bishop Donegan presided at the commencement exercises. The Very Rev. Lawrence Rose, Dean of the Seminary, presented the degrees. ■

The Bishop's Message

The Clergy Conference at West Point was marked by a record attendance. This annual gathering of our clergy family at the beginning of another season serves to strengthen in us the spirit of devotion and love for the Church, of mutual interest and sympathetic understanding of our common tasks, and of true brotherhood and fellowship in Christ. The fine spirit throughout the Conference gives cause to believe that the work of our Church will go forward this year with new vigor and new consecration.

By the time this issue of the Diocesan Bulletin reaches you the Every Member Canvass will be under way in your congregation. The purpose of the Every Member Canvass is to secure pledges for the support of the Church's work at home and beyond. Through this means the Church is enabled to minister to your community and to the world.

I would impress upon you the personal significance of the Every Member Canvass and its vast importance. Our present work can be maintained and be made more effective only in so far as every baptized and confirmed member accepts a full share of the responsibility. The failure of anyone to respond to the Canvass appeal means injury to the Church and the loss of individual opportunity. Think of how the work of Christ would advance if everybody pledged generously. Many of you are doing this, but ought not each one of you do so according to your ability?

If our religion is real, if we deeply care about our relationship with Our Lord, if we truly believe that the greatest power in the world is the gospel of Jesus Christ in action, then we shall want to have a part in the propagation of the good news of God that has been entrusted to us.

The Every Member Canvass is more than financial; it is an appeal for personal loyalty and for an acknowledgment of all that your religion means to you. Your response is a token of your devotion; it helps to sustain an effective ministry at home, and through the missionary program overseas brings the Way, the Truth and the Life to all kinds and conditions of people.

May your support of the Church's Mission be a worthy expression of your allegiance to Christ and His Church and of your gratitude to God for all the blessings He has given you. "Freely ye have received; freely give".

God be with us all, as we seek to serve Him more faithfully in the coming days.

Faithfully and affectionately your Bishop,

HOW TO HELP PREACH

The warden of the College of Preachers tells about what he is pleased to call his "For Heaven's sake letters." These are confidential (very!) letters received from church wardens whose rectors are about to attend conferences at the College. They begin, "Dear Mr. Warden: The sermons in our church are awful. Our rector is soon to be at your College for a conference. For Heaven's sake do something about him! . . . "

What the College of Preachers can do about him is, of course, not very much. He comes to us for only four or five days. In that time, however good the conference may be, a bad preacher will not be transmuted into a good one. There is no alchemy that can do that. We can set his face in the right direction; we can make him want to improve; and we can show him possible ways to increase his effectiveness. But, by and large, if a man's preaching is to improve, it will have to be "on-the-job" improvement over a long time. And the lay people in his congregation, I feel, will have to have a hand in the matter.

Here I must say that there are two categories of preachers whose work I shall not be talking about: First, there are the born preachers — the Phillips Brookses, the Fosdicks, the Bowies, the Buttricks, the Ted Ferrises — who seem just naturally, from the outset of their careers, to have been talented preachers. Such men need no help. And, second, there is a category of men who cannot be helped. They simply do not have it in them to preach. I have known several such. They were by no means lacking in brain power. One, at least, wore a Phi Beta Kappa key. But preaching was not their dish. They had no literary gift. They had no spark. They were dull and pedestrian. They put people to sleep. Such men should be encouraged perhaps to find jobs in the Church which do not include preaching.

The category of preachers whose preaching can be improved is the one that the large majority of us clergy belong to. We are not born preachers, and few of us will ever become great preachers. But we have it in us to be good preachers. If certain necessary conditions are fulfilled, we have it in us to grow as preachers year by year in power and finesse.

The conditions necessary for a preacher to be able to improve include six things. If a preacher is to improve in his preaching:

He, himself, must grow as a person.

He must grow in depth and in maturity. He must grow in powers of spiritual insight and moral perception. He must grow in intellectual competence. To these ends he must make the most and the best of available opportunities for reading and study, prayer and meditation, thought and discussion, and for cultural experience of all kinds.

He must take his preaching seriously.

He must feel that preaching is in the nature of a sacrament and that he is a bearer of the Word of God to his people. If he doesn't regard his preaching as important, he can hardly expect that his hearers will.

He must work at his preaching.

He must regard the creation of sermons as an art comparable to poetry, painting, musical composition, and as worthy of discipline, study, and practice. Fritz Kreisler used to say of his music, "If I fail to practice one day, I know it. If I fail to practice two days, the critics know it. If I fail to practice three days, the world knows it." A preacher should have a similarly perfectionist attitude toward his preaching.

He must know the milieu in which he lives.

The preacher must know and understand, profoundly and sympathetically and also critically, the social and cultural environment in which he lives and

YOUR MINISTER

BETTER SERMONS

By The Rev. William Thomas Heath, D.D.

Former Director of Studies, College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral works. He should know his own people as intimately as possible. He should know about their homes and families, their work, their interests, hobbies, concerns, problems, perplexities, etc. He should also know about the times in which he is living — the regulations, ideas and principles, customs and conventions which govern manners, morals, thoughts, and attitudes, what the artists and novelists and dramatists seem to be talking about. He should be aware of the issues of the time — political, social, racial, industrial, international. He should read the newspapers and listen to the news commentators. The issue here is relevance.

He must feel free.

He must feel free to pursue truth, wherever the pursuit may lead; to relate his biblical insights and all facets of Christian faith to all areas of life; and to speak this truth when, as, and if he feels impelled to speak.

He must feel in rapport with his congregation.

He must have a sense of "dialogue" about his preaching. He must feel that there is interest and concern in the pews; that there is response, reaction, and mental and spiritual activity going on, even though he is the only one who speaks. He must feel that there is united and corporate expectancy of "encounter" with God through the inclusive act of worship in which preaching — the proclamation of the Word — is an essential component.

These are six necessary conditions, progress toward the fulfillment of which will measure the development of both the preacher and his product. So when the question is asked, "What can lay people do to improve preaching?" my answer would be that whatever they can do to aid and abet their preachers in the fulfillment of these conditions will ipso facto contribute toward better preaching.

It remains, therefore, to suggest some specific ways of cooperating to this end:

What can lay people do to help their preachers grow as persons?

They cannot, of course, make their preachers read and study their prayers, or engage in cultural pursuits. But they can perhaps do a few things to influence and encourage them in their own spiritual and cultural nurture.

Article courtesy THE LIVING CHURCH

Drawings by June Schetterer, especially for THE BULLETIN

Every clergyman needs a room of his own where he can be alone and quiet for three or four hours each day — away from his family, away from parishioners, away from office calls, etc. The lay people, in building rectories and parish houses, or remodelling these, can give full consideration to this basic need, and provide for it.

Every clergyman needs books. These are his tools. There are basic theological books that he needs to own and to live with. A few years ago the heads of the departments at Union Theological Seminary in New York listed titles of books in their respective disciplines which, in their opinion, parish ministers should have available in their own libraries. The total of these was, I should guess, more than 100 volumes. And these lists did not include Bible, dictionaries, and other reference materials that are most useful and helpful. It needs to be considered, too, that from time to time new books come along that either complement or supersede older ones. And there are many great books outside of the immediate religious field that are relevant to the clergyman's life and work and deserve places in his library. Books are expensive. A book fund might be made available by the parish to enable its rector to build his library and to subscribe to useful periodicals and newspapers.

Every clergyman needs time, as well as a place to be alone and quiet with his books, and at his studies and prayers. The lay people can cooperate in seeing that this time is made available to him. They can refrain from making unnecessary demands upon his time, especially in the morning. They can help to relieve him of all activities and responsibilities which they themselves can do as well or better than he can.

Every clergyman needs to attend conferences and retreats with fellow clergy. He needs the inspiration and renewal of refresher courses. He needs to know what other men in his field are doing. He needs the stimulus of good discussion with his peers. When he has served his parish for five or six years, his personal growth might be greatly stimulated by his taking sabbatical leave for a period of months for study and replenishment. The Church could take lessons from the military and from business in the matter of graduate study.

What can lay people do to encourage their preachers to take preaching seriously?

The most obvious answer is that they can take preaching seriously themselves and let their preachers know that they do.

At the end of 1940, after the battle of Britain, when the foundations of the Western world were shaking pretty badly, the editors of Fortune magazine, commenting on "the vicious spiral of spiritual disillusionment" that was current, wrote as follows:

"There is only one way out. The way out is the sound of a voice, not our voice, but a voice coming from something not ourselves, in the existence of which we cannot disbelieve. It is the earthly task of the pastors to hear this voice, to cause us to hear it, and to tell us what it says."

I well remember how belligerently some of the pastors reacted to the demand of this editorial. They did not fancy the role of prophet in those grim times. But have not the lay people got the right to make this demand? And should they not be bold to make it? And should not the preacher feel about his preaching function that it is precisely to communicate the "Word of God" to his hearers? Preaching is not likely to improve very much until it is taken thus seriously by both lay people and their preachers. Let there be an end, therefore, to all light and disparaging remarks about preaching. Let lay people take pains to recognize and pay tribute to good preaching when they hear it. But let them also with kindly honesty venture to let their preacher know when he is not being so good — and I do not mean just disagreeing with what he says. Let the lay people see to it that their preacher does not get away with slipshod work, or with the pretense of work, when there has been no work. This can be done in a variety of ways and should be done, of course, with good-humor, understanding, and charity.

What can lay people do to encourage preachers to work on their sermons?

In one way or another they can make it clear that they expect the preacher to spend not less than 15 or 16 hours each week on sermon preparation — more than that if necessary, and if possible. If they really mean this, they can and will cooperate in seeing that his sermon-preparation time is guaranteed him.

How can lay people help their preachers to gain in perceptiveness and understanding of the times?

In addition to whatever they can do to encourage the preacher in his own personal growth, I feel that lay people can take much more initiative than most of them usually do to cultivate true friendship with their clergyman, by having him in their homes, by getting to know him well enough to discuss with him, on a basis of friendship (and not necessarily on only a professional relationship), their work and interest concerns, their problems, perplexities, etc. Men might invite their clergyman for a visit to the office and for luncheon "downtown" occasionally.

Lay people might also take the initiative in instituting parish programs that relate religion to cultural subjects and public affairs. It is possible to plan lectures, discussions, study groups, etc., in which the preacher engages as one participant, but is relieved of responsibility for leadership and promotion. Where good music, theater, lectures, and other cultural opportunities are available, lay people can make it possible financially, and in other ways, for the preacher to attend. I have had several thoughtful persons in my parishes who gave me books which they considered I should be aware of. I have had several magazine subscriptions as Christmas presents from parishioners. I have had book orders. I have been invited to meet distinguished visitors to towns in which I have lived, and have had an opportunity to share in conversations with them. All such opportunities cannot fail to influence a man's preaching beneficially.

What can lay people do to assure their preachers freedom?

They can become active, even aggressive champions of the free pulpit — this on the basis of principle. For only as pulpits are free can preaching perform the function in a community that it is intended to perform. It is quite true that preachers sometimes go off half-cocked. But so do a lot of other people in other fields. That is no reason however for curtailing freedom of thought and freedom of speech. Lay people can at least refrain from inhibiting and intimidating threats to withdraw financial support or to withdraw from parish membership. For men with family responsibilities and small incomes such threats can be devastating and ruinous to relevant preaching. Preachers will lean over backwards to be responsible and restrained for congregations who assure a free pulpit, whether they agree or not with what the preachers say. All this ought to be axiomatic in democratic America.

Finally, what can lay people do to help the preachers feel that they are with them — en rapport, interested, concerned, sympathetic toward their endeavors?

They can sing or, if not, they can make a joyful noise unto the Lord. They can participate in prayers and responses. They can be attentive and interested. They can offer silent prayers for the

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. Where does an unbaptized baby go if it dies?

A. An unbaptized baby, if it dies, goes into the arms of the same Lord who refused to permit even the apostles to keep little children away from him. Baptism is the spiritual and moral state of being set within the context of salvation in the Church visible in the world. We need not really worry about God's not understanding. God can be trusted to love his creatures. Indeed he can be trusted to love them much more than we can ever think or appreciate.

Q. What is the Church's official stand on Confession?

A. In the second Long Exhortation, on page 88 of the Prayer Book, it is noted that if there is anyone in the congregation who by ordinary means "cannot quiet his own conscience," but requires further comfort or counsel, he is to go to the priest reading the Exhortation or to some other Minister of God's Word (this use of the word minister means anyone who has the power of Absolution) "and open his grief; that he may receive such godly counsel and advice, as may tend to the quieting of his conscience, and the removing of all scruple and doubtfulness." On page 313, in the Order for the Visitation of the Sick, there is a rubric which makes the point clear: "Then shall the sick person be moved to make a special confession of his sins, if he feels his conscience troubled with any matter; after which confession, on evidence of his repentance, the Minister shall assure him of God's mercy and forgiveness." In the Offices of Instruction,

New Building Is Dedicated At St. John's, New City

The little white church at Second and Main, built nearly a century ago, was just too small for the congregation at St. John's, New City. Furthermore, there wasn't enough land at the old site to expand properly. So two years ago the parish bought four and a half acres on Strawtown Road—along Lake DeForest not far from a burgeoning housing development.

Bishop Wetmore gives the blessing during dedication of sacristy, parish office, rector's study and kitchen at St. John's.

Last June the new St. John's Church was dedicated. It is a contemporary structure with a high roof supported by laminated columns. The interior makes the most of these soaring beams, as the accompanying pictures show. The altar was designed by Canon West.

Bishop Wetmore officiated at the dedication service. In addition to the Rev. David W. Arnold, the rector, some 15 clergy marched in the procession, including the Rev. Robert R. Rodie, Jr., Rector of the church from 1956 to 1962. He is now associated with the Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.

Fr. Rodie had blessed the ground for the new building in June, 1961, and architectural plans were drawn by Simion Gulamerian of Poughkeepsie. He is, incidentally, a vestryman at St. Andrew's, Walden. Anthony Linguanti and Son, Inc. did the general construction.

The church, sacristy, parish office, rector's study and kitchen, which have been completed, are the first stage of the church's two-fold building needs, according to Fr. Arnold. Eventually a parish house with classrooms for the Christian Education program, and a rectory will be added. The church has some 400 communicants. ■

Building Crews Busy on Warwick Church Project

Christ Church, Warwick, has torn down its old parish house and started work on a new building designed to serve more adequately the parish's growing membership.

The church, a typical white wooden country church with a peaked roof, steeple and lancet windows, has served Warwick since 1866. The parish house, acquired somewhat later, contained many small rooms. In recent years it became increasingly inadequate. In 1961, the congregation decided that a reasonable repair and remodeling job would not be sufficient, and in the long run would not pay.

The Rev. Leonel L. Mitchell is the rector. Francis A. Roy is chairman of the vestry committee in charge of the building program. Frank L. Howe of Middletown is the architect, and Neilsen Construction Co., Inc. of Warwick is the general contractor.

The new building, adjoining the church by means of a covered passage, will contain a parish hall and class area, kitchen, kindergarten and nursery rooms, classrooms for older children (one of them adaptable for conferences), a choir room, and rector's study. It will be a one-story building, harmonizing with the church in design and materials. There will be a basement under the parish hall, and an area under the roof which could be expanded into additional facilities if necessary. The rear of the property will be used for a parking lot. Cost of the entire project will be $56,866.

Construction began in September, and the new building is expected to be ready for use by Jan. 1. ■

Eric Ley Teaching Course

Eric E. Ley, Director of Stewardship for the Diocese of New York, is teaching a seven-week course this fall in an evening school sponsored by the Manhattan Division of the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

The school, the Central Manhattan School of Religion, is in its 51st year. It is attended by clergymen and laymen from churches of many denominations in this area. This year's sessions are being held every Monday night, October 7 through November 18, at 71 West 23rd Street.

Mr. Ley's course is intended to translate a concept of Christian stewardship into an action program, using tools and methods readily available within a congregation. He will deal with the philosophy of stewardship, methods, and long-range planning.

Also teaching at the school is Mrs. Margaret Lightfoot, former Director of Religious Education at St. Barnabas, Irvington. Her course is entitled "Communicating the Gospel to Children." ■

letters to the editor

As a priest of the Diocese of New York, I have been regularly receiving The Bulletin. I do appreciate this link with the life of the Diocese very much.

I also want to congratulate you on the fine job you are doing in editing a diocesan magazine that is pertinent and informative. I remember the diocesan convention that voted to expand the coverage and circulation of The Bulletin, and my personal doubts about the success of the proposed venture. I am happy to admit that my doubts have been proven unfounded.

ECW to Hold Advent Ingathering Dec. 3

The Rt. Rev. George W. Barrett, Bishop of Rochester, will preach at the United Thank Offering presentation of the Episcopal Churchwomen on Tuesday, Dec. 3, at 10:30 A.M. in the Cathedral.

Holy Communion will be followed by luncheon in Synod House undercroft and the annual Advent meeting, at which Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., diocesan president, will preside.

The afternoon speaker will be the Rev. Canon Howard A. Johnson, Canon Theologian at the Cathedral. He will present his impressions of the Anglican Congress, which he attended as a clerical delegate, and at which he delivered the concluding address.

All Churchwomen throughout the diocese are invited to attend. This Advent meeting initiates a new pattern for diocesan meetings, for after considerable deliberation the ECW board concluded that one of the major issues confronting women today is the wise use of their limited time to meet the conflicting demands of family, church and world. Because it feels responsible for doing its share to relieve some of the pressure of these conflicting demands, the board has said it will concentrate this year on only two diocesan meetings, one in December and one in May. Every effort will be made to make them really outstanding and rewarding to the women who take the time and make the effort to attend.

Both speakers on Dec. 3 are well known to women in this diocese. Bishop Barrett, until last May, was Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, where he had served for seven years. He also was president of the Standing Committee, a member of the Council of the Diocese and chairman of the Department of Promotion. He served as an Examining Chaplain and as a deputy to General Convention. Bishop Barrett has written several books. The most recent, KEY WORDS FOR LENT, was the Seabury Book for Lent, 1963.

Canon Johnson, who is in charge of arrangements for the annual School of Worship, has become a familiar figure to many women who have attended its sessions. Others have become acquainted with him through his new book, GLOBAL ODYSSEY, an account of his two-year journey to churches in 80 countries throughout the Anglican Communion. The book was written as source material for the Anglican Congress. At the Congress, a new concept of the Church's mission began to take form, and Canon Johnson's talk is expected to provide new depth and significance to "Our Witness in this Changing World," the ECW theme for 1963-64.

The United Thank Offering presentation will be the fifth to be made within the current Triennium, or three-year period between General Conventions. All UTO funds collected in 1961, 1962, and 1963 will be presented during the ECW Triennial, to be held simultaneously with General Convention in October, 1964. So far the total is $127,099. This consists of $30,138, Advent, 1961; $31,057, Spring, 1962; $32,454, Advent, 1962; and $33,450, Spring, 1963.

Canon Johnson

Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd, diocesan UTO treasurer, said last spring's ingathering is second only to the record $34,941 of Spring, 1961, although the least number of women since Advent, 1958, were involved. ■

'Episcopalian' Plan Urged

Bishop Donegan has asked churches in this diocese to consider the "family plan" of subscription offered by the national church magazine, The Episcopalian. His statement follows:

"The Church that lives to itself will die by itself." With these words begins the message from the recent Anglican Congress meeting in Toronto. The Congress also said: "Our Anglican laity want to understand their faith—they want to know how it applies to their everyday work and leisure so that they can witness to Christ."

The Episcopalian (the official national magazine of the church) is a means of bringing to the families of our diocese the mind and message of the church, its faith, its work and its mission in the world. The Family Plan of The Episcopalian is to bring this magazine into every household, and I ask that our rectors and vicars and their vestries give consideration to this project. Just as The Bulletin has proven to be a valuable media of communication on the diocesan level, so I believe The Episcopalian will enlighten the people of our diocese regarding national and international religious matters. ■

After the Ceiling Fell . . .

Spiderweb effect is created by tubular scaffolding reaching up to the 110-foot-high vaulted ceiling of St. George's, Manhattan. The ceiling, one of the highest in New York City, is being ripped out and replaced. The project became necessary after a four-foot piece of plaster tore loose recently and crashed down on the pulpit, pews, and organ console. Fortunately, the accident occurred at night, but the church was closed immediately and preparations were made to replace the entire ceiling. It is perhaps 100 years old, although experts pronounced it sound when the church was renovated in 1947. More than 5,000 organ pipes were removed and safely stored away to protect them from the avalanche of dust and debris. When the new ceiling is finished, the entire interior will be repainted. The Rev. Edward O. Miller, the rector, said he hopes the project will be finished some time this month. Meanwhile, services are being held in the parish house auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 400, and in the chapel.

HAVE A LIVELY FAITH

Drawing on his long experience and distinguished ministry as priest, pastor and teacher, Dr. Heuss addresses himself to a wide range of topics, with the prime purpose of helping lay people understand the basic doctrines of the Church. Dr. Heuss enjoins us all to know our faith and to make it known — joyously, simply and vigorously.

FOR CHRIST'S SAKE, by O. Fielding Clarke. $1.50. Morehouse-Barlow Co. 185 pages.

Since the Bishop of Woolwich wrote his sensational book, HONEST TO GOD, two opposing camps seem to have arisen. One hails the Bishop as a great champion of "religionless Christianity"; the other regards him as an archheretic. The controversy has raged.

Now an able Anglican scholar, the Rev. O. Fielding Clarke, has written a reply to HONEST TO GOD, appropriately entitled FOR CHRIST'S SAKE. In it, he considers Bishop Robinson's book chapter by chapter, pointing out what he considers the weaknesses of the Bishop's arguments for rejecting traditional Christian faith and morality. Where the Bishop's contentions are heretical, he says so plainly; but his chief complaint is that a great deal of HONEST TO GOD "is not heresy, but just nonsense."

Following his chapter-by-chapter criticism of HONEST TO GOD, the author of FOR CHRIST'S SAKE devotes the remainder of the book to a constructive consideration of the Christian Gospel in the contemporary world, with special reference to the challenges posed by Communism, secularism, technology, race, and the so-called "new morality."

HAVE A LIVELY FAITH, by the Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Church. $4.95. Morehouse-Barlow Co. 196 pages.

"This book deals with the faith of an Episcopalian. It has been published with the hope that it will help others to have a lively faith. It is an attempt to describe some of the great beliefs by which the historic church has lived from its earliest days."

So begins HAVE A LIVELY FAITH, a new book by the Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Church. Dr. Heuss is concerned that people face their problems, whether personal or corporate, in home or in church, in the nation or in the world, as Christians, and with the understanding and insight of the Gospel to support and guide them.

Using modern, plain terms to explain the Christian faith, Dr. Heuss shows its applicability to the needs of men and women today. In 39 chapters he covers many of the doctrines of the One, Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church. Some of the chapter titles are "The Virgin Birth of Jesus," "What About the Devil?" "The Facts of Easter," "What Is the Trinity?" "What About Christ's Second Coming?"

It is a book to enlighten and inspire. Dr. Heuss enjoins us all to know our faith and make it known—joyously, simply and vigorously. ■

Annual SOS Drive Will Aid Many Hungry People Abroad

The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief will be the sponsoring agency again this year for the Episcopal Church's participation in SOS, the nationwide Protestant program to help hungry people overseas. The fund drive will be held during the Thanksgiving season.

The program, known for some years as Share Our Surplus, has a new name—Share Our Substance. Its key letters, SOS, (the code signal for distress) remain the same, but the change in name symbolizes a desire to share, as Christians, our goods with the less fortunate.

SOS foods are provided without cost by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. SOS funds pay for distribution and administrative costs, and for transportation not provided by our government or those of recipient countries. More than 10 million hungry people all over the world last year received 496,933,461 pounds of SOS food. This was made possible by the churches working cooperatively through Church World Service and its Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP).

This year more than 400 million pounds of free food again will be distributed through SOS. Some food will be purchased when vitally needed and not in surplus supply. Individuals and parishes within the Episcopal Church take part in the program by sending donations to the Presiding Bishop's Fund, the Church's year-round agency for relief. Checks should be sent to The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief, 815 Second Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017, and clearly marked "Share Our Substance."

During the first five months of 1963, the Diocese of New York gave $3,308.60 to the Presiding Bishop's Fund. In 1962 the amount was $3,374 .25 during the same period. ■ preacher and his message.

How to Help your Minister . . .

The story has been told at the College of Preachers of a nervous preacher whose congregation wanted to give him a sense of support. One Sunday when he went into the pulpit he found before him written in large letters this message:

"RELAX! — IF WE DIDN'T LOVE YOU, YOU WOULDN'T BE HERE!"

There are an increasing number of preachers nowadays who are enlisting the help of lay people in their sermon preparation, and/or in discussing it afterwards. A week or two in advance of their personal preparation, for example, some preachers gather a group together to discuss the sermon theme and a related Scripture passage. The lay people ask questions about theme and text; they give valuable insights as to ways and means of organizing the sermon and expressing it so that it will communicate. In many other parishes, opportunity is given for either formal or informal post-preaching discussion—to ask questions, to make comments, even to venture constructive criticism. This kind of assistance from the lay people can be very helpful if the preacher really wants it and asks for it.

Let me say again, "Don't expect your preacher to be great." There are not many great preachers. There are not many "greats" in any field; not many great doctors, great lawyers, great statesmen, great soldiers, great business leaders. What makes the world go around is not so much greatness as just reasonable competence and hard, conscientious work. Almost certainly, your preacher can be competent. He can grow as a Christian man, as a skillful workman, as an interesting, effective preacher. ■

Tower shaped like a cross, with a cross hung within a symbolical representation of the world, will make the Protestant and Orthodox Center at the New York World's Fair a landmark for visitors. The Episcopal Church is planning a display here.

Episcopal Church World's Fair Display to Be Joint Enterprise

When the New York World's Fair opens next April 22, an Episcopal Church display will be there. It will occupy a space 24 by 25 feet in the Protestant and Orthodox Center.

This center, located on one of the major traffic ways of the fair, is now under construction at a cost of approximately $1.5 million. It is a building of unusual architecture, featuring an 80-foot tower. The tower will be topped by an illuminated cross suspended within a stylized representation of the world to carry out the theme of the center—"Jesus Christ the Light of the World."

At the foot of the tower is planned a Court of Protestant Pioneers, formed by 34 columns, each to be dedicated to a pioneer in the Protestant movement. The exhibit pavilion itself will contain 26,000 feet for displays showing the work of major denominations and their related organizations. A special film is under production. It will be shown in a theater especially designed for this contemporary building.

Building of the Protestant Center has been a project of the Protestant Council of the City of New York through a steering committee made up of denominational representatives. Bishop Wetmore has represented the Diocese of New York on this committee.

Another committee under Bishop Wetmore's chairmanship is now at work planning the Episcopal display. Its members are Mrs. Roger Glen Mook, Diocese of South Florida; Bishop Charles W. MacLean, the Rev. Dougald Maclean and the Rev. Malcolm Haight, all of Long Island; John Reinhardt, representing the Presiding Bishop; Herbert West, member of the Department of Promotion, National Council of the Episcopal Church; Ellsworth Wallace and Pennell Kirkbride, representing the Diocese of New York.

The dioceses of Long Island, South Florida, Newark and New York, with assistance from the National Council, have put together $53,000 to underwrite the Episcopal display. According to Bishop Wetmore, more money is assured, and much more than is now assumed will be needed to develop, maintain, and staff the display for two periods of six months each while the World's Fair is in progress. ■

Laymen's Club Plans Evening of Recordings

The Laymen's Club of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine will hold a preview of new recordings made by the Cathedral Choir under the direction of Alec Wyton, Organist and Master of Choristers. This preview will be held Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 8:30 P.M., in St. James' Chapel at the Cathedral. All interested individuals are invited to attend. ■

Viewpoint

"News that you read on the front page and throughout the paper — all of it — is really the story of your church.

"Now it never says this. It is news from Washington, Moscow, Havana, or the city council. But it is, either negatively or positively, the story of what the Church is doing in the world today.

"If all of us read the newspaper in this fashion, we would more quickly discover where the Church fits in and what our business is."

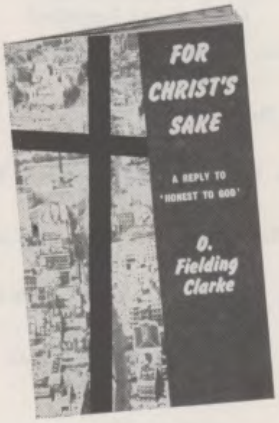
BY O. FIELDING CLARKE, VICAR OF HAZELWOOD, ENGLAND

A REPLY to the controversial book HONEST TO GOD by the Bishop of Woolwich.



FOR CHRIST'S SAKE is a thoughtful and searching examination of the Bishop of Woolwich's HONEST TO GOD, showing some of the serious faults in its argument. The book is divided into two sections: Part one is a critique of HONEST TO GOD, chapter by chapter; Part two, a re-statement in modern terms of what Christianity stands for and how it should apply today.

● The Rev. Arthur R. Willis, Rector of Grace Church, Hastings-on-Hudson, exchanged pulpits last summer with the vicar of a picturesque village church in England. Mr. Willis and his wife and son spent six weeks at St. Mark's, Reigate, Surrey. The village is one of those through which the Canterbury pilgrims are said to have traveled. Today, while proud of its historical roots, St. Mark's is a vigorous and growing parish, Mr. Willis reports. Taking his place in Hastings was the Rev. E. Neville Martin, and his wife and son.

● With plans to demolish the old parish house at Church of the Transfiguration, Manhattan, (The Little Church Around the Corner) arose a rather critical problem of rehearsal space for the boys' and men's choir during the next eight or nine months. To the rescue came a good neighbor, the Roman Catholic Convent of St. Mary Reparatrix, across the street. The sisters have given the choir permission to use the crypt of their chapel. When asked if the choir could make a donation to the order for the use of this space, the Mother Superior replied, "No, tell your Rector that this is our contribution to the building of your new parish house."

● Trinity Church, New Rochelle, was proud to admit its age one day last month. The occasion was the 275th anniversary of the founding of New Rochelle by the Huguenots. They were persecuted Protestants who fled from La Rochelle, France, came to the British Colonies in 1685 and founded what is now the bustling Westchester city. In 1709, they conformed to the Church of England, received a charter from George III, and that was the beginning of the Trinity Church of today. Trinity was one of two churches to hold a commemorative service when the city's anniversary was celebrated on Oct. 20. The other was First Presbyterian Church on North Avenue. ■

Diocese's Summer Ministry Aids Warwick Valley Migrant Workers

For the second year, the Diocese of New York had an important part in the Warwick Valley's summer program of ministering to the hundreds of migrant workers brought into that area by produce farmers. The diocese provided the services of James H. Ottley, a senior at El Seminario Episcopal del Caribe, Puerto Rico. Under the direction of a local committee, he served as chaplain to the migrant workers.

The Rev. Leonel L. Mitchell, Rector of Christ Church, Warwick, was chairman of the committee, which served in cooperation with the Migrant Commission of the New York State Council of Churches. The Episcopal Church participated in the work through its diocesan Departments of Missions and Christian Social Relations.

The migrant workers were transported from their farms to Warwick every Sunday for an afternoon service in Spanish conducted by Mr. Ottley, and for an afternoon of recreation at Christ Church parish house and the village park. During the week, services and programs were held in many of the camps. Mr. Ottley, Father Mitchell and other local clergymen preached.

During the summer, Congresswoman Catherine St. George (a member of St. Mary's, Tuxedo) visited the area to obtain data for Congressional bills which will affect migrant workers. ■

■ TWO BULLETIN covers have been used by an artist in Florida as the model for oil paintings he completed recently. The artist is George Rounds, who until he retired in 1959 was a member of the accounting department in the diocesan treasurer's office. Now he lives in Clearwater, Fla., where he is a vestryman at Good Samaritan Episcopal Church and has been a delegate to General Convention.

The covers he chose to reproduce were January, 1962, which depicted Bishop Donegan ordaining nine men to the diaconate at the Cathedral altar; and March, 1963, "The Good Samaritan," a photo of the carved reredos in the Medical Bay at the Cathedral. Mr. Rounds reports that he was offered $100 for his ordination painting, but he declined to sell it. While he was on the diocesan staff, Mr. Rounds held an after-hours art class for other interested staff members. He has been painting for many years.

■ THE NEW YORK CITY Mission Society has appointed an Episcopalian, Dr. Anne Fried, as assistant director in charge of program. It is a newly created position. Dr. Fried, Austrian-born, and now a United States citizen, has a special interest in Christian education among deprived city children.

Kennedy Receives Family of Man Award From NY Protestant Council

Editor's Note: News of President Kennedy's assassination was received just before press time. The Family of Man Award, given by the Protestant Council, was one of the last honors he received.

One of the largest testimonial banquets on record was held at the New York Hilton on Nov. 8, when the Protestant Council of the City of New York honored President John F. Kennedy.

Mr. Kennedy received the Family of Man Award for his "outstanding contributions and distinguished services to the cause of human rights and democratic freedoms." Nearly 4,000 people paid $100 a plate to attend the glittering affair, which was planned with two purposes in mind:

* To honor the President and express the appreciation of the Protestant community for his continued zealous defense of freedom and human rights during the first three years of his term in office.

* To launch the Society of the Family of Man.

This Society will be an informal organization of people who, by their interest and financial resources, will make possible a much stronger interfaith program of community service by the Protestant Council in New York than was ever possible before.

Bishop Donegan was seated with the guest of honor, and attending also were Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore, and their wives. The Rev. Ralph W. Sockman was Master of Ceremonies. The Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Rector of St. James' Church, and President of the Protestant Council, made the presentation to President Kennedy. George Champion, Chairman of the Board of the Chase Manhattan Bank, was chairman of the dinner. Gov. Rockefeller and Mayor Wagner were honorary co-chairmen. Bishop Wetmore is Chairman of the Evaluation Committee of the Protestant Council, and a member of its Board of Directors.

The Society's name, "Family of Man," derives from the Greek Biblical phrase, Pasa Patria, which means "the whole family." It symbolizes the Protestant Council's awareness that "all peoples of the inhabited earth are one family under God." By creating the Society, the Protestant Council plans to increase greatly its work in the areas of juvenile delinquency, child and family counseling, treatment of the sick and infirm, and other forms of community service.

At the same time, it will honor each year persons of international stature who have provided outstanding and creative leadership in five key areas: world peace, human relations, education, race relations and mass communication. ■

Church Buys House - - After 46 Years

After 46 years of keeping its eye on a piece of real estate, St. John's in the Village has finally been able to buy it. The property, a century-old, four-story house, is adjacent to St. John's parish house. It is being renovated so that the first floor can be used for offices and church school facilities. The other floors contain apartments, some of which will house staff members in the future.

The Rev. Charles H. Graf, the rector, said the church has been planning to buy this house since it began to acquire its real estate holdings in 1917. St. John's owns 12 residential buildings bordering the church and its well-known garden, but never before has there been a chance to expand parish house facilities. The present parish house at 224 Waverly Place has been crowded for many years, Father Graf said. In fact, for three years the church has rented part of the newly acquired house for use as the rector's office.

Acquisition of the property is part of a five-year renovation program begun by St. John's early this year. The architect in charge is Edgar Tafel, designer of the Protestant Chapel at Idlewild International Airport. ■

Pastoral Interns Get Fellowships

The New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society has established two one-year Fellowships in Clinical Pastoral Training.

The Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Society, said that the fellowships, created with the assistance of National Council, will provide the students with a six-month theological internship at Bellevue Hospital, and another six months at the New York City Correctional Institution for Men on Rikers Island.

The Society has maintained a center for clinical training in both of these institutions for some years on a tuition basis. Each has an average attendance of 20 seminarians or clergymen.

Mr. Bonacker said that the Society has started a third program of training at the various institutions which comprise Grasslands in Westchester. He added that the Society hopes to expand this work, particularly by training young Negro clergy as future chaplains. ■

The Bishop's Christmas Message

Once again we are preparing to celebrate the birth of the Prince of Peace, and join in the angelic chorus "peace on earth to men of good will." Christmas speaks of peace on earth—not of peace as a dream or a hope, but of peace actual, realized, and reigning on earth.

When we contemplate the tragic facts of the world situation today we might possibly wonder whether God really intends to answer our prayers for peace, at least for this earth, and in our time. The angel's song seems to state a prophecy which has not been fulfilled. Where is this promised peace?

It is well to remember that the message and the promise was not peace to all men. It was not a proclamation of unconditional peace; the promise was to men of good will.

The way of peace has been opened to us! It is the way our Lord took—the way of good will, of uncompromising love and forgiveness. The tragedy of the world is not the failure of God but the failure of man to walk in the way which leads to peace. The reason we have not yet been able to create a world of settled and secure peace is that our efforts have lacked just this spirit of good will. There can be no peace now, or ever, without human cooperation, and that cooperation must be the expression of good will in human hearts.

When we ask whether the bitter racial jealousies and the national rivalries will ever be submerged in the interest of the larger good, in the welfare of all; when we wonder if mankind is ready, or ever will be ready, to think genuinely in world terms, the answer lies in the heart of the Christmas message, in the angel's song on that memorable night while the shepherds watched their flocks.

Wherever there is good will, there is peace. The ambassadors of God were telling the truth; there is always peace on earth among men of good will.

May God bless you this Christmas, and guide and protect you throughout the New Year.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Anniversary Fund

Five years ago, the Diocese of New York embarked upon one of the most ambitious and vital programs in its long history—the 175th Anniversary Fund. Its purpose was to guarantee that the thousands of families affected by the tremendous revolution in housing, both in the city and suburbs, would have churches.

Within New York City, many "new cities within our city" were arising. At least half a million people saw their old dwellings—the musty, old-law tenements—come tumbling down under the wrecker's bulldozer. These people were transplanted from old, crowded slums to well-planned, high-rise apartments. A beneficent government had planned virtually everything for them—transportation, heat, light, water, plumbing, schools, stores, trees and playgrounds. But government agencies did not, and could not, plan churches.

In the suburbs a new phenomenal growth also was occurring. Sleepy hamlets in Rockland and Westchester counties were becoming a real estate developer's paradise, and thousands of new homes were springing up in the counties of Orange, Ulster and Dutchess. Many Episcopal churches which suddenly found themselves in the midst of this new growth, some of which were missions and some assisted parishes, did not have sufficient resources to meet the opportunities which were presented.

Thus, Bishop Donegan asked the entire diocese to help provide funds that would enable the Church in the next five years to keep pace with these unprecedented challenges. In the city, the Anniversary Fund was to give outright grants for new churches, additions and renovations. For the suburbs, a "revolving fund" was to be set up, enabling churches to obtain needed facilities quickly, and pay back the money that was borrowed, over varying periods.

Now five years have passed.

Many of the Church's critical needs have been met as the result of the Diocese's response to the 175th Anniversary Fund. Some have not, because the Fund did not reach the goal that was set. And of course, there are needs now that were not evident five years ago.

Here are the solid accomplishments of the Fund from 1958 until the present:

IN THE CITY

|---|---|
| A new church house and clergy apartments at St. Paul's, Bronx | $103,129 |
| New parish house, St. Margaret's, Bronx | $205,330 |
| Extensive renovations to St. Mary's Church, Manhattanville, and purchase of Manhattanville Community Center for parish house, including operating expenses for five years | $120,917 |
| Land and new parish house, St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan | $332,018 |
| Land and new church, All Saints, Staten Island (contract about to be let) | $210,964 |
| Renovation of gymnasium building for St. Peter's, Chelsea | $ 70,000 |
| Land and new church, parish house, rectory, St. Andrew's, Bronx and program subsidy for five years | $622,452 |
| Total | $1,664,810 |

IN THE SUBURBS

Below are the suburban projects which have been accomplished or are commitments of the 175th Anniversary Fund. All buildings are constructed on a loan basis from the New Revolving Fund which was established as a result of the 175th Anniversary Campaign.

|---|---|
| Land, new church, St. Anne's Washingtonville | $ 51,240 |
| New church and parish rooms, All Saints, Valley Cottage | $ 83,388 |
| New church, parish house and rectory, Church of Christ the King, Stone Ridge | $132,218 |
| New parish house, St. Gregory's, Woodstock | $ 28,614 |
| Rectory at the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, and site for church | $ 33,000 |
| Land, rectory, church and parish hall, Church of the Resurrection, Hopewell Junction | $115,000 |
| Parish house, Divine Love, Montrose | $ 40,000 |
| Parish house, St. James, Dover Plains | $ 12,800 |
| Total | $496,260 |

But what about the future?

When the 175th Anniversary Fund was conceived, the Convention voted to keep it open perpetually for gifts to be used to meet new needs. Many people have continued to give far beyond what they originally pledged, and many such gifts, in securities, real estate and cash, have been received at Christmas time.

Gifts of this kind would go a long way toward making possible, for example, a badly needed renovation project at historic St. Ann's, Morrisania. This church, in a critical and strategic area of the diocese, needs work which may cost more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, with a fast-growing congregation, crowded into an inadequate old wooden building, badly needs a new church. The land has been acquired, but there are insufficient funds to loan this church in order to build the structure. ■

Bishop of New York Is Re-elected As President of Second Province

Bishop Donegan was re-elected as President of the Second Province of the Episcopal Church at the provincial Synod held in Newark, N. J., on Oct. 21, 22 and 23. He will serve for three years.

The Province is one of eight geographical areas into which the Episcopal Church is divided, and the Synod is its legislative body. The Second Province consists of the Dioceses of New York, Long Island, Albany, Central New York, Rochester, Western New York, Newark, and New Jersey, and the Missionary Districts of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, the Panama Canal Zone and Central America.

At the three-day meeting, delegates to the Synod heard an address by Bishop Daniel Corrigan, Director of the Home Department, National Council. At one point he asserted that the Church's only mission is to this world, and that problems are not to be solved by withdrawing from the world. He asserted that the chief problem of the Church is not "money" but "ideas," and he urged that the Church find increasingly better ways of making use of the intelligence and imagination of its laity.

Bishop Charles A. Voegeli of Haiti, Bishop Cedric Mills of the Virgin Islands, Bishop Albert E. Swift of Puerto Rico, and Bishop Paul A. Kellogg of the Dominican Republic presented reports from their Missionary Districts. A budget for the coming year was adopted.

The next Synod meeting, in 1965, will be held in the Diocese of Albany. In 1964, because of General Convention, the Synod will not meet. ■

Epiphany Chapel Completes 25-year Building Schedule

Building plans made at Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan, 25 years ago reached completion this fall with the dedication of St. Faith's Chapel. Bishop Donegan officiated at the service on Nov. 3. The chapel was given in memory of the late Rev. William T. Crocker, Rector from 1903 to 1933, and then Rector Emeritus.

The Rev. John Crocker, Headmaster of Groton School, and the Rev. John Crocker, Jr., Chaplain to Episcopal Students at Brown University, participated in the service. They are the nephew and grand-nephew, respectively, of the former rector.

The 25-year plan envisaged a church seating 400, a chapel seating 35, and a vestibule. At that time, all the congregation could build was a part of the church seating 250. Ten years ago, the vestibule was added. Two years ago the nave was lengthened. This year the chapel was built. Now, with the chapel which adjoins the church, the edifice seats 400.

A new organ, necessitated by the enlargement of the church, and an iron fence enclosing a small outside court, will be installed early next year. ■

CHRISTMAS IN JERUSALEM

By the Rev. Canon
John D. Zimmerman

St. George's Cathedral
Jerusalem

Many of you would not recognize Christmas in this part of the world as the festival you know, because few of the local customs are like those in America.

Almost unknown are the common external evidences of Christmas to be seen in New York—colored lights, tinsel, trees, window displays, carols and commercials.

Souvenir shops near the hotels in Jerusalem have a suggestion of cotton snow and a sign "Merry Christmas." There are a few imported Santa Claus cards in a book stall. A grocer has tins of plum pudding decorated with holly or poinsettia. Nowhere can be seen the lavish displays to which we are accustomed at home.

There is no last-minute rush to buy a Christmas tree. None are for sale, anyway. Wood is too precious in this land to be used so carelessly. With reforestation a major project, anyone discovered cutting a small fir tree might well spend his Christmas in jail. Our own tree, in our home within the Close at St. George's Cathedral, is two feet high, of plastic. There are three Christmas trees in public places in Jerusalem—live trees, strung with lights—at St. George's Hostel, at the YMCA, and at one hotel.

For that matter, why should anyone expect Christmas displays here? In the divided Holy Land, Jordan is 90 per cent Moslem, and Israel is 90 per cent Jewish. For the Jew, the Messiah has not yet come, and Issa (Jesus), though reckoned as one of the prophets of Islam, is not THE prophet. Christmas has no significance to adherents of these religions. Curiously enough, however, Islam teaches the Virgin Birth. But the story in the Koran bears no resemblance to the familiar account in St. Luke.

Then, too, our Western observance of Christmas on December 25 seems premature to the Orthodox Christians, who observe January 6, and to the Armenians, who observe January 19. The traditions of the Eastern churches and peoples do not include our kind of Christmas decorations except in a few cases. And then it seems to be merely an incongruently transplanted German or English or American custom.

Jerusalem is filled with tourists and pilgrims (there is a difference) for each celebration of the Feast of the Nativity, called in Arabic Eid

Magnum Photo

Meelaad Mujeed (the Feast of the Glorious Birth). Jerusalem happens to be the place where hotel accommodations are; all attention is really directed toward Bethlehem, a village ten miles to the south.

Advent is strictly regarded. The first intimation of Christmas is the arrival of the Latin Patriarch in Bethlehem about 1:30 P.M. on Christmas Eve. He is received and escorted to Manger Square by the mayor and civil and military authorities, a courtesy given likewise to the Orthodox and Armenian Patriarchs.

Hundreds attend the YMCA-sponsored service in the Shepherds' Field, also called the Field of Boaz, near Bethlehem. Usually conducted by an Arab clergyman of the Evangelical Episcopal Church, it offers carols and devotions in Arabic and English, followed by a simple supper in the Cave of the Shepherds.

Meanwhile, in the late afternoon, we at St. George's Close in Jerusalem begin to be caught up in a heightened tempo of activity. Buses have arrived; clergy, choir and congregation are gathering to "go even unto Bethlehem." The choir, blind girls from the "Hitherto Hath the Lord Helped Us" School, are guided to their bus, and off we go.

It is dark, and we can see the lights of cars, taxis and buses almost bumper-to-bumper. The road meanders over the countryside with several choice hair-pin turns, and presently the glow of Bethlehem appears. Into Manger Square we drive. Already there are too many people and too many cars. Horns blow. Drivers shout. The police try to sort out the chaos quite unsuccessfully. What a jam! Humanity with a babel of tongues, with a wide variety of costume! Shops are open. Hawkers offer sweetmeats and postcards. The Arab Army band plays tunes like "Roll out the Barrel!"

An American's first reaction is: This isn't Christmas! Bethlehem wasn't like this!

Wasn't it? There was no room then, for the crowds had come in the days of Caesar Augustus—it must have been much like this those centuries ago.

We make our way down Milk Grotto Street to a side entrance and into the courtyard of the Church of the Nativity, where we shall have our carol service. There is time for a visit to the Grotto of the Nativity, and we look at the star marking the place where He lay. In a cave? Under a church? Is this the place?

Our Bible story books show a proper European stable, but in Palestine caves have sheltered man and beast for centuries, when there has been no room at the inn or at any other lodging. Until recently, caves were the only home which many refugees knew. Even now, caves are convenient for shepherds with their sheep and goats.

To the right of the Star of the Nativity in the Grotto is the stone manger. A stone manger, too? Oh, yes, they are quite commonly found. I have seen a great cave along the sides of which had been cut mangers for 100 beasts, and this cave is dated archeologically to about 200 B.C. Beside the stone manger in the Grotto a German group is singing softly: "Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht. . . ."

As we go out to the courtyard again, many people have crowded in. Usually there are about 2,000—a sprinkling of Arabs, but mostly the congregation is foreign, from Europe and the United States. We see the

About the author:

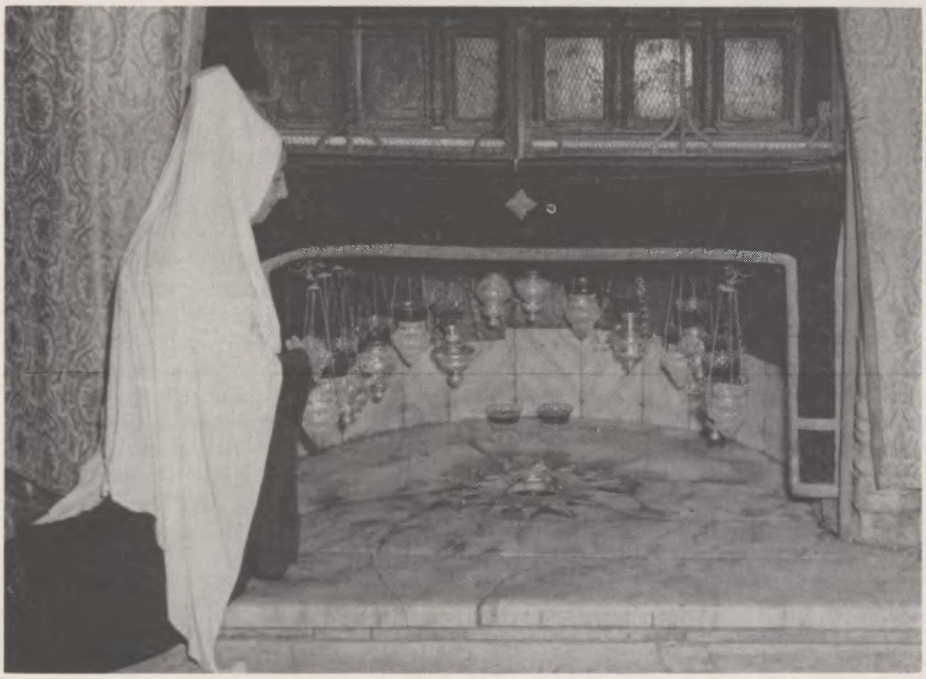
Canon Zimmerman is the father of Mrs. Virginia Chase, wife of the Rev. Canon Peter Chase, Canon Pastor at the Cathedral. Since 1960 he has been an appointed missionary of the Overseas Department, National Council, to the staff of the Archbishop in Jerusalem, the Most Rev. Angus Campbell MacInnes. Canon Zimmerman is one of three residentiary canons at St. George's Cathedral. He is a retired captain in the United States Navy, having served as a navy chaplain for nearly 30 years. He is a graduate of Kenyon College and Bexley Hall, Gambier, Ohio, and earned his Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md. During a visit to his daughter and her family last summer, Canon Zimmerman agreed to write "Christmas in Jerusalem" especially for The Bulletin.

The Latin Patriarch, Msgr. Gori, enters Manger Square, Bethlehem, accompanied by the Mayor, the city council, clergy and citizens.



The Grotto of the Nativity beneath the high altar of the Church of the Nativity, Bethlehem. The star is said to mark the place where the Christ Child lay. The kneeling woman is garbed in typical dress of a Bethlehem woman. Worn under her veil is a small conical cap, said to have been adapted from the head dress of wives of the crusaders. Throngs pay homage at this spot every Christmas Eve.

uniforms of the Jordanian police and the troops on leave from Gaza. Most of them are young Scandinavians, and there are some Canadians.

So our service begins, the carols, the lessons, the prayers. These are familiar. This is home, and it is truly Christmas for us under the stars in Bethlehem. We are joyful and triumphant. We have come to Bethlehem to adore Him, Christ the Lord. As we leave, the Church of the Nativity remains dimly lighted. It is still Advent to members of the Orthodox Church!

With this preparation, we return to St. George's Cathedral in Jerusalem for our midnight Eucharist. It will be according to the English Prayer Book of 1662, with the musical setting by Merbecke. What a mixture of the familiar and the unfamiliar we have had this night!

Christmas Day brings more services, in Arabic and in English, (one will be according to the American Prayer Book) so that both the residents and the strangers who are within our gates may have the opportunity to welcome this Child once again. Christmas afternoon is free, and finally we of the Cathedral staff can have time to be with our families, and to share in our traditional gift-giving. It has been a working day—but how glorious! Christ has come again, to us, in His own land.

On Christmas night we are all, adults and children, guests at the Archbishop's home—clergy, staff, guests at St. George's Hostel. This is an English evening, right out of Dickens. It isn't quite the way we do things in the United States, but then whoever said that Christmas was American? The joy is to the world that the Lord has come.

On the next day calls are made and returned. The Orthodox, Armenians, Syrians, Copts, Ethiopians and Greek Uniats will call on the Archbishop as a gesture of respect to his observance of Christmas. We shall return the calls on the proper occasion in the coming weeks. Representatives of the Latin Churches will call and be called upon. (Roman Catholics are known as Latins in the Holy Land, for locally the Arabic word for the Orthodox is "Roumi," from the days of the Eastern Roman Empire of Byzantium.) These prelates include the Latin Patriarch, the Maronite Bishop, the Franciscan Custos Terrae Sanctae, and the Papal Delegate. We are ecumenical in Jerusalem. In fact, we are more than ecumenical, for the Archbishop will also receive calls from the Moslem civil authorities, from Moslem mukhtars of villages built by the Church, and from the Samaritan high priest.

The Child of Bethlehem is acknowledged, even by those who know Him not! ■

Information Center Offers Guided Tours

Since the Information Center at the Episcopal Church's new national headquarters opened last winter, thousands of people have crossed its threshold. Located as it is, just to the right of the main entrance of the Episcopal Church Center, Second Ave. and 43rd St., N.Y.C., the Information Center has been a magnet both for casual pedestrians with no church ties in particular, and for purposeful Episcopalians eager to see National Council's new building.

The center's "chief guide," the Rev. E. Donald Hood, reports that at least 3,000 visitors have received personally conducted tours of the building so far. These tours, or "pilgrimages," as Mr. Hood prefers to call them, are conducted by him with the assistance of some 50 volunteer guides from the dioceses of New York, New Jersey, Newark, Long Island and Connecticut. The tours last about an hour and a quarter, and they are free.

Each starts with a relaxed, informal chat in the Information Center. Then the visitors go to the chapel, either for one of the regular weekday services or brief devotions led by Mr. Hood. In the chapel he also gives a short talk. If the group is large, it is divided into smaller sections at this point, each led by a volunteer. After viewing the mosaic map of Anglicanism in the lobby, the visitors progress through the semi-public portions of the building—the lounge, cafeteria, library and so forth. The Presiding Bishop's secretary, Miss Maude McCosland, always has a word or two with the groups. And if possible, Bishop Lichtenberger greets them in person. Otherwise Bishops Bentley or Corrigan do the honors. Finally, there is a brief talk on overseas missions, women's work or the work of National Council in general.

In numbers, the tours have ranged all the way from one person to a busload. A few large groups have booked as far ahead as next May. People from nearby parishes, in town for the day alone or with a friend, usually just pop in and are graciously welcomed by Mr. Hood. Visiting hours are 10:00 A.M. to 3:30 P.M. Monday through Friday. Out-of-towners or large parish groups should make reservations. Saturday tours for groups will be arranged if Mr. Hood receives advance notice. And individuals who simply cannot come any other day but Saturday may call him and join one of these tours.

(To make a reservation, write the Rev. E. Donald Hood, Information Center, Episcopal Church Center, 815 Second Avenue, New York, NY, or phone him at TN 7-8400, ext. 287.)

Between tours, Mr. Hood deals with a diverse assortment of visitors. About 40%, he estimates, are "lapsed" Christians who need sympathy, understanding and gentle piloting back into the fold of habitual church goers. Many people seek his counsel simply because he is in the national church headquarters. They are not ready to be involved in any particular parish yet, and therefore they don't want to question a parish priest.

To sum up, the Information Center functions as the church's "living room," a place where visitors can spend a casual "coffeeless coffee hour," where they can read, look at the most recent display of paintings, sculpture or photographs, ask questions, or just talk casually with Mr. Hood or his volunteer staffers. Our reason for being here," he says, "is to convey the idea of honest, Christian concern." ■

Strategically seated so he can welcome visitors, the Rev. E. Donald Hood, in charge of the Information Center at the Episcopal Church Center, confers with a volunteer. Mr. Hood previously had five years of experience in pastoral counseling at St. Luke's Hospital before becoming "chief guide" of the Information Center last winter.

People and Parishes

● The Rev. Hugh McCandless, Rector of Epiphany, Manhattan, has given his parishioners a number of suggestions for the observance of a more meaningful Christmas: Allow children to help with Christmas preparations. Buy religious articles as "stocking stuffers." Give religious books as presents. Be sure churchgoing is part of the Christmas program. Don't let commercial or social pressures persuade you to crowd Christmas into Advent. Stress Christmas as Our Lord Jesus' birthday, and remember that we give presents because He was such a wonderful Gift to us all.

● Five thousand miles is farther than from here to California. But the Rev. Fenimore E. Cooper, Rector of St. Mary's, Tuxedo, has walked that far! Mr. Cooper is as dedicated a walker as ex-President Truman. In fact, the two men have had conversations about it.

The ex-President has never walked with the clergyman, however. "You walk too fast for me," Mr. Truman told him once. (His daughter, Margaret Truman Daniel, has a summer home in Tuxedo.)

Mr. Cooper began his daily walks on doctor's orders shortly after recovering from a mild heart attack in 1958. At first he could walk only a short way, and he estimated his mileage. Later, someone gave him a pedometer. Now he's up to three or four miles a day. Part of this time he devotes to prayers for parishioners who are sick or have special problems. The rest of the time is used for his daily devotions, usually Morning Prayer. Mr. Cooper never walks on Sunday. "I believe one should rest on Sunday from whatever one habitually does," he declared.

● On his way back from the Anglican Congress, the Bishop of Connor, Northern Ireland, preached at St. John's, Getty Square, Yonkers. For one parishioner, Mrs. Katrine Isachsen, the Bishop's visit was a happy reunion. More than 50 years ago she tutored Robert Cyril Hamilton Glover Elliott in Northern Ireland. This was long before he added "the Rt. Rev." to his name.

● The clergy at St. James', Manhattan—all four of them—are wearing "equality" buttons. In fact, so are a number of their parishioners. These are the small, black lapel buttons with a white equal sign on them. They are produced at two cents apiece and sell for a dollar. The mark-up goes to four civil rights groups: The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, the Congress of Racial Equality, and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. All were sponsors of the recent March on Washington. One woman at St. James' has sold nearly 500 buttons to her friends and neighbors. Other churches in the diocese wishing to have a supply of these buttons may call the parish office at St. James. ■

Woman's Council Names Chairmen

Two new chairmen have been appointed to convocation committees of the Woman's Council, New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society.

They are Mrs. John L. Cox, Westchester Committee, and Mrs. H. Edgar Timmerman, Hudson Committee. Mrs. Cox succeeds Mrs. E. Walter Chater, founder of the Westchester Committee, and its chairman for the past four years. Mrs. H. John Wilkins, Jr., was formerly the Hudson chairman.

At the annual Woman's Council luncheon in October, Bishop Donegan presented scrolls of appreciation to Mrs. Chater, Mrs. Wilkins and to Basil Rathbone for his three benefit programs for Elko Lake Camps. ■

Work Begins At All Saints Staten Island

Five years ago this month, a smoky, two-alarm fire enveloped All Saints Church, Mariners Harbor, S. I., and left the small frame structure a scorched ruin.

The fire, which occurred the day before Christmas, put an end to any bright prospects which this mission congregation might have had for the year ahead. And it did have high hopes. Pledged income had more than doubled over the previous year. Important improvements had been made to the church building, and others were planned. But all expectations went up in smoke with the building.

Now, at long last, All Saints will have a new home.

It will be strategically located, in a fast-developing neighborhood, on land purchased by the Department of Missions on Victory Blvd., some three miles inland and southeast of the old location. The building, designed by Lucas E. Bannan and James Tellefsen of Hohokus, N. J., will be of brick. It will cost approximately $120,000. The contracts are about to be let.

It will be a multi-purpose structure, with church and parish hall all in one. The choir will be in the rear. A lounge, just off the main area, will be used as a nursery room on Sundays. The sacristy and office, opening into the main area from either side, will double as Church School classrooms.

All Saints Church began in 1889 as a Sunday School in a private school building near Mariners Harbor. Later it became a mission of Church of the Ascension. In 1906 it became independent. In 1907 it bought a site at Mariners Harbor, but it was unable to build a church. In 1914 it procured a "floating church" originally operated by the Seaman's Church Institute in Manhattan, and later moved to a mooring at Mariners Harbor. The "floating church" was raised from its barge, placed on a foundation, and was used by All Saints until the fire of 1958. ■

Dutchess County Churches Hold School of Religion

All summer long, two clergymen and about 13 Episcopal Laymen of Dutchess County worked on plans for a four-session School of Religion to be held on four Monday evenings during October at Zion Church, Wappingers Falls. They did their work so well that the school is reported to have been one of the most successful on record.

The theme was "Updated Christianity" in the sense of discovering the relevance and impact of the Christian faith in today's real life situations. The Rev. Dr. William Sadler of Dover Plains and the Rev. John Miner of Pleasant Valley were the clergy advisers.

The format included an informal social period, during which the participants simply got acquainted; a film of about 15 minutes, which illustrated the evening's problem; a generous discussion period, which took place in small groups led by the trained laymen; and a theological "statement," which looked at the problem from the Scriptural point of view.

The subjects were "The Problem of Finding Acceptance," "The Problem of Family Tensions," "Dealing with Fears," and "What Is the Church?"

Fr. Miner was in charge of the ELNY members who served as discussion leaders, and Dr. Sadler presented the theological "statements." However, he ended the last session not with a statement but with some New Testament pointers about what the Church should be in the world, and asked in conclusion, "Are we being the Church?"

An estimated 125 persons were registered. Although attendance usually drops off in a series like this, the school actually gained participants as the weeks went by, Dr. Sadler reported. The "students" came from most of the churches in the Dutchess Convocation. The ELNY representatives were from Zion, Wappingers Falls; Holy Trinity, Pawling; Grace, Millbrook; Christ Church and St. Andrew's Church, Poughkeepsie; and Messiah, Rhinebeck. ■

As an American citizen as well as an Episcopalian, I cannot help but deplore the obvious pride with which you mention the arrest of several priests in your article on Racial Protest in the October issue.

I believe that discrimination is morally wrong, and that where the law supports it, the law should be changed; BUT the way to achieve change is not to BREAK the law, and the way to set a proper example for young Christians is hardly to take "the law in your own hands," as Judge Ringel put it.

In this time of unrest and upset, when steps forward must be taken in racial as well as other social relations throughout the world, let us not lose sight of the basic tenets of our Republic—a government of law and not of men.

If a man disagrees with the law, let him speak out to change it; but let him not ignore nor flout it. This must certainly be especially true in the case of priests of the Church, to whom we all look for moral guidance. One can never look to the end to justify improper means.

ECW Board Plans Two-day Meeting

The annual two-day conference for the diocesan board of Episcopal Churchwomen will be held Jan. 21 and 22 at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park. The board will plan and discuss the 1964-65 edition of the "Handbook for Episcopal Churchwomen, Diocese of New York."

This year's study topic for ECW, "Our Witness in This Changing World," concludes a three-year emphasis on "The Ministry of the Laity." A new theme of significance in the approaching Triennium, 1964-67, will be selected and developed by the board members. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. Do good Christians ever have doubts?

A. It is scarcely imaginable that a man could be a good Christian without having doubts. If a man has no doubts, it means, very largely, that he is either unthinking or totally insensitive to the problems which exist in the world around him. There is the problem of pain, and suffering; there is the problem of injustice, the problem of intolerance, and of racial suspicion, the problem of violent and aggressive nationalism which manifests itself in war-mongering, and some of the other characteristic diseases of our world. To be insensitive to these problems is to have almost no basic reason for being a Christian. The Christian is one who faces all of these problems, is highly sensitive to each one of them, knows just how bad they all can be, and in spite of all of this knowledge, puts all his trust and faith in the righteousness of Jesus Christ and the ultimate effectiveness of Christ's methods as over against the methods of the world.

Mrs. Williams Elected President At ECW Second Province Meeting

Mrs. Gurney Williams, former president of the Episcopal Churchwomen, Diocese of New York, was elected president of the ECW, Second Province, at the annual provincial meeting held Oct. 21 and 22 in Newark, N.J. Delegates were ECW representatives from the eight dioceses in the Second Province of the Episcopal Church, and from Honduras and the Dominican Republic, two of the six missionary districts also in the Province. Mrs. Williams has been serving as vice president.

Delegates from New York were Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., ECW President; Miss Marie Doremus, Manhattan Convocation Chairman; Mrs. Fessenden Nichols, Ramapo Chairman; Mrs. William L. Gardner, Corresponding Secretary; and Mrs. D. L. Harter, Diocesan Chairman of Youth and College Work.

Mrs. Williams, who is also diocesan chairman of the Woman's Council, Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, will succeed Mrs. Cyrus Higley of Norwich, N.Y., as president of the Province. Others who were elected are Mrs. Herbert Brown, Diocese of Albany, Vice-President; Mrs. William Page, Long Island, Secretary; Mrs. J. Woodard Tallman, New Jersey, Treasurer; Mrs. John H. Baker, Rochester, Nominating Committee Chairman; and Mrs. Higley, Provincial Representative.

A 1964 budget of $2,160 was adopted. Of this sum, $660 will be for expenses and $1,500 for Provincial projects. The new Urban Training Center for Christian Missions, Chicago, where the Rev. C. Kilmer Myers is the director, will receive $1,000. Seabury House Guild will receive $100, provincial college work, $200, and Canterbury conferences, $200.

From a $1,500 reserve fund, $1,000 was voted for the Missionary District of Central America, and $500 to Haiti for hurricane relief. This fund was created to help send Missionary District delegates to a Provincial meeting in Haiti. But plans to hold it there have been abandoned.

Revisions to the by-laws were adopted.

Mrs. Robert Howe, Provincial representative to the General Division of Women's Work, National Council, said her Division is preparing for the Triennial meeting in October, 1964.

Mrs. Theodore Odell, Provincial Chairman of College Work, stressed that college work is a missionary thrust to the unchurched on college campuses. The field is so vast that this work must be done ecumenically, because no denomination could afford to do it alone, she asserted.

The Province also held a joint meeting with the Synod. ■

Auto Crash Kills Tarrytown Rector

The Rev. C. Kenneth Ackerman, Rector of Christ Church, Tarrytown, for 31 years, was killed in an auto crash near Taunton, Mass., on Oct. 10. He was driving to Cape Cod for the weekend with his wife.

Mrs. Ackerman was injured, but she was able to leave Morton Hospital, Taunton, to attend funeral services in Christ Church on Oct. 14. Bishop Donegan officiated. He was assisted by Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore, Dean Butler, Archdeacon Brätt, the Rev. Maxwell Thomas (the Bishop's Chaplain) and the Rev. Walter Edelman, Assistant Minister at Christ Church.

Dr. Ackerman, 63, was a former trustee of the Cathedral. He had held a number of important diocesan posts. His entire ministry was spent at Christ Church. He was buried in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery. ■

Bayne Named Successor to Bentley As Head of Overseas Department

Bishop John B. Bentley, First Vice President of the National Council of the Episcopal Church and Director of its Overseas Department, will retire Oct. 31, 1964.

His successor as Director of the Overseas Department will be Bishop Stephen F. Bayne, Executive Officer of the Anglican Communion. His appointment becomes effective Nov. 1, 1964.

Next February, Bishop Bentley will reach 68, the normal retirement age for National Council officers. However, at the Presiding Bishop's request, he will remain through General Convention, Oct. 11-23, 1964. Bishop Bentley has directed the overseas operation of the Episcopal Church for 15 years. Previously he had been Bishop of Alaska.

Bishop Bayne headed the Diocese of Olympia (Washington) before appointment to his present post in 1959 by the then Archbishop of Canterbury, Geoffrey Fisher. He has traveled more than 200,000 miles a year in an effort to establish permanent lines of communication within the Anglican Communion and guide its missionary strategy. Commenting on his new assignment, Bishop Bayne said that his principal duty, when he returns to the United States next year, will be to try to work out, for the Episcopal Church, the implications of the document "Mutual Responsibility" formulated by the Anglican Congress. ■

■ THE FAMOUS charred cross of St. Michael's Cathedral in Coventry, England, will be displayed in the Music Garden of the Protestant and Orthodox Center at the World's Fair in New York City next year. The U. S. Conference for the World Council of Churches is sponsoring the exhibit "to symbolize the over-arching unity of the Churches and to emphasize the basic doctrine of resurrection and reconciliation."

■ CHURCH OF ENGLAND canons have been revised by the Convocation of York and the Convocation of Canterbury to permit women to hold full status as lay readers. As in this country, lay readers in England may conduct or assist at services,but they cannot administer the sacraments. Offering the motion to revise the canons at the Convocation of York, Bishop William Derick Lindsay Greer said permitting women to serve as lay readers would further the witness of the Church in the contemporary world.

■ A HANDY fact book, containing new data on material of interest to church planners, has been issued by the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. The 21-page publication, "The United States and its Churches — Some Facts and Trends," was commissioned by the Division of Home Missions in response to many requests for a compilation of general up-to-date information.

The book shows the trends of shifting populations, geographical distribution of denominations, location of new congregations and closed churches, and the growth of church membership in relation to population. Available at 50 cents from the Division of Home Missions. A filmstrip version costs $7.50.

■ THE NATIONAL COUNCIL of the Episcopal Church now has its first Negro member. The Rev. Birney W. Smith, Jr., 50, Rector of St. Augustine's Church, Kansas City, Mo., has been elected the National Council representative from the Seventh Province. As provincial representative, he succeeds Bishop Hines of Texas, whose term is expiring.

Archdeacon Brätt Becomes a Rector

Archdeacon George F. Brätt has resigned from his diocesan position to accept a call as Rector of Christ Church, Tarrytown. His selection by the parish's wardens and vestry was approved by Bishop Donegan. The new rector assumed his duties on Jan. 1.

Mr. Brätt was an Archdeacon of the Diocese of New York for 15 years. Acting under the Bishop's direction, he supervised the suburban and rural missions and assisted parishes.

As Rector of Christ Church, Mr. Brätt succeeds the Rev. C. Kenneth Ackerman, who was killed in an auto accident recently. Mr. Ackerman had been at Christ Church for 31 years. The two men were life-long friends.

After ordination to the priesthood in 1929. Mr. Brätt became assistant minister at St. Peter's, Peekskill. He was named Priest-in-Charge of St. Mary's, Mohegan Lake, and then was called to serve as Rector of St. Paul's, Ossining, and Priest-in-Charge of All Saints, Briarcliff. He held the latter two posts from 1934 until his appointment as archdeacon in 1948. ■

John Lassoe of National Council Named New Diocesan CSR Director

Bishop Donegan has appointed John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., as diocesan Director of Christian Social Relations, effective January 13. He is the successor to Albert E. Brownbridge, who now lives in England.

Mr. Lassoe, 38, has been with the National Council of the Episcopal Church, Department of Christian Social Relations, for the past year and a half. He has served as Executive Secretary of the Division of Church and Community Studies since its inception in 1962. In this position he has been responsible for helping the Church identify opportunities to minister to the varied problems of today's urban-industrial society—delinquency, alcoholism, depersonalization, transiency, loneliness, mental breakdown, illegitimacy, and other symptoms of the conditions and tensions of urban culture.

For five years, 1957-1962, Mr. Lassoe was Executive Secretary of the National Association of Intergroup Relations Officials. It is the national professional body of workers in racial and cultural relations.

The new director is a native of Brooklyn. He was graduated from Yale with honors in sociology, and has a master's degree in sociology from the University of Chicago. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Having enlisted in the Army in World War II, he was in combat with the 78th Infantry Division in Germany.

After the war, he lived for nearly a year in Italy. In 1949, Mr. Lassoe became a staff assistant of the former American Council on Race Relations in Chicago. Subsequently, he served with the Arizona Council for Civil Unity, the American Association for the United Nations, the Study Center in Community Participation at the New School for Social Research, and the Lower East Side Neighborhood Association, New York City. In the latter position, he worked with public and private agencies devoted to reducing juvenile delinquency on the city's Lower East Side.

From 1960 to 1962, Mr. Lassoe served as the first president of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity, a national voluntary association of Episcopalians concerned with race and class separation. He is a member of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, and serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Intergroup Relations. He is also a member of the North Conway (N.H.) Foundation on Alcoholism, and the professional advisory committee of the Brooklyn Home for Children.

Mr. Lassoe is a vestryman of the Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, and has been a member of the Department of Christian Social Relations, Diocese of New York, since 1961. He is unmarried and resides in Brooklyn. ■

Fr. Damrosch to Lead ECW Retreat

The Rev. Leopold Damrosch, Rector of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan, will conduct the annual winter retreat sponsored by the diocesan Episcopal Churchwomen.

The retreat will be held at the House of the Redeemer, Manhattan, starting with vespers at 5:30 P.M., Wednesday, Feb. 5, and ending with breakfast on Friday, Feb. 7. Because of limited accommodations, reservations for the retreat are limited to 20. The cost will be an offering made according to the ability of the individual participant.

Reservations should be made by writing The Warden, House of the Redeemer, 7 East 95th St., New York City.

Fr. Damrosch has been the Rector of Resurrection since last spring. Previously he had been Dean of the Cathedral Church of St. Luke's, Portland, Maine, and later Rector of St. Saviour's, Bar Harbour. ■

The Bishop's Message

As many of you know, Bishop Wetmore underwent an operation in St. Luke's Hospital on Thursday, December 19th, due to a cyst on a vocal chord. I am now able to report that the operation was a complete success, but necessitated the removal of a large portion of the right vocal chord. I am informed by his doctor that Bishop Wetmore should be back in his office after a few weeks of recuperation, and after adjustment and training he will have an adequate voice for preaching. I know that during this time we shall all keep Bishop Wetmore and his family in our prayers.

You undoubtedly also know that Mr. Voorhees of The Choir School has been gravely ill and had to undergo surgery. He hopes to be able to return soon, and we join in this hope with our prayers.

At the beginning of this New Year let us not forget that unless the newness in the year is matched in our hearts, 1964 will be little different from 1963. As we seek with God's help to be new men and women, possessed by a new enthusiasm, a new neighborliness, a new knowledge of ourselves, and a new passion for peace and justice, 1964 will in deep reality be a new year, in faith, effort and in human unity.

By the Grace of God 1964 can be truly new if we respond wholeheartedly to the Good News that God so loved the world that He gave His Son to live and die and live again.

May we rededicate ourselves to belief in a God who proclaimed, "Behold I make all things—and persons—new." Thus new times will call forth new men and women, and they will build the New World.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

EPISCOPAL CITY MISSION SOCIETY CELEBRATES TWO CENTENNIALS

Bishop Donegan has asked every church in the diocese to set aside Sunday, Jan. 19, as a Day of Celebration for the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society.

The 133-year-old Society is observing two centennials this year.

One hundred years ago, it was asked to represent all of the city's Protestant churches in a program of chaplaincy for public institutions.

In the same year, 1864, Mrs. William Richmond founded St. Barnabas House, the Society's shelter for temporarily homeless children.

The Bishop, who is President of the Society, is asking every church to mark these two anniversaries on Jan. 19. The week before, on Sunday, Jan. 12, he will preach at a Diocesan Centennial Celebration at 4 P.M. in St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan.

Today, under the leadership of its director, the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, the City Mission Society offers a many-sided program for people of all ages who need help in times of family crisis, misfortune, sorrow and need. Chaplaincy to public institutions and the work at St. Barnabas House were among the earliest programs. Now the Society also has a large non-sectarian camping program. It offers family counseling, youth guidance, assistance to immigrants, and a rehabilitation program for women prisoners being released from Westfield State Farm. A clinical pastoral training program, started in 1940, is expanding.

Still, at its inception in 1831, the City Mission Society was not founded with the intention of doing any of the things it does today. It was formed primarily to provide mission churches and within them free seats for worshippers unable to pay the pew rent which was customary in the established Episcopal churches of that time. Bishop Onderdonk was its first president, and Dr. Jonathan Wainwright, Rector of Grace Church, Manhattan, was chairman of the executive committee. On the board of managers were the Rev. William Richmond, Rector of St. Michael's, and the Mayor of New York, Gideon Lee. The Diocesan Convention recognized the Society as its agent for missionary operations within the city, and parishes throughout the diocese were asked to contribute.

During the next 16 years, three mission churches were established, and they were attended by people virtually excluded from parish churches—the artisans, clerks, apprentices, domestics, immigrants, and others of meager income. The work flourished. In fact, Bishop Onderdonk told his Diocesan Convention of 1840 that the largest confirmation on record had taken place in one of the City Mission Society churches. But then came a period of conflict within the Church, and parishes began to withdraw their support. Two of the mission churches were strong enough to continue on their own, but the third was closed. For some years, the Society suspended operation.

During this time, however, the Rev. Mr. Richmond of St. Michael's, and his assistant, the Rev.

Thomas McClure Peters, started a Mission to Public Institutions. At first it was purely a parish enterprise, with Mr. Richmond and Mr. Peters devoting part of their time to visiting the poor and holding services for them in the city's public institutions. But the venture gained support, its scope broadened, and by 1864 it had a staff of seven. The next step was official incorporation. The old charter of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society seemed a logical document. It would require only minor changes to make it effective. So, in 1864, the Mission to Public Institutions became the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. The old name was reborn to a new life. Dr. Peters became chairman of the executive committee, and served until his death in 1893.

Almost immediately after the Society's rebirth, representatives of the Protestant denominations in New York City gathered together in an effort to determine the future of Protestant missionary programs. Because the rejuvenated Society had demonstrated its capability and enthusiasm for chaplaincy service in public institutions, it was asked to assume the responsibility for representing all Protestant churches in this task.

At about the same time, while the Rev. Mr. Richmond was helping to reorganize the City Mission Society, his wife was starting several missionary projects of her own. One was the rental of a four-story building at 304 Mulberry Street as a temporary asylum for homeless women and children, a work which shortly was taken over by the City Mission Society. In the following year, it was named St. Barnabas House, the shelter which today cares for more than 200 young children each year.

The original building quickly became inadequate, and as time went on, two more were acquired. For 82 years, the doors of this haven were open night and day. More than 100,000 women and children came to regard St. Barnabas House as "home." Then, in 1946, with the approval of the Bishop, the Diocesan Convention approved a plan for a new building, which also would house the Society's administrative offices. It was completed in 1949 at a cost of $766,748. In March, 1954, the mortgage was paid off, and the chapel within the building was consecrated.

At St. Barnabas House the policy of caring for women and children continued until 1951. Then, because of a continuing, critical need for greater space for children, the Board of Managers decided to use most of the facilities exclusively for children from 2 to 11 (now 3½ to 11). Four rooms are reserved for young women referred by the Society staff. Now, almost every day of the year, St. Barnabas House is filled to its capactiy of 75 boys and girls.

As honorary chairman of the Centennial Committee, Bishop Donegan has appointed Thomas M. Peters, chairman of the Society's executive committee, and a grandson of one of the founders. Mrs. William H. Deatly, chairman of the St. Barnabas House Committee, will serve as chairman of the Centennial Committee. Mrs. James A. Paul, representing the Committee on Chaplaincies, will be co-chairman.

Assisting Mrs. Deatly and Mrs. Paul will be Mrs. Frederic R. King, chairman of the Bellevue Hospital Chaplains' Committee, and Mrs. Gurney Williams, diocesan chairman of the Woman's Council. Also, Mrs. John B. Bentley, Dr. Margaretta K. Bowers, Mrs. Albert B. Buchanan, Mrs. Lyman T. Corbin, Mrs. Francis A. Gudhue, Jr., Mrs. Elliot H. Goodwin, Mrs. John Heuss and Mrs. David Lannon.

A reception in the parish house at St. Bartholomew's will be held after the Centennial Celebration on Jan. 12. Vice chairman for the reception will be Mrs. Bedell Holmes Harned, and vice chairman for decorations will be Mrs. William Walker Kennedy.

Honorary Centennial Committee members are the Rev. Terence J. Finlay, Rector of St. Bartholomew's; the Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, chairman of the Chaplaincy Committee; the Rev. Ralph Bonacker; and Dr. Edward L. Hawthorne, executive director of St. Barnabas House. ■

CHAPLAINCY:

A HELPING HAND

For the past century the Episcopal Church has led all other denominations in ministering to hospitals, prisons, homes for the aged and other public institutions in New York City and its suburbs

"GET AWAY FROM ME! Don't touch me! What are you here for anyway?" the old woman shouted. Some of her companions glowered, but said nothing. They stared bleakly into space, their faces drawn into a perpetual scowl.

"It was," the chaplain said later, "about the meanest, most unpleasant-looking group of old ladies to be found anywhere." They were patients at an upstate institution, and a kindly nurse had brought them all into a public room to receive Holy Communion. The chaplain wasn't sure that more than one or two knew what was going on.

But he quietly finished preparing the portable altar and began the celebration before the silent, unresponsive group. Bit by bit, as the service went on, a few voices joined in the responses. Then more. When it was time to administer the Sacrament, "those hard, mean-looking old faces had changed," reported the chaplain. "Those glazed eyes were bright and full of expression. Those faces were beautiful!"

The priest who described this experience is one of 36 staff and associate chaplains of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society at work in 46 institutions all over the diocese. Each year these men minister to nearly 30,000 men, women and children in hospitals, prisons, reformatories, homes for the aged, mental institutions, and social agencies such as Youth Consultation Service and St. Barnabas House. Unlike the average parish priest, who deals with the relatively balanced, normal, sometimes happy phases of life, the chaplain works in a climate of extremes—with sickness, loneliness, crime, madness and death.

Sometimes a chaplain's efforts have a happy conclusion, as in the case of the sour, withdrawn old ladies, who out of their lethargy responded to the power of the Holy Communion, and for a short while became transformed.

But there are other times when the results are not so apparent.

A young woman lies in a city hospital room. She is dying of cancer. What can you say to her family?

The mother of an idiot boy has come to have him committed. She is crying. How can you comfort her?

A husky young fellow slouches in a prison cell. He has killed his wife in a burst of rage. What can you say to him?

These are the pitiful, wretched predicaments that the average person hardly thinks about on Sunday morning as the candles flicker brightly on the altar and the choir joyfully leads in hymns of praise. Everything is so serene then. Everyone is so normal. But all the while, there are these others, the poor, the broken-hearted, the captives, the blind and the bruised, who some chaplain has accepted as his responsibility.

Why he has chosen this ministry is mostly the result of his own soul-searching. But part of the answer may lie in the fact that he was ordained in the Episcopal Church, which, more than any other denomination, has been ministering to the poor, sick and deprived in city institutions and accepting them as its burdens for more than 200 years.

As early as 1736, the Anglican Church in the Colonies carried on chaplaincy work in the prison and almshouse at Bellevue. When the first city building on the present site of Bellevue was built in 1813, an Anglican clergyman, the Rev. John Sanford, officiated at the dedication. He became Bellevue's first chaplain.

In 1831, when the Convention of the Diocese of New York recognized the newly formed New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society as its missionary agent within the city, its representative, the Rev. Benjamin C. Cutler, included hospital visits in his schedule of duties.

In 1832, the Rev. William Richmond, Rector of St. Michael's, Manhattan, began to hold Sunday evening services at Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum. They are believed to have been the first regular services to be held in a mental institution anywhere.

It is not difficult, therefore, to see why the centennial that we are celebrating this year came about. In 1864, recognizing the deep concern of the Episcopal Church for chaplaincy work, the Protestant denominations in New York City asked the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society to represent them all.

The work moved forward quickly. By 1866, the Mission Society had set up chaplaincy work in city prisons.

By 1867, it had four chaplains assigned to specific institutions and three missionaries-at-large serving 20 others. Then, as now, friends of the Society helped with their contributions. Some of these funds were used for permanent chapels at various institutions. although later these separate buildings proved impractical. Today, chapels are usually contained within the institution. The New York Altar Guild of the Diocese of New York has substantially contributed to maintaining the Society's altars and appointments. Mrs. John Heuss is the present chairman.

As the years passed, the Society's work spread from Manhattan to the areas outside. In 1907, a chaplain was sent to the City Farm Colony, an almshouse on Staten Island; and in 1913, Sea View Hospital, S.I., was assigned a chaplain. The work at Fordham Hospital, Bronx, began in 1915.

In Westchester, when the County Department of Health created a paid Protestant chaplaincy service, the clergyman appointed was an Episcopalian. Ever since that time, the official chaplain has been a clergyman associated with the Mission Society.

In the city, the Mission Society conscientiously continued to represent Protestantism in public institutions until well after the turn of the century. But after a time, criticism of an Episcopal "monopoly" began to be heard.

In 1937, an interdenominational group called the Protestant Committee on Chaplaincy was established to receive applications from all prospective chaplains and from among these applicants make recommendations to the Mayor when vacancies occur. The Director of the Mission Society has always served as committee chairman.

Now there are 27 Protestant chaplains in New York City's public institutions. Of these official city chaplains, 17 are staff and associate members of the Mission Society. In addition to the 27 official city chaplains, there are six Episcopal chaplains who are not city appointed but serve city institutions. They receive their entire salary from the Mission Society.

The Society has 23 chaplains assigned to 25 institutions within New York City, and 13 chaplains in 21 institutions elsewhere in the diocese. Some are paid partly by city, county or state agencies and partly by the Mission Society. Others are paid wholly by the Society. Still others rereceive no support from the Society.

Episcopal clergy whose salaries are not paid either wholly or in part by the Society may be designated "associate chaplains" if they participate in the Society's programs of conferences and retreats.

Within chaplaincy work today are two rather interesting new developments. One is the changing "image" of the chaplain. The other is the growth of a volunteer corps.

When the present director of the Society, the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, was senior chaplain at Bellevue Hospital some 23 years ago, a chaplain was regarded as just sort of a pleasant man to have around. "Sort of the icing on the cake—nice, but not really necessary," explained Mr. Bonacker. But as psychosomatic medicine has become recognized as increasingly significant, doctors have given more and more credit to the chaplain for his part in the spiritual side of medicine. Now he is increasingly being considered "part of the team."

Back in 1940, a growing conviction that chaplaincy should be regarded as a special vocation, with specialized training, prompted Mr. Bonacker to start a clinical training program at Bellevue. It began with four students. Soon a similar program was begun at Riker's Island.

Since becoming director of the Mission Society in 1962, Mr. Bonacker has made every effort to expand clinical training. At Bellevue and Riker's Island, a Fellowship Program has been started, with assistance from National Council. It provides two six-month internships at each institution. At Grasslands, two men attended an 11-week course last summer. Next summer's group is expected to be larger, and the goal is for a year-round course, one-half day a week, for up to six students.

Still in the planning stage is a "clerkship" for ordained clergy in the group of institutions at Grasslands. This will offer training in hospital visitation for local clergy, but will also be concerned with training Negro clergy. There is a great shortage of Negro clergy in chaplaincy work, Mr. Bonacker said.

As for the volunteer program, it had its inception in 1959 with the creation of the Woman's Council of the City Mission Society. The Council was designed to assist with every phase of the Society's program, and it does. But by far the largest part of its individual volunteer service is in the hospitals, prisons and other institutions throughout the diocese.

Mrs. Gurney Williams, who is now Council president, reports that of 600 members, some 400 are chaplains' aides. They contribute a day, an afternoon, or an evening reading to patients, helping with physical or occupational therapy, playing games, writing letters, and performing other useful services. Of course, there are never enough volunteers, just as there are never enough chaplains.

Another of the more recent efforts has been to enroll men, too, as chaplains' aides. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew supplies a number of volunteers. And in the Ramapo Convocation, members of The Episcopal Laymen of New York are exploring the possibility of undertaking chaplaincy service.

So, with 100 years of interdenominational service to its credit, the Mission Society is far from complacent about its role. It sees all kinds of opportunities for the future — with everybody's help. ■

ECW Names Mrs. Nikolic

Mrs. Milorad Nikolic, a communicant of the Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan, has been named the new diocesan chairman of Christian Social Relations for the Episcopal Churchwomen.

She will complete the term of Mrs. Donald A. Roberts, who was to have served until next spring. Mrs. Roberts, who lived in Manhattan, has moved from this area.

Mrs. Nikolic has been chairman of the Foreign Student Committee at the Church of the Epiphany and Christian Social Relations chairman for the ECW at that church. She is a member of the Episcopal Council for Foreign Students, she is a member of the Harlem Hospital Auxiliary, and she has been serving as Christian Social Relations chairman for the Manhattan Convocation, ECW.

Succeeding Mrs. Nikolic as Manhattan Convocation CSR chairman will be Mrs. Harold Ellis, a communicant of St. Philip's.

Chief responsibility of the diocesan CSR chairman is to channel all pertinent material in this field to parish chairmen through their convocation chairmen. To facilitate this effort, she represents Episcopal Churchwomen on the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations, and she is a member of its executive committee.

Various general areas of volunteer work are also the concern of the diocesan CSR chairman. Two important organizations which engage the interest and support of ECW members are the Woman's Council of the Episcopal City Mission Society, and the Woman's Council, Seamen's Church Institute. ■

Carman Wolff Is Named Director

The Rev. David R. Hunter, Director of the Department of Christian Education, National Council of the Episcopal Church, has resigned to become Associate General Secretary of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

The new director is Miss Carman St. John Wolff, who has been the associate director. She is the first woman to be named director of a department at National Council. ■

St. Mary's new community center on West 126th Street

St. Mary's, Manhattanville, Acquires Community Center

St. Mary's, Manhattanville, has acquired a five-story community center directly across the street from the church, and has begun to develop a program which will greatly expand its neighborhood ministry.

The building, assessed for $100,000, was purchased for about half that amount by the diocesan Department of Missions, which is subsidizing St. Mary's as an "aided parish." The church, one of the oldest in Manhattan, is on West 126th Street, between Amsterdam Avenue and Broadway. Since 1956, when skyscraper housing projects began to replace the old tenements, St. Mary's has ministered to an increasingly diverse congregation. It includes people from all walks of life, and of many backgrounds and races.

According to the Rev. Richard E. Gary, priest-in-charge, the first use to be made of the new property will be to extend the parish program. A committee of laymen has been meeting regularly for two months to develop plans for the most effective use of the new building. The Church School and after-school programs have already been expanded. A play school for pre-school children, which now meets two mornings a week, will meet every morning as soon as necessary personnel and equipment are available.

In addition to activities for which the parish assumes actual responsibility, there are several programs in which it has a direct interest. One of these is the Youth Employment Service of the State of New York, which has office space in the new structure and assists neighborhood youngsters in finding employment. This service will remain on the first floor for the present. A second and newer venture is the Harlem Freedom School. Approximately 100 children and adults meet each Saturday in the church's new building to study Negro history and culture, and to discuss needed improvements in the public schools in the area.

The building, although 60 years old, is of fireproof construction and requires little renovation. According to Mr. Gary, it has an unusual history. Once it housed the fashionable Spires School. Later it became an ordinary school, and later still, a school for retarded children. Then it was turned into a lodging for sailors and homeless men. Some 25 years ago, Columbia University acquired the building and spent $200,000 to renovate it. More recently it has been used by the Manhattanville Community Center.

The building contains meeting rooms, a large gymnasium, community room and kitchen. ■

Parable Inspires Talent Project

The Parable of the Talents (Matthew 25:14-30) was given a modern interpretation recently at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Manhattan. Each of the 100 communicants was sent a five dollar bill and asked to use it to earn ten dollars more.

The church, which until recently was the Chapel of the Incarnation, (see page 13) launched Project Talents to counteract the usual "summer slump" in contributions, and to involve the whole membership in the effort. Both goals were reached.

First, a $500 loan was received from an anonymous lender. Then the money was changed into five dollar bills. With the $5 that each communicant was sent, there was a letter explaining Project Talents and a list of suggested ways that the $5 could be turned into $15 during the three months of the project.

The results? Of the 100 persons, 70 earned an average of $13.33 through various projects. Another 22 returned the $5 plus a straight contribution. The remaining eight returned the $5 with explanations of why they were unable to participate (illness, absence from the city, etc.).

The total received was $1,900, or a net profit of $1,400. Of this $1,400, all but $114 was actually earned by the 70 persons who took on projects.

What were some of the projects? The most popular were cooking and needlework. Among the more unusual projects were: calling square dances, conducting guided tours, drawing charcoal portraits from photographs, giving dinner parties for which a charge was made, and arranging a theater party. ■

Dedicate Rectory At Grace, Nyack

Grace Church, Nyack, has dedicated a new rectory. The old one, next to the church, has been reconstructed and redecorated to provide much-needed ministerial and secretarial office space, conference and Church School classrooms, and a library. Total cost for the entire project was $66,000.

The new rectory is a white-pillared, Colonial-style house several blocks from the church. It was designed by George Schofield and John Colgan, who are members of the parish. They also supervised the work. Construction began last May, and the structure was completed by Sept. 1. The cost was $45,000.

The building, which occupies a one-acre lot, has a patio and a breezeway to the garage. The ground-level floor consists of a study, conference room, master bedroom and bath, storage and utility rooms. Upstairs are the living room, dining room, kitchen, kitchenette, three bedrooms and bath. ■

ECW Proposes Mrs. Gardner

Mrs. Gardner

Episcopal Churchwomen of this diocese have proposed the name of Mrs. William L. Gardner to the Triennial Nominating Committee for election as a member-at-large on the General Division of Women's Work, National Council.

The Committee has accepted her as a candidate, and the dioceses of Long Island and Newark have endorsed Mrs. Gardner's name.

She is one of 16 candidates from all over the country. Of this number, eight members-at-large will be elected at the Triennial next October in St. Louis, Mo. They will serve three years.

Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., diocesan ECW president, said, "The nomination of Mrs. Gardner is deeply gratifying to all Churchwomen of this diocese. Membership on the General Division is one of the most important positions open to the women of the church. All who know Mrs. Gardner believe that she is eminently qualified to fill it."

Mrs. Gardner is Parish Assistant and Director of Christian Education at St. Philip's, Manhattan, where she is also a parishioner, a Church School teacher, choir mother, and an active member of women's groups.

She has been a member of the Council of the Diocese of New York, and the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations. She has served in various capacities with the diocesan Woman's Auxiliary and later the ECW. She was a delegate to the ECW Provincial meeting in 1961 and 1963, and a delegate to the Triennial meeting in Detroit in 1961.

Theological Education Sunday

"An adequate, well-prepared, strongly supported ministry is one of the most vital and urgent needs of the Church," declared Bishop Donegan as parishes throughout the diocese prepared to observe Theological Education Sunday. It falls on Jan. 26 this year. The Church's 11 accredited seminaries count heavily on this annual offering to meet their budgets. No seminary receives financial assistance from the national Church. And at the same time, no seminary student pays the actual cost of his education. His tuition covers only about one-third. The rest must be obtained from other sources. In 1963-64, it is estimated that the seminaries will need $3,884,000 to pay current bills and stay solvent. Many also are seeking capital funds.

In the Diocese of New York, 50 men are studying for the ministry at the present time, Bishop Donegan reported. Thirty-five are distributed among seven seminaries—3 at Episcopal Theological School, 20 at General, 3 at Philadelphia Divinity School, 4 at Berkeley, 2 at Virginia, 2 at Union and 1 at the Church Divinity School of the Pacific. Nine men have been accepted as postulants and expect to enter seminary next year; 3 are candidates for the perpetual diaconate; and 3 are special students. "All the men seeking Holy Orders are our own particular responsibility," said the Bishop. "May I commend them to you for your continuing concern and financial aid."

Colonial Church Restored in Fishkill

Trinity Church, Fishkill, has completed a restoration program which has made the church once again look like the simply designed Colonial structure that it was meant to be.

The building, erected in the 1760's, originally consisted of a one-room church with pew stalls and other 18th century furnishings. But in the late 1800's, when it was felt that every church must have Gothic arches, they were installed at the chancel in Trinity. As time went on, however, parishioners discovered that this subdivision sacrificed space and resulted in poor acoustics. They also felt that the original architectural harmony of the building had been lost.

Early this year, under the leadership of its rector, the Rev. Edmund S. Mathews, Trinity completed the first portion of its building program, a wing adjoining the northeast corner of the church. It contains a sacristy, choir room, a room for the rector and acolytes, and a storage area. A new sound chamber for the organ was constructed.

During the summer, the church interior was restored. The walls and arches enclosing the chancel were removed — incidentally uncovering two graceful columns which had been concealed in the plaster work which formed the arches. The choir, now on the right instead of the left, has doubled its previous seating capacity. A new pulpit and altar rail were installed. Two side ceilings, which were cracked and sagging, were replaced. The interior was painted. Cost of the new wing and sound chamber for the organ was $7,000. The restoration cost $14,000.

BEFORE: Trinity, Fishkill, as it looked with 19th century Gothic arches and walled-in areas of the sanctuary, enclosing choir and sacristy.

AFTER: Renovation restored the interior to its 18th century architectural unity. The columns nearest the altar were previously hidden.

Manhattan Laymen's Group Plans School of Theology

Approximately 15 Manhattan men and women have organized a Layman's School of Theology, a series of six evening lectures by seminary professors.

The series will be held on Tuesdays, from 7:30 to 9:30 P.M., from Feb. 4 through March 10, at Calvary Church, 61 Gramercy Park North (East 21st St. near Park Ave. South).

Although churches sponsor Bible study groups and schools of worship from time to time, this kind of venture has rarely been undertaken by laymen in this diocese, especially as in this case, with the participation of a number of churches. The committee for the Layman's School of Theology represents 10 churches, including those of other denominations. Twelve Episcopal churches so far have pledged financial support.

Bishop Donegan, commenting on the series, said, "Many people in all churches need and desire to know more about the Faith and its relevance to daily life, and I hope there will be a response to this opportunity for serious religious study provided by the Layman's School of Theology."

The series is open to adults of all denominations. The registration fee is $5 for all six lectures, or $1.25 for a single evening. Checks for advance registrations should be made out to Layman's School of Theology, and sent care of Calvary Church, 61 Gramercy Park North, New York, 10.

Chapel Becomes Diocesan Mission

The Diocese of New York recently added a church to its group of missions in the Manhattan Convocation. It is the former Chapel of the Incarnation at 240 East 31st St. The Chapel has been renamed the Church of the Good Shepherd.

The church plant was built in 1902 and includes a large parish house. The area in which it is located, Kips Bay, has been a low-income neighborhood for many years, but more recently modern apartments have begun to replace the older houses. The Rev. John McDonald has been the vicar since 1958.

Church of the Good Shepherd brings to six the number of missions and aided parishes being operated by the diocese in Manhattan. The other missions are St. Edward the Martyr, 14 E. 109th St.; St. Peter's, 346 West 20th St.; and St. Ann's for the Deaf, which holds services at All Angels, West End Ave. and 81st St. The aided parishes are St. Clement's, 423 West 46th St.; and St. Mary's, 521 West 126th st. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. In a conversation with an acquaintance the other day, we got around to the subject of religion, and his statement was, "I don't feel the need for it." What can you say to a person like this?

A. Quite honestly, there isn't much to be said. The person is not in a condition yet to understand much that you could say on the matter. This does not mean that the person does not need religion. Anyone who has had much to do with small boys knows that small boys, on the whole, do not approve of taking baths—they do not feel the need for it! But the rest of society soon arrives at the point where it feels the need for small boys to take baths. In some ways, this is true of the people who feel that they have no need for religion. One wonders whether the other people around them think that these people have no need for religion—whether they know it or not. But this is being very superior and "judgmental" about other people. The Christian religion is commended best by Christians. If you are a real Christian yourself, you are saying all the time, and in the only terms another human being ever can understand, the only thing you ever really need to say.

SCI to Expand Newark Facilities

The Seamen's Church Institute is planning to expand its facilities at Port Newark, N.J., with the construction of a modern, three-story building. It will adjoin an existing structure which opened in April, 1960.

Franklin E. Vilas, President of the SCI Board of Managers, said, "In commencing with the second half of our building program, which will represent a half-million-dollar investment, we are reaffirming our belief that seamen deserve a congenial center devoted to them and their needs, in order to bring some order to their disordered occupation. We are reaffirming our belief in Port Newark as the great new container-cargo and passenger center on the East Coast."

Since the original center opened, its limited facilities (the building comfortably accommodates 75 men) have been used to capacity, Mr. Vilas said. At present, there is a lounge, snack bar and soccer field. When the new building is opened, the present structure will be used as a food center.

The new center, designed by George W. Clark Associates, will provide 11,850 square feet of space for lounges, recreational areas, a chapel, library, offices and custodian's apartment. The interior walls will be movable, so that space can easily be converted from one use to another. It will be air conditioned.

The present SCI building is the only social center for merchant seamen in the desolate, 640-acre area which makes up Port Newark. ■

Mrs. Gardner Nominated . . .

She is a member of the Association of Professional Women Church Workers and the United Churchwomen. She was born in Hyde Park and is a graduate of Hunter College. In 1958 she completed the Parish Assistant Training Course given by the Department of Christian Education, National Council. She has one child, a son, who teaches at Howard University, Washington, D. C.

In proposing Mrs. Gardner's name, the ECW told the Triennial Nominating Committee that it was "offering a professional woman of outstanding ability and devotion, who at the same time provides the opportunity to include on the National Council a woman of different racial background."

The General Division of Women's Work is the successor to the national executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary. Its total membership is 21.

The Division is responsible for providing leadership for women's groups throughout the Church and for planning the Triennial meeting. Between Triennial meetings, the Division administers the United Thank Offering, assigns supply work for missions at home and overseas, and recruits, supports and trains professional women church workers. Members of the Division also serve, by the Presiding Bishop's appointment, on various National Council departments. ■

UTO 'A Measure of Response to God'

The Holy Communion is "a meal of memory, of mission, and of hope," Bishop George W. Barrett of Rochester told Episcopal Churchwomen from all over the diocese on Dec. 3.

The occasion was the Cathedral service which opened the annual Advent meeting and United Thank Offering presentation. Bishop Barrett, formerly Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville, was the guest preacher.

Taking as his text I Cor. 11:26, "For as often as you eat this bread and drink this cup, you proclaim the Lord's death until he come," he repeated this text at strategic points in his sermon to emphasize its significance and relevance in various contemporary situations.

The UTO "is a measure of our response to what God has done in history—in our personal histories, and in our common history," said Bishop Barrett. "As the United Thank Offering is presented, we proclaim the Lord's death here and resolve to be bearers of the proclamation both here and over the entire world."

Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd, UTO treasurer, has announced that a preliminary report on the United Thank Offering indicates $25,217.49 received from 7,167 women. However, at the time of this report, 32% of the parish groups were still to be heard from.

A brief business meeting, which followed luncheon in Synod House undercroft, was conducted by Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., diocesan ECW president. Mrs. William E. Leidt, historiographer, announced a gift of $500 from a former diocesan president, Mrs. J. Ralph Jacoby. It will be designated "The Archive Fund" and used for research and for the improvement of the ECW's historical files.

A Christian Social Relations pledge of $4,200 was unanimously approved. Of this, $1,200 will be used to contribute $100 a month to supplement the retirement income of Miss Alice Palmer, former Director of Port and Immigration for the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. Use of the remaining $3,000 will be determined at the annual ECW meeting in May.

Following the business meeting, the Rev. Canon Howard A. Johnson spoke on The Anglican Congress, to which he was a delegate. He referred to the Declaration of Mutual Responsibility issued at the Congress as "the big breakthrough." Canon Johnson said the Anglican Congress "has given us another chance." He said, "It is the principal scandal of our time that we are out of communion with one another." ■

New Phone Number Is Among Changes at Diocesan House

A new telephone number is the by-product of two major changes the year 1964 has brought to 1047 Amsterdam Ave., the building on Cathedral Close which houses the diocesan offices.

The changes involve a major reshuffling of office space occupied by the diocesan departments, and the acquisition of a separate telephone switchboard.

The new phone number is RIverside 9-1100.

This number went into effect on January 31.

According to Edmund J. Beazley, Administrative Assistant to the Bishop, the realignment of office space was necessary to ease crowded conditions in some departments and to provide more centralization in others.

The staff of Christian Education, for example, had been occupying widely separated offices on the second floor. Now the entire department is centralized at the end of the east corridor. Stewardship has moved from the first floor to new quarters on the second, and Promotion has been centralized by moving secretarial facilities and The Bulletin into rooms adjoining that of the Director of Promotion. Christian Social Relations has moved into quarters previously occupied by the Provincial Department of College Work.

Because it was known that the diocesan need for additional office space was becoming critical, both the Rev. Eugene A. Monick, Executive Secretary of College Work, and Dr. William Kennedy, Executive Secretary of the Episcopal Council for Foreign Students, moved from Diocesan House to National Council headquarters at 815 Second Avenue last fall.

The new switchboard will mean that calls to the Diocese will no longer go through the Cathedral, as they have done in the past.

Mr. Beazley explained that the volume of calls, which has steadily increased over the years, finally overloaded the Cathedral switchboard so badly that it became difficult to obtain adequate service for the Diocese as well as for the Cathedral. ■

Bishop Appoints William Crapo, Jr. To Administrative Post in Missions

William M. Crapo, Jr.

Bishop Donegan has announced the appointment of William M. Crapo, Jr., as Administrative Coordinator in the Department of Missions.

This position was authorized at the Convention last May when the general plan for diocesan reorganization was outlined. Mr. Crapo is to "coordinate the development and implementation of plans and programs of the Department of Missions, under the general supervision of the Administrator of the Council and the Executive Committee of the Board of Managers." He joined the diocesan staff on Jan. 6.

The new coordinator, 47, recently retired from the Marine Corps as a lieutenant colonel after 20 years of service. He has more than 10 years of operational management experience. His last assignment was as a member of a specially selected financial management team in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations, Washington, D.C. There he formulated Navy and Marine Corps research and development program objectives, drew up a five-year financial plan, and prepared parts of the Navy-Marine Corps $1.5 billion annual budget. He coordinated the weapons and weapon systems programs, prepared long-range and intermediate program objectives, and was responsible for the management of the current year's budget.

Previously he had been Plans and Operations Officer at the Marine Aviation headquarters in the Pacific; personnel director for the Marine Corps Air Station at Iwakuni, Japan; and Comptroller of the Marine Corps Air Station in Miami, Fla.

In these positions he gained experience in financial, operational and personnel management. He served in senior line and staff positions for organizations ranging in size from 400 to 30,000 persons. He wrote numerous technical training manuals and Congressional presentations. He planned

The Bishop's Message

All of you have already learned of the election of the Venerable George F. Brätt as Rector of Christ Church, Tarrytown. Though we will all miss him as a veteran and very active member of our diocesan staff, we congratulate him on his election and assure him of our prayers and best wishes.

After careful consideration I have decided not to appoint another Archdeacon at this time, but to make new arrangements for the supervision of our missions and aided parishes. As authorized at the last Convention there has been appointed an Administrative Assistant to the Bishop and a Coordinator for the Department of Missions. Readers of The Bulletin have already met Mr. Edmund Beazley, the new Administrative Assistant. I now introduce to you Mr. William M. Crapo, Jr., former officer in the Marine Corps, who has taken up his duties as Coordinator and will bring broad experience to the real estate, budgetary and other administrative matters in relation to missions and aided parishes.

With Mr. Crapo assuming these responsibilities, I am now announcing that, effective February 1st, the pastoral relationship, supervision and direct involvement with the program of our aided congregations have been assigned as follows: to Bishop Boynton the Convocations of Manhattan and Richmond; to Bishop Wetmore the Convocations of the Bronx and Westchester; to Archdeacon McEvoy the Convocations of Ramapo, Hudson and Dutchess. Since this reorganization is of interest to clergy and laity of all congregations, whether self supporting or aided, I ask the prayers of all people of the Diocese in the working out of these arrangements.

The Presiding Bishop and the National Council have asked us to make 1964 a year of deep concern for race relations, particularly in the matter of providing emergency funds in order that the Church may be able to serve whenever special tension indicates the need for immediate action. The Presiding Bishop asks the people of the Episcopal Church to contribute $150,000 for this special purpose.

Accordingly, I asked that Sunday, February 9th, be observed as an occasion of emphasis on race relations, and that an offering be taken and presented to the Presiding Bishop which will enable our Church better to respond in 1964 to the demands and opportunities presented by the struggle for racial justice.

You will be glad to learn that Bishop Wetmore's recovery continues to be more rapid than expected. He has been back on light office duty since early January, is receiving special speech instruction and rehabilitation, and it is hoped he will be able to conduct confirmations early in March.

Ash Wednesday occurs on February 12th, and I trust it finds all of us prepared to enter a devout and holy Lenten Season.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

A group of churches in the upper reaches of Dutchess County may have coined a new word.

The word is Bomed. Originally it was written B.O.M.E.D., as the abbreviation for Board for the Operation of the Ministry to Eastern Dutchess, (pronounced to rhyme with "go Ned"). But there is an increasing tendency to forget the long title and remember the short, catchy word.

Bomed is an experiment in cooperation. But it is different from other experiments. Here and there, groups of churches have attempted "team ministries," which provided unity under one leader and a common budget. But generally the autonomy of each local unit was lost in these attempts, or large grants of money were needed to get started. Or if there was no structure at all, the plan fell apart. Bomed has a structure, contained in an official Statement of Purposes, and it has the Bishop's authorization to function. But it has no "boss" and no budget. It is a confederacy of seven churches and a school. It is an association of equals.

Within Bomed, each of these seven churches retains its full authority. Each rector is still the rector, and each vestry still wrestles with its maintenance and finance problems. But every clergyman is a member of the Board for the Operation of the Ministry to Eastern Dutchess, and there are two lay representatives chosen by each vestry. Bomed meets regularly, but not to legislate. It has no authority to do that.

What, then, does it do? For the clergy, these meetings provide, if nothing else, an opportunity to talk to one another. The 750 square miles of rolling farm country containing the Bomed churches is a lonely place for an isolated minister, and the hamlets and houses are as widely scattered as in any stretch of Western prairie. Before Bomed, there wasn't really enough going on to keep energetic churchmen, either clergy or laity, happily active. Now the ministers swap stories, problems and projects. Sometimes one minister will preach a sermon he has given recently, and the others will act as critics.

"The fact that Bomed has no authority is a real discipline in itself," observes the Rev. Raymond Cunningham, Rector of Grace Church, Millbrook, who is generally credited with crystallizing the Bomed idea, and who is serving as the chairman. "But as time goes on, our fellowship deepens and the continuity of our work becomes stronger," said Mr. Cunningham. "Our parishioners see that the clergy's role is not simply to run their own little church, but to have a responsibility to the whole area."

From the laity's point of view, Bomed meetings have been the springboard for a number of projects, including an ambitious hospital volunteer program. Before Bomed, the Episcopal Church was doing very little in that area. Observers agree that the enthusiasm and dedication of Bomed laymen have contributed greatly to its success.

The seven parishes comprising Bomed can be seen on the accompanying map. There were six originally—Regeneration, Pine Plains; St. Peter's, Lithgow; Grace, Millbrook; St. Thomas', Amenia Union; St. James, Dover Plains; Holy Trinity, Pawling. Also, the Chapel of the Child at Greer School. Christ Church, Patterson, joined this group later.

Pine Plains, Lithgow, and Amenia Union date from the middle 1800's. Originally they were part of a circuit rider's trail. Some time after the Civil War, the circuit priest added a stop at Millbrook, and Grace Church became established. Pawling was a mission until seven years ago, and Dover Plains is still a mission. Patterson, which is actually in Putnam County although it has strong ties to Pawling, is the oldest of all. It was started in 1797.

By 1960, all of these places, except Pine Plains, had clergy of their own and a fairly well-developed parish life. But it was an insular life, and the churches were small. At the same time, statistics were predicting growth for Dutchess County, from 136,000 people in 1950 to an estimated 282,000 by 1975. When new people did throng northward, the Church wanted to be there. Meanwhile, the existing churches had to hold on.

There was, too, what Bishop J. Stuart Wetmore calls "the dough between the biscuits."

Imagine Dutchess County as a big spread of dough, with each church marked out in a little circle of activity. Then think of all the dough between these "biscuits" — the wide area available for evangelism, as well as two state hospitals, where before Bomed, work by the Episcopal Church had been negligible.

Diocesan officials were concerned about this whole situation, but it was the Rev. Mr. Cunningham who proposed a solution. He laid his idea before Bishop Wetmore, who took it to Bishop Donegan and the Board of Managers. In May, 1960, with Bishop Donegan's blessing, four Dutchess County clergymen, eight laymen, Archdeacon Brätt, who at that time was in charge of rural missionary activities, and Bishop Wetmore, met at an inn in Amenia Union. They did a great deal of talking.

Two weeks later they met again and decided to draft a Proposal. It was finished in a week and sent to Bishop Donegan. Impressed with its businesslike approach, its sincerity, and its potential, the Bishop approved it for a period of two years. No one, least of all Mr. Cunningham, expected anything to happen overnight. In fact, at that time he wrote: "Results of any significance will come only after long, hard work. . ." But after two years, the Bishop unqualifiedly agreed to renew the Proposal, and Bomed graduated from the category of "experiment."

Except for Mr. Cunningham, there has been a complete turnover of Bomed clergy since 1960, but the clergy relationship is, if anything, stronger than ever. At Amenia Union and Dover Plains is an astute young clergyman, the Rev. William L. Sadler, Ph.D., who last fall succeeded Mr. Cunningham temporarily as Bomed chairman. At Lithgow, which hadn't had a full-time priest in 30 years, there is the Rev. John Widdows, an energetic and imaginative young man who has been a curate in Pelham Manor. He has inspired the formation of the Bomed Players, a religious drama group whose members came from all over the area. The church at Patterson, which used to be under the jurisdiction of Lake Mahopac, far to the south, has been assigned to the Rev. Wesley S. Smith, the new rector at Pawling. Mr. Smith, the newest arrival, is at the moment energetically trying to tie these two churches more closely together. Pine Plains, which could not, and still cannot, afford a full-time clergyman, is operated almost completely by the laity. When a priest is needed to celebrate Holy Communion, the lay reader substitutes at Morning Prayer in the priest's parish. Mr. Cunningham pointed out: "Pine Plains proves that you don't always need clergy to start the machinery and keep it running."

Active Laymen

Among the laity, there are a number of men whose personalities in particular make them outstanding. One is Charles Tripp, of Grace, Millbrook, who serves as lay reader at Pine Plains. He is a Lincolnesque man, tall, craggy, with a vibrant reading voice and a deep sense of devotion to the church. Matthew Netter, quick-moving senior warden of Pine Plains, is the second; and Jerome Johns of Dover Plains is the third. Netter, an old Masonic comrade of Charles Tripp, has worked for years in the Highway Department and probably knows more about Dutchess County than anyone. Johns, slight, gray-haired, and quiet, has a formidable knowledge of the Church and its missionary work in the area. Men like these, and later women, too, have made Bomed a reality.

Not long ago, leafing through the Anglican Congress document entitled "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ," Dr. Sadler was startled by the similarity between this document and the purposes and accomplishments of Bomed. "It seemed descriptive rather than prophetic in its applications to us," he remarked.

The preamble of "Mutual Responsibility," for example, noted that "the pictures we have of each other (and of the church) are utterly obsolete and irrelevant. . . ." Leading to the formation of Bomed was an insight that the church conforming to a parochial image was frightfully ineffective. "Like the delegates at Toronto, we, in Dutchess County, felt that the time had come when unity and interdependence had to find a completely new level of expression and corporate obedience," Dr. Sadler said.

The Congress document called for a "comprehensive study of needs and resources." Certainly Bomed did this before its formation and has been doing it since, said Dr. Sadler.

The document asked "a commitment of manpower." Bomed shares manpower, among both clergy and laity. This is, above all, its claim to distinction. Churches share ministers for services and meetings. Fr. Widdows, of Lithgow, for instance, teaches two released time classes at Millbrook. Mr. Cunningham used to spend about five hours a week at Greer School, although this time has been reduced. Women's groups from several churches started a volunteer program at both the Harlem Valley State Hospital and Wassaic State School. They adopted patients and gave parties. Bomed men have been working with the medical and chaplaincy staffs. Through the influence of Mr. Cunningham, girls from Bennett Junior College also are active in the volunteer program at Wassaic State School.

More Similarities

Further, the Anglican Congress document called for "mutual consultation, mutual planning, the strengthening of ecumenical relationships." Bomed meetings are specifically called for "mutual consultation and planning," says Dr. Sadler. In an ecumenical spirit, it has called upon the Rev. Clarence Schneider, a Lutheran, who is religious director at Greer School, to help with several projects. It's an exchange program, really. Bomed clergy hold services, teach and minister to students and staff at Greer; Pastor Schneider is a specialist in depth counseling, and he offers this skill to Bomed.

"Toronto called for rebirth — a death of many old things, a birth of entirely new relationships," Dr. Sadler points out. "We have seen such birth in Dutchess County. With it has come new life and hope, for which we should pay tribute to those who had the foresight, courage and inspiration to make actual a bold dream of a revitalized, mission-minded Church bringing true and abundant life to Eastern Dutchess." ■

FREE IN OBEDIENCE. William Stringfellow. Seabury Press. 128 pages. $2.75.

"Free in Obedience" is a book of reflections, a book of opinion, a book of outlook. To use an even more embracing term, it is a book of William Stringfellow. Whether you like "Free in Obedience" will depend largely on whether you are stimulated by his thinking.

In effect, the author says that the world is too much with us, and the church is not "with" the world. Or, to put it in his own words:

"If modern men do not seem to listen to the Christian faith or regard seriously the churches, it is because the churches have too often given men the impression that they do not care about men or the world."

Mr. Stringfellow, a 35-year-old Manhattan lawyer and well-known Episcopal layman, belongs to a school of religious writers who use their pens as lances. In this book, his third, he charges into institutionalized religion, nationalism, industrialism and the misery of our big cities, to name but a few victims.

This reviewer found many of Mr. Stringfellow's arguments to be valid, though expressed in obscure terms. The book is primarily one of evaluation. It would be greatly strengthened by the addition of suggested specific remedies for the ills it presents.

—Joseph B. Martin

Locum Tenens literally means "holding the place." The phrase is from the Latin and is used to describe a person who fills an office for a time, temporarily taking the place of another, especially a clergyman who substitutes for a rector when a parish is without one or when the rector is absent for a considerable time. ■

THOMAS McCLURE PETERS has been awarded the Bishop of New York Cross. This honor, given for outstanding service to the Diocese, is presented by Bishop Donegan at infrequent intervals. Mr. Peters, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Episcopal Mission Society in the Diocese of New York, received the Cross at a service on Jan. 12 at St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan. This service celebrated two centennials — that of the Society's program of Protestant chaplaincy to public institutions, and that of St. Barnabas House, the Society's shelter for homeless children. Mr. Peters this year is observing his 30th anniversary as a member of the Society's Board of Managers. He has been Executive Committee chairman for 14 years, and is President of the Edgewater Creche and Rethmore Home, a summer camp affiliated with the Society. The Peters family has been associated with the Society for more than 100 years. Mr. Peters' grandfather was one of its founders.

Food is not the chief concern in this message about fasting. Although it was written more than 1,500 years ago, it involves all of life, and is especially timely today. The piece itself is like rich fruit cake, however. Swallow it slowly!

I speak not, indeed, of such a fast as most persons keep, but of real fasting; not merely an abstinence from meats; but from sins, too. For the nature of a fast is such, that it does not suffice to deliver those who practice it, unless it be done according to a suitable law.

"For the wrestler," it is said, "is not crowned unless he strive lawfully." To the end then, that when we have gone through the labor of fasting, we forfeit not the crown of fasting, we should understand how, and after what manner, it is necessary to conduct this business; since that Pharisee also fasted, but afterwards went down empty, and destitute of the fruit of fasting. The Publican did not fast; and yet he was accepted in preference to him who had fasted, in order that you may learn that fasting is unprofitable, except all other duties follow with it.

The Ninevites fasted, and won favor of God.

The Jews fasted, too, and profited nothing, nay they departed with blame.

Since, then, the danger in fasting is so great to those who do not know how they ought to fast, we should learn the laws of this exercise, in order that we may not "run uncertainly," nor "beat the air," nor while we are fighting contend with a shadow. Fasting is a medicine; but a medicine, though it be never so profitable, becomes frequently useless owing to the unskillfulness of him who employs it. For it is necessary to know, moreover, the time when it should be applied, and the requisite quantity of it; and the corresponding diet; as well as various particulars; any of which, if one overlooks, he will mar all the rest that have been named.

I have said these things, not that we may disparage fasting, but that we may honor fasting; for the honor of it consists not in abstinence from food, but in withdrawing from sinful practices, since he who limits his fasting only to an abstinence from meats is one who especially disparages it.

Do you fast?

Give me proof of it by your works.

Is it said by what kind of works?

If you see a poor man, take pity on him! If you see an enemy, be reconciled to him! If you see a friend gaining honor, envy him not! If you see a handsome woman, pass her by!

For let not the mouth only fast, but also the eye, and the ear, and the feet, and the hands, and all members of our bodies.

On Fasting

Let the hands fast, by being pure from plunder and avarice.

Let the feet fast, by ceasing from running to the unlawful spectacles.

Let the eyes fast, being taught never to fix themselves rudely upon handsome countenances, or to busy themselves with strange beauties.

For looking is the food of the eyes, but if this be such as is unlawful or forbidden, it mars the fast; and upsets the whole safety of the soul; but if it be lawful and safe, it adorns fasting. For it would be among things the most absurd to abstain from lawful food because of the fast, but with the eyes to touch even what is forbidden. Do you not eat flesh? Feed not upon lasciviousness by means of the eyes.

Let the ear fast also. The fasting of the ear consists in refusing to receive evil speakings and calumnies. "Thou shalt not receive a false report," it says.

Let the mouth, too, fast from disgraceful speeches and railings. For what does it profit if we abstain from birds and fishes; and yet bite and devour our brethren?

The evil speaker eats the flesh of his brother, and bites the body of his neighbor.

Because of this Paul utters the fearful saying, "If ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another."

You have not fixed your teeth in the flesh, but you have fixed the slander in the soul, and inflicted the wound of evil suspicion; you have harmed, in a thousand ways, yourself and him, and many others, for in slandering a neighbor you have made him who listens to the slander worse; for should he be a wicked man, he becomes more careless when he finds a partner in his wickedness; and should he be a just man, he is lifted up to arrogance, and puffed up, being led on by the sin of others to imagine great things concerning himself.

Besides, you have struck at the common welfare of the Church; for all those who hear not only accuse the supposed sinner, but the reproach is fastened on the Christian community; neither do you hear the unbelievers saying, "Such a person is a fornicator, or a libertine"; but instead of the individual who has sinned, they accuse all Christians.

In addition to this, you have caused the glory of God

St. John Chrysostom, whose name means "golden mouthed," was one of the greatest and most influential preachers of his day (347-407). A slightly built, frail man, he was the Patriarch of Constantinople during a highly turbulent and corrupt political period. His zeal for reform angered many of the monks, priests and nobles, and eventually he was condemned by an illegal synod on false charges, without a hearing. Popular indignation caused his restoration, but finally he was exiled and died as the result of enforced walking done with the very object of killing him. He is, of all the Fathers, considered the greatest preacher. He is one of the four great Eastern Doctors of the Church, the others being St. Athanasius, St. Basil and St. Gregory Nazianzen. (The four great Western Doctors are St. Ambrose, St. Jerome, St. Augustine and St. Gregory the Great.) The Eastern Orthodox Church not only honors St. John as a saint but also has given his name to the liturgy which is generally used in its services. He did not write this liturgy, however.

This excerpt from a longer sermon may be found in the book, Master Sermons Through the Ages, published in 1963 by Harper & Row. The volume contains sermons by 30 of Christianity's greatest preachers, and was edited by the Rev. Dr. William A. Sadler, Jr., Rector of St. Thomas, Amena Union and Vicar of St. James, Dover Plains. The translation by W.R.W. Stephens (A Select Library of the Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers of the Christian Church, Vol. IX, Philip Schaff, ed.) has been altered only by the substitution of "you" for the older form, "thou."

Mission Society Board Approves Change in Name

The Board of Managers of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society has voted to change the name of this agency. Henceforth it will be known as the Episcopal Mission Society in the Diocese of New York.

Bishop Donegan, president of the 133-year-old Society, announced the change during a special service in St. Bartholomew's Church on Jan. 12. The service honored the centennial anniversaries of two of the Society's principal activities — chaplaincy in public institutions and St. Barnabas House.

The Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Society, said the change "recognizes the increasingly obvious fact that urban problems are no longer exclusively city problems. All of modern life is urban." ■

...in brief

■ THE LIVING CHURCH has a new editor, the Rev. Carroll Simcox. He succeeds Peter Day, who on Feb. 1 became Ecumenical Officer of the Episcopal Church. The Living Church is a weekly news magazine dealing with the activities and thought of the Episcopal Church.

Fr. Simcox, a journalist before he was ordained, is the author of 11 books and a countless number of booklets published by Forward Movement Publications. He has contributed articles to The Living Church from time to time, and from 1947 to 1950 was its literary editor. He had been Rector of St. Mary's Church, Tampa, Fla. since 1958. He is 51, married, and has two children, both college students.

■ UNION Theological Seminary has announced the election of a new president. He is the Rev. Dr. John Coleman Bennett, Reinhold Niebuhr Professor of Social Ethics. Since the retirement of the Rev. Dr. Henry Pitney Van Dusen last June, Dr. Bennett had been Acting President. He is an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ.

■ A SURVEY of students at 12 colleges indicates that interest in politics takes precedence over interest in religion. The survey, sponsored by Educational Reviewer, Inc. was conducted at Sarah Lawrence, Williams, Yale, Marquette, Boston University, Indiana, South Carolina, Howard, Reed, Davidson, Brandeis and Stanford. Only at Marquette University, which is Roman Catholic, and among Roman Catholics polled at the other institutions, was religion predominant in student interests as compared to politics, the survey disclosed. At Marquette, 55 per cent were reported "more concerned with religion than politics" compared to 27 per cent of all students surveyed at the 12 schools.

■ AN OPINION POLL was taken throughout the United States by Our Sunday Visitor, a Roman Catholic weekly newspaper, and it disclosed that approximately 60 per cent of American Roman Catholics favor celebration of Mass entirely in English.

■ SHORTLY before leaving South Africa, the Most Rev. Joost de Blank, retiring Archbishop of Capetown, asserted during a sermon that the divine command to "love thy neighbor as thyself" is being attacked as "political interference." The archbishop has been an outspoken critic of South Africa's apartheid policy. He retired for health reasons and has been made a canon of Westminster Abbey. ■ to be blasphemed; for as his name is glorified when we have good report, so when we sin, it is blasphemed and insulted.

On Fasting . . .

In the meanwhile, I desire to fix these precepts in your mind, to the end that you may accomplish me these during your fast: to speak ill of no one, and to hold no one an enemy.

As in a given field, the husbandman, digging it all up piecemeal, gradually comes to the end of his task; so we, too, if we make this rule for ourselves, in any wise to reduce to a correct practice these precepts during our present fast, and to commit them to the safe custody of good habit, we shall proceed with greater ease to the rest; and by this means arriving at the summit of spiritual wisdom,we shall both reap the fruit of a favorable hope in the present life; and in the life to come we shall stand before Christ with great confidence, and enjoy those unspeakable blessings; which, God grant, we may all be found worthy of.

Through the grace and loving kindness of Jesus Christ our Lord, with whom be glory to the Father and the Holy Spirit forever and ever. Amen.

Statue of St. Peter Given In Tribute to Father Lang

Standing below new polychromed wood statue of St. Peter are left to right, the Rev. Dr. Leslie J. A. Lang., in whose honor the statue was given; the Rev. Edgar Wells, a curate at St. Peter's, Westchester, and the Rev. Dr. Thomas L. Brown, the present rector.

Most memorials honor someone who has died. But the Rev. Dr. Leslie J. A. Lang, Jr., was in the unusual position recently of watching, and participating in, the dedication of a memorial erected in tribute to his 20 years of ministry at one church.

Many times during his years as Rector of St. Peter's, Westchester, (Bronx) Fr. Lang expressed the wish for a statue of the church's patron saint. But there were always other, and greater, needs.

Last fall, when the announcement came of his appointment as Vicar of the Chapel of Intercession, Trinity Parish, Fr. Lang heard that his congregation was collecting funds for a parting gift. "What about the statue of St. Peter?" he asked them. "Couldn't we spend the money for that?"

Shortly after Christmas the new statue, a seven-foot, polychromed wood likeness of St. Peter, was dedicated. The Rev. Dr. Thomas L. Brown, formerly Fr. Lang's assistant, and now the new rector, officiated. Fr. Lang, preaching the sermon, pointed out that the statue represented the final element in a long-range plan for the embellishment of the interior of St. Peter's.

The statue was carved by Robert Robbins, a well-known sculptor. At the base, these words are carved: Erected by Saint Peter's congregation in gratitude for the ministry of Leslie John Alden Lang, Priest of the Parish. Then follow the dates, 1934-40 and 1943-63, which represent his two periods of service, first as assistant minister and then as rector.

Diocese Drops from First

The Diocese of New York, which for many years was the largest diocese in the Episcopal Church, is now the second largest in number of communicants and the third largest in baptized members, according to statistics in the 1964 Episcopal Church Annual. The figures are for 1962.

This volume, published each year by Morehouse-Barlow Co., is the official statistical reference book for the Church.

According to its figures, the Diocese of Los Angeles has the greatest number of communicants, 91,014, while New York has 88,240. The Diocese of Massachusetts, which comprises the eastern half of that state, has 140,144 baptized persons; Los Angeles has 136,992 and New York has 135,689.

The Church has 3,587,104 baptized members in the United States and in missions administered by the Overseas Department of National Council, the Annual reports. This is a record number. Excluding the 250,582 members outside the United States, the American Church is the third largest in the 43 million-member Anglican Communion. Only the Church of England and the Church in Australia are larger.

The largest parish in the Episcopal Church is St. Philip's, Manhattan, with 3,999 communicants, followed by Christ Church, Greenwich, Conn., with 3,961 communicants in the church and four chapels. Third largest is Trinity Parish, Manhattan, with 3,918 communicants in its church and six chapels. St. Thomas', Manhattan, is ninth, with 2,936. ■

Parishes and People

● A preaching mission in Spanish will be held at St. Edward the Martyr, 14 East 109th St., from Sunday, Feb. 16 through Wednesday, Feb. 19. The Very Rev. Francisco Reus-Froylan, Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Baptist, Santurce, Puerto Rico, will speak. Dean Reus is a native of Puerto Rico. His father, the Rev. Estaban Reus-Garcia, served at St. Edward the Martyr in 1952.

The Rev. John H. Gill, Vicar of the church, said that flyers, in Spanish, are being distributed throughout the neighborhood. Dean Reus will speak at 8 P.M. nightly on some aspect of his general topic, "The New Life." He will speak in English on the same subject on Sunday, Feb. 16, at a combined parish Mass celebrated in Spanish and English at 11.

● Civic leaders in Kingston, parishioners and friends of the Rev. Robert T. Shellenberger gathered in St. John's Church on Dec. 15 to celebrate the clergyman's 35th anniversary in the priesthood. Members of the parish presented him a complete set of eucharistic vestments. A native of Marietta, Pa., Fr. Shellenberger served parishes in Pennsylvania and was on the staff of Trinity Parish, Manhattan, before becoming Rector of St. John's, Kingston, in 1943.

● A special service and parish luncheon was held on Dec. 21 at St. Paul's, Yonkers, to observe the 25th anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. Clinton C. Veinotte. Mr. Veinotte, Rector of St. Paul's for eight years, is a native of Nova Scotia and served parishes in Canada before coming to Yonkers. Officials of the Yonkers Council of Churches gave him a scroll, and many greetings and testimonials were presented by fellow clergy and friends.

● St. Stephen's, Woodlawn, has an unusual new rug in front of the altar. It was designed by one clergyman in this diocese, and made by hand, in needlepoint, by another. Canon West designed the rug especially for St. Stephen's, and the Rev. Walter A. Rogers, Rector of St. Simeon's, Bronx, who has done needlepoint as a hobby for some years, made it.

The design consists of the parish shield on a background of steel blue, with a border in various tones of beige. At the top of the shield are three silver stones on a red field, representing St. Stephen, who was stoned to death. In the center are three trees on a white field, representing the trees of the parish's district, Woodlawn. At the bottom is a green area representing the lawn of Woodlawn. Flanking the shield are two large golden palm branches, representing the palms of martydom. There are a number of stones in the background. The rug is nine feet long by 46 inches wide, according to the Rev. E. Perrin Hayes, Rector of St. Stephen's. It contains some 486,000 stitches and took five months to make.

● Major renovations have been completed at the rectory of St. Barnabas, Irvington. The project started at the foundations, where termites were found to have chewed their way through some of the woodwork. The electrical system was modernized, a new heating system was installed, the doors and windows were weather-stripped, and a new stairway was built. A connecting room was built on the second floor so that one could pass from the main part of the house to a wing without going down one stairway and up the other. A new kitchen was built, and two small rooms were converted into one large one, which will be used as a living room. ■

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

Episcopal Churchwomen throughout the diocese will participate in the observance of the World Day of Prayer on February 14. The observance is sponsored by the United Church Women (National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.) ■

Annual Award In Journalism To Honor Leidt

An annual award in religious journalism has been established to honor William E. Leidt, who for 41 years served the National Council of the Episcopal Church in a variety of capacities. He retired on Dec. 31.

The William E. Leidt Award for Excellence in Religious Journalism will be presented annually to the person judged to have published the best religious writing in the secular press. Mr. Leidt was named a life-time judge.

He began his association with National Council immediately after being graduated from Harvard in 1922. Beginning as assistant secretary in the Department of Missions, forerunner of the Overseas Department, he held a number of posts until being named Director of Publications in 1939. In addition to this, he became editor of the magazine, Forth, in 1940. Later Forth was incorporated into The Episcopalian. Mr. Leidt continued as Director of Publications until his retirement, although for the past two years he has also been on special assignment to the Anglican Congress.

Mr. Leidt has taught at the School of Education, New York University, and has been an instructor in missions at the New York Training School for Deaconesses.

Mr. Leidt, and his wife, Sarah, lived in Scarsdale for many years and were members of the Church of St. James the Less before moving to Ridgefield, Conn., recently. Mrs. Leidt has been an active member of the Episcopal Churchwomen, having served on its board in various capacities. ■

Guild Announces Hadden Lecture

The New York Altar Guild will hold its annual Hadden Memorial Lecture in the Cathedral House conference room on Thursday, Feb. 27, at 11 A.M.

The Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Episcopal Mission Society in the Diocese of New York, will be the speaker. Coffee will be served after the lecture. ■

Morehouse Rates Toronto As Top 1963 Church Event

The high point of 1963 for the Episcopal Church was the Anglican Congress held last August in Toronto, Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, editor of the Episcopal Church Annual, notes in the 1964 edition. Dr. Morehouse also is President of the House of Deputies.

The Congress initiated missionary planning and "a new appraisal of our vocation as Anglicans," he writes. Other significant events to which he calls attention include "the beginning of reappraisal of the whole question of race and religion," the death of Pope John XXIII, and the second session of the Vatican Council. The Annual also contains a memorial page in tribute to the late President John F. Kennedy.

Looking toward the General Convention of the Episcopal Church to be held next October in St. Louis, Mo., Dr. Morehouse expresses the hope that it "may prove to be a great missionary convention, with new and constructive emphasis on the mutual responsibility and interdependence that were the watchwords of the Toronto Congress."

He predicts that in St. Louis there will be renewed emphasis on the problem of the "inner city," on theological education and on ecumenical relations. "Unity and mission are two sides of the same coin; both demand new and courageous action if the Church is truly to fulfill the Divine Commission of her Lord and Saviour," says Dr. Morehouse.

He concludes: "There does seem to be a new current of energy in the Church, with an eagerness for deepening of the spiritual life of its members and for a greater and more constructive impact upon the community and the world. Not only religion in general, but Christian unity in particular, has become a proper topic of conversation; and there is a genuine and widespread spirit of renewal that is evident wherever Church people gather. That is a hopeful sign as we enter into the Year of Our Lord Nineteen Hundred Sixty-Four." ■

Caseworker to Help at Westfield

A caseworker has been assigned to Westfield State Farm, Bedford Hills, by the Episcopal Mission Society in the Diocese of New York. The worker, Miss Ellen Hightower, will counsel women who are to have babies while in the state prison and reformatory for women.

She also will help the women make an adjustment upon returning to the community. And she will study histories of women who have had babies while in prison during the past ten years, to determine what has happened to these mothers and their infants.

The new service was announced by the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Society. "We believe this is the first time a caseworker has been assigned to a prison solely to help such women, and to undertake research on the problem," said Mr. Bonacker. The project will be supported over a two-year period by grants totaling $29,438 from a private foundation and the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies.

The Westchester County Council of Social Agencies, the New York State Department of Correction, Westfield State Farm officials, and officers of the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies helped the Society plan the project. Mr. Bonacker said the research also will help determine whether a "half-way house" should be established for women who keep their babies upon release from prison.

The Mission Society will continue to offer counseling and rehabilitation to other Westfield prisoners through a social worker. This worker helps the inmates both while they are in the institution and upon their release. ■

The word curate originally meant any minister having charge of the cure of souls in a parish, but now its meaning is usually restricted to indicate one who assists the rector in a parish church or in a chapel of the parish. ■

the QUESTION is . . .

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. Why do we call our clergy "priests"?

A. Well, as a matter of fact, we call them some other things, too. (I mean politely.) We call some of them bishops, and we call some of them deacons. Bishops, priests, and deacons are Holy Orders within the whole context of the ministry. The "ministry" means the service of God's people by men chosen by God, and commissioned by the Church, to minister to his people. "Ministry" is actually a generic word. It has to do with the one who can appropriately perform or offer this or that particular service. Bishops are the first Order of our clergy. It is to bishops that the defense of the faith, and the chief pastorship of the Church are committed. The bishop, in turn, commits to the individual priest a share in his pastoral and priestly ministry to enable a particular congregation to be served constantly, and, one hopes, wisely in the ways of the Christian religion. "Clergy," as a word, just means all clerics. "Ministry," as a word, means the corporate or individual jobs which all clerics are called on to perform. So, for example, in the Prayer Book, in a service such as Morning Prayer, which may for the most part be taken by a lay reader, the simple word "minister" is used. It is only when it comes to the Absolution that the word "priest" is included in the rubric—because a lay reader may not give the Church's Absolution; only a priest or a bishop can do that. It is always worth remembering that whenever the Book uses the word "priest," the bishop is included, since he is, after all, the principal priest.

300 Attend Conference Reunion

Some 300 young people who attended the New York Youth Conferences at Bard College and St. John's-in-the-Wilderness last summer held a reunion at the Cathedral on Dec. 27. Holy Communion was followed by lunch in Synod House undercroft.

Summer friendships were renewed, and music for dancing was provided.

Later, in Synod Hall, the Rev. Harry Reis, Rector of Good Shepherd, Greenwood Lake, led Christmas carols. The Rev. David Arnold, Rector of St. John's, New City, announced plans for this year's Bard Conferences. The dates are: Aug. 2-7, 7th and 8th graders; Aug. 9-14, 9th graders; Aug. 16-21, 10th graders; Aug. 23-28, 11th and 12th graders and Conference alumni.

The Rev. Richard J. Kirk, Associate Director of the Department of Christian Education, showed slides of last year's Wilderness Conference. The 1964 dates are: Conference 1, July 5-17; Conference 2, July 19-31; Conference 3, Aug. 2-14. ■

So glad Canon West's question and answer column is back in The Bulletin.

I always found it a marvellous teaching-learning feature, good as a sermon any day.

There's always something interesting; and every so often something hits you that will stay for the rest of your life.

Mrs. E. H. Goodling, Manhattan

I have been asked by Chaplain (Major) Winfield S. Bennett, Senior Episcopal Chaplain in Korea, to furnish him with as many names as possible of Episcopalians serving in the Armed Forces in Korea so that an effort may be made to bring the Church's ministry to them.

If any of the readers of The Bulletin know of any servicemen in Korea, would they please send me their names and unit addresses, and I will forward them to Chaplain Bennett.

This would be rendering a distinct service to the Church and to our military personnel in Korea.

'Document' Committee Starts Work

A special committee of the National Council of the Episcopal Church has been appointed by the Presiding Bishop to work out ways in which the Anglican Congress document "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ" can be implemented in the United States.

The request for this special committee was made by Council members at their December meeting at Seabury House, Greenwich, Conn. Earlier, the House of Bishops at its annual meeting in Little Rock, Ark., had requested the Council to receive the document and take action.

Details of the National Council committee's recommendations on the document will go before General Convention when it meets next October in St. Louis, Mo.

The Council also urged all staff officers to examine their programs in light of the document's call for "a radical reappraisal" in the work of the 18 national churches comprising the Anglican Communion.

Bishop Thomas H. Wright of East Carolina, who headed a special committee on implementation of the document during the Council meeting, declared that the only way to present the mutual responsibility document to General Convention is to abolish the quota system and ask each diocese and missionary district to measure up to the high calling of mutual responsibility by 1965. He added that the document calls for "adventurous giving." ■

Churchwomen to Hold 2-Day Program in May

Episcopal Churchwomen in this diocese are embarking upon a new venture this spring—a two-day program combining a day-long conference at a Manhattan hotel, the spring United Thank Offering Ingathering, and the annual meeting.

The event will be held Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16.

The conference, on Friday, will be held at the Hotel Savoy Hilton, Fifth Avenue and 58th Street, with two leading Episcopalians participating: Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies, and Mrs. Robert N. Rodenmayer, Associate Secretary, Division of Christian Ministries, National Council, and liaison to the General Division of Women's Work. Mrs. Rodenmayer will serve as conference leader, and Dr. Morehouse will give the principal address at a banquet on Friday evening.

Theme of the conference will be "The Creative Vocation of Christian Women."

On Saturday morning, the United Thank Offering Ingathering will be held at the Cathedral. It will be the 75th anniversary of UTO, and the famous Golden Alms Basin will be used for its presentation. On Saturday afternoon, the annual meeting will be held in Synod House.

"I hope all parishes will plan now to send representatives," said Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., diocesan president of the Episcopal Churchwomen. "I think we can promise one of the most interesting and inspirational programs ever held."

The purpose of the conference, according to the ECW diocesan board, is "to help Episcopal Churchwomen understand and accept their responsibilities as Christian women in the world today." The basis for such understanding, the board continues, "is the recognition of women's need for creative growth." Thus, within the framework of its theme, "The Creative Vocation of Christian Women," the conference will offer discussion groups covering these areas: growth through continuing education; growth through civic participation; growth through creative expression in the arts. Assignment of individuals to the groups will be made according to the first and second choices indicated on the registration forms.

Dr. Morehouse

Mrs. Rodenmayer

Registration at the Savoy Hilton will open at 10 A.M. Friday, followed by a word of welcome by Mrs. Edgar. At 11, a devotional service will be conducted by Mrs. Douglas M. Glasspool, diocesan chairman of devotional life. During the luncheon, which begins at 12:30 P.M., Miss Frances M. Young, Executive Secretary of the General Division of Women's Work, will describe plans for the Triennial Meeting next October 11-23 in St. Louis.

Mrs. Rodenmayer will introduce the conference theme when the session reconvenes at 2 P.M. The discussion groups will follow. At their conclusion, there will be a summary

EMS Plans Elko Benefits

The Woman's Council of the Episcopal Mission Society is holding three benefits for Elko Lake Camps, according to Mrs. Gurney Williams, Diocesan Chairman.

They are a performance of the musical, "High Spirits," on April 2; the 1964 Crystal Ball at the home of Mrs. Roger Glenn Mook in Rye on May 1; and a dinner dance on May 22 in Mayer's Parkway Restaurant, the Bronx.

Tickets for "High Spirits," which range from $10 to $20, may be obtained from Mrs. Rudolph F. Mattesich, 310 East 70th St., or by calling Mrs. Dowling at the Mission Society, WO 6-2960, (code 212).

Subscriptions to the Crystal Ball, at $30 a couple, can be obtained from Mrs. G. Maxwell Ule, 5 Loch Lane, Port Chester. The ball is being held in honor of Bishop Donegan.

Reservations for the Bronx dinner dance, at $5.50 a person, can be obtained from Mrs. Andrew Bernero, 2950 Bainbridge Ave., Bronx. ■

THE BISHOP'S EASTER MESSAGE

What happened on the first Easter Day was not primarily the divine guarantee of the immortality of the human soul; it was rather the vindication of Jesus' trust in his Father.

Some Easter sermons will hail the Resurrection as the divine response to Job's timeless question, "If a man die shall he live again?" There are many hints in scripture and in religious experience, but Easter itself gives no certain response to our questionings. It does not tell us that man is by nature immortal and inevitably so, nor does it give us a blueprint of the world to come.

Easter tells of One who trusted God in life and death; and of a God so strong, so faithful, and so loving, that He can lead those who love Him through every single experience which can possibly happen—even through that awesome mystery which we call death.

Easter is neither a demonstration of immortality, nor a preview of existence in the future life. Easter calls us to trust our Heavenly Father even as a seemingly forsaken, seemingly defeated and actually dying Jesus trusted Him.

In the hands of God we and our loved ones are safe. Nothing can hurt us beyond God's power of restoration, and nothing can destroy the soul whose hope is stayed on Him. We can with confidence entrust ourselves and those dear to us, on earth and in Paradise, to His care and love.

He who raised up Jesus from the dead will lead us in His own way, and in His own good time, unto those good things which He has prepared for all who love Him. Trusting in God we can go through life and through death, undefeated, and unafraid.

God grant you a blessed Easter.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Diocesan Missionary Quota Payments

For the second successive year diocesan congregations exceeded one million dollars in payments on their Missionary Quotas. The total contributions toward the 1963 requirements amounted to $1,048,246, an increase of about $47,000 over 1962.

The total requirement for both National Council and Diocesan needs was $1,327,436. Receipts fell 21% short of this amount; therefore it was necessary to curtail vital programs at the National and Diocesan levels.

Each year several congregations overpay their quotas, thereby compensating in part for congregations which either do not meet quota, or, as in the case of 3 congregations in 1963, fail to make any payment on quota. 33 congregations in 1963 overpaid quotas compared with 43 in 1962.

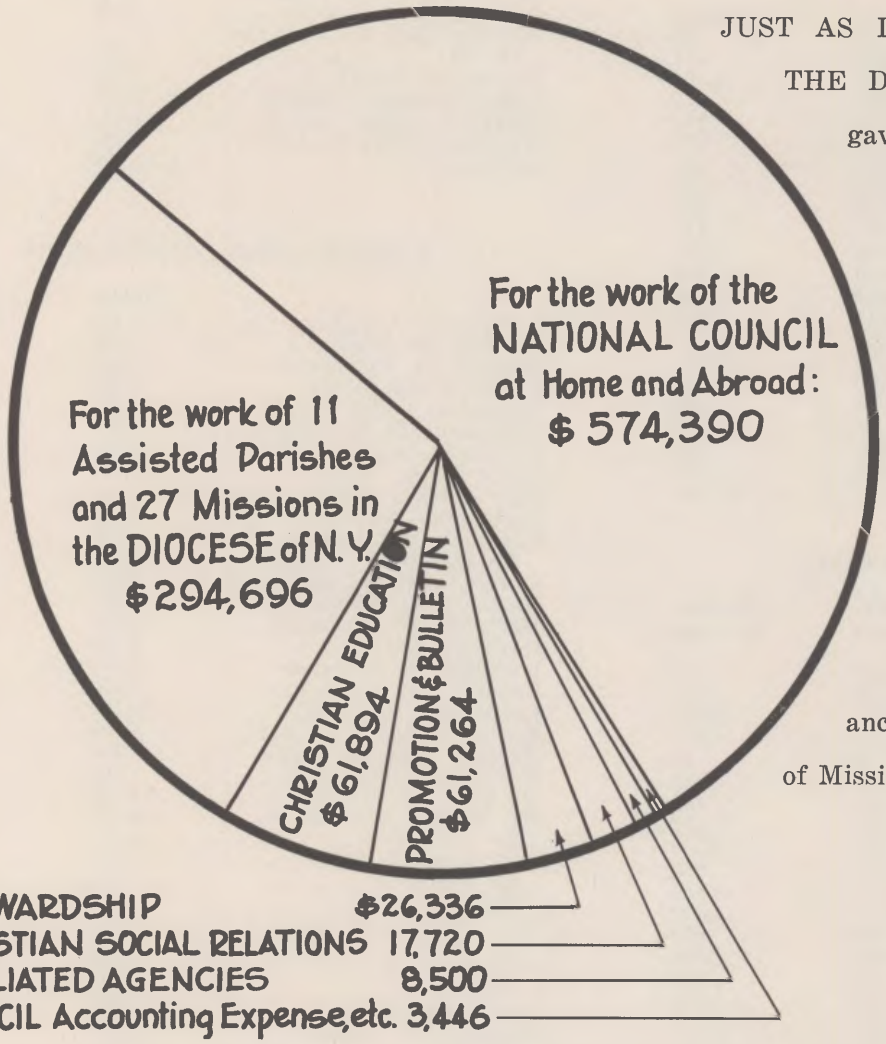
How the $1,048,246 Missionary Quota Dollars Were Spent in 1963



JUST AS IT HAS FOR 45 YEARS, THE DIOCESE OF NEW YORK gave to "others" more than it spent on itself. In 1963, it gave $574,390 out of a total of $1,048,246 to the work of the Church beyond the borders of the diocese. The remaining $473,856 was distributed as shown on the chart. The largest part of this balance went to the Department of Missions.

Cynicism in Youth Is a Mask, Boyd Says

The posture of cynicism adopted by many young people today masks a desperate searching for meaning in their lives, declared the Rev. Malcolm Boyd, Episcopal Chaplain at Wayne State University, on the radio program Viewpoint. Religion, as it now operates, he added, is not helping to provide this meaning.

The 15-minute weekly program is produced by the Division of Radio and Television, National Council of the Episcopal Church.

Chaplain Boyd said, "Ideals matter very, very much to young people, far more than we realize, because they so often look at our double-standard moralities and our sort of public hypocracies that we've lived with for so long, and they're hurt.

Young people have looked to the adult world for some of the answers, but "they saw such confusion, they saw that the adults couldn't give them answers. . . ." Religion is being connected with the old, pat answer which no longer gives an answer, said Chaplain Boyd. He asserted that, for one thing, the Church School has not been able to adapt itself to young people frequently enough. "Frankly, we probably ought not meet in church buildings," he said, adding, "Now this is a radical suggestion, but I find in college work that we cannot any longer meet in a church structure. I meet the students in the Student Union or in my apartment. Many atheistic and agnostic and other students, who don't have to be labeled but who have rejected religion, will come to the apartment, sit on the floor and in groups speak what they want to speak about in a permissive environment."

And what does the Gospel have to say to these young people? Chaplain Boyd said, ". . . that they are accepted, that they live in a meaningful world, that it is not a world of sexual anarchy or existential chaos, but that it is a world of profound, deep, purposeful meaning . . . that they are rooted to God and to each other. This, of course, is what they do not see. They see only the fragmentation and the brokenness." ■

Top Speakers to Address All Saints 'Church Week'

Except for business and family considerations, parishioners at All Saints, Manhattan, are being asked to devote one solid week to their church. The venture is called "Church Week."

Furthermore, they are being asked to spread the news of this concentrated program throughout the neighborhood and involve as many non-church-goers as possible. Approximately 6,000 flyers are being distributed throughout the neighborhood. According to the Rev. Robert E. Terwilliger, assistant minister, the purpose of "Church Week" is to try "to make the true reality of the church come alive."

He points out, "As churchmen we do not belong to a religious club, a chaplaincy service to our society, or a mutual improvement society; we belong to the redeeming Body of Jesus Christ. . . . We do not realize this truly."

All Saints, formerly St. Thomas Chapel, is at 230 E. 60th St.

The program is being held from Sunday, March 8, through Sunday, March 15. The theme is "Being the Church." Dr. Terwilliger's sermon for the opening day is entitled "What the Church Is."

The weekday programs will feature five prominent speakers: The Rev. Samuel J. Wylie, Rector of the Church of the Advent, Boston; Dr. Dora P. Chaplin, Associate Professor of Pastoral Theology at General Theological Seminary; the Rev. Robert C. Dentan, Professor of Old Testament at General; the Very Rev. Alexander Schmemann, Archpriest of the Russian Orthodox Church and Dean of St. Vladimir's Seminary; and the Rev. Canon Edward N. West, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Each weekday begins with Holy Communion at 7:45 A.M., and includes Morning Prayer, a concentrated period of Bible study, Evening Prayer and the guest speaker's address.

The addresses are as follows:

Dr. Wylie, "Being the Church in Our Age."

Dr. Chaplin, "Being the Church in Prayer."

Dr. Dentan, "Being the Church in Knowing the Bible."

Dean Schmemann, "Being the Church in the Liturgy."

Canon West, "Being the Church in Our World." ■

session, with Mrs. Rodenmayer acting as moderator. A reception is scheduled at 6:30, followed by the banquet. All ECW members, whether or not they have attended the conference, are invited to the banquet with their husbands.

On Saturday, Bishop Donegan will preach at the UTO Ingathering, which begins at 10:30 A.M. in the Cathedral. According to Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd, the Golden Alms Basin which will be used "is a cherished century-old possession of the Church, reserved for use on very special occasions." The Basin was a gift to the American Church from members of Oxford University in 1852, she pointed out, and "it is evidence of that intangible bond which unites the more than 30 million members of the Anglican Communion all over the world."

Mrs. Rutherfurd continued, "Just as it is used at Triennial, so the Alms Basin will be used on May 16 to receive the UTO, the expression in dollars and cents of a three-year cycle of prayer and thanksgiving culminating in this Corporate Communion. As the women's gifts are placed in the alms basin belonging to the whole Church, so their prayers and thank offering are part of the Church's total offering to God for his glory and the spread of his kingdom."

The annual ECW meeting will take place after luncheon in Synod House undercroft. Election and installation of officers will be among the important items of business.

Registration forms and complete information about the two-day program will be distributed in all ECW branches this month. Registration closes April 10. The cost per person, for both days including overnight accommodations at the Savoy Hilton, is estimated at $25. ■

The Resurrection and

By The Rev. Canon Edward N. West

Canon Sacrist, The Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine

The pictorial representation of God has been a vexingly difficult matter for Christians. The Hebrews believed God should not be portrayed at all. But in Greek and Roman society, everything in life was pictured—even the gods. In this article, a noted scholar shows how Christian artists have tried to merge these two points of view. Canon West has lectured frequently on the relation of religion to the arts, and is the author of "The History of the Cross."

The Early Church was dominated both by its awareness of communion with a living Lord, and by its inherited nervousness about any pictorial representation of God.

The former expressed itself in symbolic use of "the loaves and the fishes" to convey, to those who were in on the secret, a reference to the continuing Resurrection appearance of Christ in "the breaking of bread." The Gospels and the Pauline Epistles are evidence of the Church's awareness that the Resurrection body of our Lord was a glorified and spiritual body which was neither visible to everybody, nor recognizable on sight.

In St. Matthew, the risen Lord is recognized by his cry, "All hail." It is to be noted that even when the disciples saw him in Galilee "some doubted." In the ending of St. Mark's Gospel (as it appears in our printed Bibles), there is only a brief recounting of the appearances as we know them in St. Luke and St. John—with heavy emphasis on his being known of them at the time of "the breaking of bread." St. Luke tells in moving detail of his joining the two disciples on the road to Emmaus, and of their failure to know who he is until the breaking of bread. Later, when he appears to the Eleven, it is at supper time, and they can cope with the appearance only after he has partaken of their food—in this instance, broiled fish and honeycomb. In St. John's Gospel, the risen Lord is recognized by Mary Magdalene only after he calls her by name. The disciples gathered at the evening meal recognize him only by his wounded hands and side. At the sea of Tiberius, he remains unknown until the disciple discerns his action in the incredibly large (and highly symbolic) catch of fishes. The result is an immediate feeding of the disciples by their risen Lord. In view of all this, it is small wonder that "loaves and fishes " spoke to Christians of their continuing knowledge of a living God.

It is only fair to say that the Resurrection dominated their lives even if we bear in mind that they regarded such a life as the foretaste of the triumphant end which was shortly to come.

The Trophy of the Cross. Central motif on an early Christian Sarcophagus. (A)

the World's Great Art

The Incredulity of Thomas. An eleventh century mosaic. (B)

El Greco: The Resurrection (C)

The other conviction, which was equally part of the Christian character, was a profound belief that God could not in any way be portrayed, and that it was against the Commandments of God even to contemplate the attempting of any such thing. True, abbreviations of Greek were regarded as permissable, but under no circumstances would the Early Church tolerate any more specific indication of Christ.

So Hebraic an attitude was incapable of meeting the needs of the Graeco-Roman populace. Greek art, and its imitative offspring, Roman art, had accustomed the people to every form of pictorial art. The pagan gods and the great scenes of history were given permanent and edifying expression in the paintings and statuary which surrounded people in all the activities of their lives. It was only a totally unwarranted prejudice which assumed that such portrayal constituted idolatry, as the Old Testament understood it.

The inevitable result was that the Church started to permit pictures which would convey the nature of Christ, as over against there being the slightest possibility of anybody assuming that the picture was intended realistically. Christ's nature as revealed in a shepherd came to be regarded as an acceptable reference to him. Indeed, all the so-called "beardless Christs" were manifestations of the Church's continuing desire to avoid any possible likeness. (The Church's position was not such a betrayal as was formerly supposed, since Israel herself had started to use illustrative art from about the end of the First Century, A.D., onwards.)

Yet, with whatever caution the Church might approach some portrayal of Christ, who had, after all, showed himself on earth, the Resurrection and the Ascension posed almost insuperable difficulties. Christ in his glorified body had not been visible to anyone not chosen to see him thus. How then could either be portrayed?

The first attempt countenanced was purely symbolic. The XP (of "Christos") were pictured at the top of an imperial labarum — the ceremonial mace-like staff which the Empire's troops carried even as we would flags. The letters in a monogram form are shown above the cross—itself conceived in a totally symbolic way. The "triumph" is manifest in that conquered soldiers are shown kneeling by it. The total effect was calculated to remind the faithful of the Resurrection. The most famous instances of this reference to the Resurrection are seen on early Christian sarcophagi—the monumental tomb chests in which the great of this world were buried. (A)

If Christ were shown at all, it would still be in attitudes of static majesty—timeless and serene, but, until the latter part of the Sixth Century, any portrayal of him in terms of Transfiguration, Resurrection, Ascension, or eternal Reign would be in attribute rather than person. Thus in Ravenna, Christ reigning is actually a portrayal of imperial sovereignity rather than of Christ as a historic personage.

The Sixth Century mosaic of the Transfiguration in the Monastery of St. Catherine on Mt. Sinai, and the miniatures in Topographia Christiana and the Codex Purpureus can be taken as indicative of the period when the bearded (Syrian) Byzantine portrayal of Christ came to be accepted as the norm. From this time on, the only distinction between the Christ of the Galilaean ministry, and the Christ of the Transfiguration, Resurrection, Ascension, and as Almighty, is the inclusion in all the latter of some arbitrary indication of the supernatural (a fish-shaped vesioa), or a completely gold background, or a circular and all-embracing halo.

The superb Eleventh Century mosaic of The Incredulity of Thomas (B) not only indicates the spiritual setting of the Resurrection but also increases the size of the Lord's figure to so marked a degree that no one can possibly assume that the God-Man is just one more man among men.

The glorious Fifteenth Century fresco of the Resurrection in the Church of the Chora, Istanbul, (see cover) shows the finally settled form of Orthodoxy's portrayal of "The Anastasis." It is characteristic of the Patristic theology, with which it is instinct, that the Resurrection is shown in the active form we Westerners think of as the "Harrowing of Hell," rather than in the self-contained and introspective essay into Christ's rising from the tomb, with which most of us are more familiar. In the fresco, Christ is shown raising Adam and Eve from the grave. In their redemption is shown forth Christ's triumph over the grave, and death, and Hell. Probably no greater symbolic painting of the Resurrection is known to man.

Rembrandt: Supper at Emmaus (F)

Two details from the famous Isenheim Altarpiece by Matthias Grünewald. At left, a ruthless portrayal of Christ on the Cross, his head bloody and his body covered with weals and bruises. (D) But transformed, at right, (E) he rises from the grave. In the original painting, the luminous center appears as a pale yellow glory, merging into a gentle red and pale green against a black night sky. It is a vision of majesty and bliss unsurpassed.

It is not for nothing that Domenico (Kyriakos) Theotokopoulos was called El Greco (quite apart from the fact that a Westerner could pronounce it), for his Greek Orthodox background shows up in nearly all of his paintings. The attenuated figures and the other worldly facial expressions are inherited from the piety of his background; the settings are traditionally Western. Thus, in his splendid picture of the Resurrection, (C) the rising from the tomb takes on the touch of cosmic activity seen in an Orthodox "Anastasis." He was born in Crete around 1548, and became Titian's pupil at an early age. He went to Toledo in 1576, and became the greatest painter of his adopted country.

The first third of the same Century had seen the flourishing of the last and greatest German Gothic painter, Matthias Grünewald. In his masterpiece, the Isenheim Altar-piece, he shows the same awareness of Gospel implications which dominated his contemporaries, Luther and Erasmus. He saw clearly that the Resurrection body of our Lord was not just a cleaned up version of that which had perished on the cross — it was much more! Nothing could make this clearer than the contrast between the figure and complexion of the expiring Christ (D), and the rising Lord. (E). This distinction preserves the Pauline and Gospel tradition, even if it raises immediately the problem of how such a being could be mistaken by anybody as being anything less than a divine being.

The touching simplicity of a master painter is evident in Rembrandt's "Supper at Emmaus." (F). He portrays the exact moment of recognition of the living Lord in the Breaking of Bread. It is a homely scene: the two disciples are weather-worn peasants; the inn, a setting familiar to Seventeenth Century men and women. The dread majesty and triumph are not evident here. It is a scene of utter kindliness and human affection. To use Ricarda Huch's penetrating distinction in styles, it is the Man-God rather than the God-Man.

Most of these portrayals will in some form or other be known to American Christians. There is, however, another and equally Christian form which is little known to us, and yet which has insights lacking in most of our art. There is, for example, a painting of the Transfiguration (always considered a pre-figure of the Resurrection) by an Indian Christian artist, Alfred Thomas, which the Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel has recently made available to us. (G). It is not only a moving bit of painting, but it is a penetrating essay into the mind of Christ. It is, possibly, one of the greatest clues to date of the right way of preaching Christ in Asia.

All art, however, is nothing short of harmful unless it is permitted to move the beholder from the picture to the Pictured. The further side of the icon must be met inside yourself.

CSR Department Prepares School Boycott Paper

Just before the New York City school boycott last month, John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., the new diocesan Director of Christian Social Relations, prepared a fact sheet dealing with the essential issues involved in the situation.

Acting at the Bishop's direction, Mr. Lassoe mailed the fact sheet to clergy in the diocese and to the National Council. An estimated 700 copies were distributed. They were so well received that any extra copies of the seven-page paper were immediately snapped up.

The paper included a brief resume of events leading up to the boycott, a description of the groups and leaders behind the event, and a non-partisan analysis of the issues. Also included was a glossary of various terms used frequently in public discussions of the school crisis, but not very often defined. ■

Camp Needs 35 Counselors

Teachers, seminarians and students who would like to be counselors next summer at Incarnation Church Camp should apply now to the director, Andrew Katsanis, 240 East 31st St., New York (MU 9-2151, code 212).

Positions are open for 35 senior counselors, both men and women, at least 19 years of age. They should have previous experience in camping, teaching or youth work, and be willing to take an active part in the camp's religious program. Skills in camping and love for the out-of-doors are requisites. The salary is from $250 to $600, depending upon age and experience, plus room, board and laundry. The season is from June 23 through August 30.

Incarnation Camp is a cooperative venture of seven Manhattan churches: Incarnation, All Angels, All Saints, Church of the Good Shepherd, St. James', Grace, and St. Thomas, and the Girls' Friendly Society. It includes Pequot Camp for Boys and Sherwood Camp for Girls, both on a large lake at Ivoryton, Conn., some 100 miles from New York City. Two hundred children can be accommodated. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. What is the difference between a Suffragan Bishop and a Bishop Coadjutor?

A. In the American Church, a Suffragan Bishop is in the strict sense an assistant bishop. His work is to carry out the directions of the Bishop of the Diocese, and to minister in whatever field the Bishop of the Diocese may wish. A Suffragan Bishop may be elected Suffragan Bishop, Bishop Coadjutor, or Bishop, of another diocese. Which means, of course, be elected Bishop Coadjutor of the diocese in which he serves. A Bishop Coadjutor, on the other hand, is a bishop who not only assists the Bishop of the Diocese, but has the right of succession as Bishop of the Diocese from the termination of his Diocesan's episcopate. A Bishop Coadjutor may not be elected to another diocese. This answer is applicable only to the American Church. The usage of "Suffragan" and "Bishop Suffragan" in England implies totally different relationships. In Australia, a "Bishop Coadjutor" is what an American means by "Suffragan Bishop."

THE WAY AND ITS WAYS by George W. Cornell. Association Press. 251 pages. $4.50.

Despite its not very provocative title, this new book by George Cornell has much to recommend it for the average reader, whether or not he happens to be a Christian. It is a masterful reporting job, done by an ace reporter.

For more than a decade Mr. Cornell has been on the Associated Press staff as a specialist in religious coverage, and he has filed news stories on most of the major religious gatherings during those years.

At the same time, as a thoughtful man with strong religious convictions, Mr. Cornell has become increasingly aware that the public at large, and sometimes churchgoers themselves, have distorted views about Christianity's central concepts. (Mr. Cornell is a vestryman at St. Marks-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan.) Furthermore, while there are important differences between Protestants, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox believers, there are also more important points of agreement.

It was to underline these points and "trace briefly, objectively and simply, the main lines of Christian conviction as it exists in all branches of the faith. . ." that the book was written.

One important point, however. Theology, even when presented in a top-flight reporter's lucid prose, cannot be expected to be as easy to assimilate as The Saturday Evening Post. Time after time, Mr. Cornell himself admits that some aspects of the faith simply can't be explained to everyone's satisfaction. But the author is so refreshingly honest that he will very likely win readers rather than lose them in these difficult passages. He never bluffs his way through; he never soars into esoteric gobbledygook; and he never thrusts himself into the discussion, although the image of a winsome, well-read man with deep personal faith frequently shines through his writing. "My place as a reporter is not to originate definitions and interpretations, but to absorb and disseminate them reliably and in proportion," he remarks. This he does.

Holy Cross Plans New Monastery

Holy Cross Monastery at West Park will break ground about May 19 for a new monastery building and a wing which will connect it to the present facilities.

The Rev. Lincoln A. Taylor, Superior of the Order of the Holy Cross, said that the steady growth of the Community as well as increased demands for retreat accommodations have made the construction project necessary. Hirsch and Cassetti of Elmira, N. Y., are the architects. The building will cost approximately $700,000.

At present the monastery consists of three buildings: the main house, which is 60 years old, St. Augustine's Chapel, built in 1921, and a connecting building.

The new building, octagonal in shape, will contain three floors and will be located north of the chapel. On the ground floor will be a library, classrooms and workrooms. On the first, or main floor, will be cells for the professed, arranged around a central chapter room. The infirmary will be on this floor, also. The top floor will contain cells for 20 novices and the novice master. The common room for professed members will be in the connecting wing.

The main building will be redesigned for improved guest facilities. This will include enlarging the library and converting it into a refectory for both guests and community. The main chapel will be enlarged to provide more space for the choir, the guests and women visitors.

Holy Cross is the second oldest Order for men in the Anglican Communion, and it was the first to build a proper monastery since the Reformation. Other Orders in England had taken over houses and built Mission Houses, but when the main building at Holy Cross was dedicated 60 years ago, it represented a historic event. ■

ACU To Hold Quiet Day At Intercession Chapel

A Lenten Quiet Day will be conducted on Saturday, March 21, at the Chapel of the Intercession by the Rev. Canon Herbert M. Waddams, Lecturer on Ascetical Theology at General Theological Seminary. The Chapel is at 155th Street and Broadway, Manhattan.

The devotions are sponsored by the New York Metropolitan Regional Branch of the American Church Union. They will begin with Holy Eucharist at 10 A.M. and close with Evensong at 3:30. Reservations should be made, by mail or telephone, to the Branch, in care of the Church of the Resurrection, 115 E. 74th St., NY 10021 (TR 9-4320, code 212), no later than March 19 at noon. A donation of $2.75 per person will include a light breakfast following the Eucharist, and luncheon. The event is for both men and women.

Canon Waddams is an honorary Canon of cathedrals in Canterbury, England, and Ottawa, Canada, and is the author of several books. ■

St. George's Proves That Church Is Nice But Not Indispensable

St. George's Church, Manhattan, has proved that a big sanctuary is a nice thing to have, but that it isn't absolutely necessary. In fact, since last August, when the church was closed for repairs to its 110-foot ceiling, the congregation has turned the handicap of having no sanctuary into a three-time triumph.

First came the annual Canvass Rally, which required a large hall. The event was held in the Seventh Regiment Armory, and with a full house. Next came Christmas and the problem of how to hold—and whether to hold—the annual Candlelight Carol Service. An unprecedented idea—to hold the service at Temple Emanu-el, at Fifth Avenue and 65th Street — solved that problem. Not only was the synagogue filled to capacity, but several hundred people had to be turned away.

The third occasion to be seized by the Rev. George O. Miller, the rector, as an "unusual opportunity to experiment with imaginative worship in new settings," was the annual free choral concert, a traditional event. The concert was held in Philharmonic Hall at the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, no less. Through a special gift in memory of Lucy Conger May, the church had the entire hall! Requests for seats were overwhelming, of course. The 2700-seat hall was filled, and 1500 requests had to be turned down.

The performance included two contrasting settings of the "Magnificat." One was by Bach. The other, chosen as the featured work by Charles N. Henderson, enterprising conductor of the Choir and Choral Society, was by the gifted young contemporary composer, Alan Hovhaness. Written five years ago, the Hovhaness "Magnificat" had been widely played elsewhere, but this performance was its first in New York. The atmosphere was charged with excitement as the orchestra tuned up; music critics were out in full force.

One of them wrote that the music was the kind that "reaches the listener almost immediately, communicating some of the mysticism surrounding religion and particularly early Christianity." He added, "This work reaches outside a church performance. Yet, had St. George's not had the problems of restoration, the work would not have been heard in Philharmonic Hall."

St. George's returns to its premises in Stuyvesant Square this month. ■

As a chorister, this boy daily sings to the glory of God and learns to know and love the great music of the Church. During the school year he lives, studies and plays with forty-three other boys in grades 5 - 8.

The school program encourages him to take advantage of the variety of cultural opportunities Manhattan offers. Happy hours are spent in the spacious gymnasium and on reserved playing fields in Central Park.

Two housemothers and a large domestic staff insure his well-being and comfort. He receives a classical and sound education from a faculty composed of eight resident and three part-time teachers, one, his personal advisor. Classes are small, the atmosphere informal and personal. His progress is carefully evaluated through standardized tests. When he graduates from this unique school, he will be well prepared for entrance into a leading preparatory school.

A large endowment makes possible for him the low tuition fee of $900 for the full year. Additional scholarship help is available.

Construction Projects Under Way At Two Dutchess County Churches

Two Dutchess County churches are constructing new buildings. The Church of the Resurrection, Hopewell Junction, is building a new church and a rectory. St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley, has completed a new rectory. Both churches are part of Bomed (the Board for the Operation of the Ministry to Eastern Dutchess. See Bulletin, February, 1964).

At Hopewell Junction, a mission of the Diocese where the congregation has tripled in two years, the location of the church has been moved from the center of the village to a hilltop about a mile away, overlooking Route 376. Here the Rev. Samuel Bird and his family have already moved into a new seven-room rectory. The church is under construction directly opposite.

William H. Van Benschoten of West Park is the architect. As shown in the accompanying photograph, the church will be a modern structure, basically an A-frame with the top modified. A series of six double windows, arranged like steps, will form a skylight on the west side of the roof, to provide ventilation and light in the chancel. As at St. Gregory's, Woodstock, also designed by Mr. Van Benschoten, the roof will be of split red cedar and the siding of redwood. These materials were chosen to keep maintenance at a minimum.

Manhattan Church Plans Pilgrimages

Once again the Church of St. Mary the Virgin is sponsoring a series of Saturday pilgrimages to convents and monasteries of the Episcopal Church.

Each pilgrimage begins with Mass at 7 a.m., followed by breakfast at a nearby coffee shop. The group assembles at 9:15 in church for a blessing, and then leaves by bus for the day's destination. Each person should take a picnic lunch. The bus returns to St. Mary's, 139 West 46th Street, at about 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children. They may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a check to The Committee for Anglican Catholic Pilgrimages, The Mission House, 133 West 46th Street, New York, N.Y. 10036.

The schedule of pilgrimages is as follows:

May 9 — Convent of St. Anne, Kingston.

June 13—Order of the Holy Cross, West Park.

Sept. 12—Community of St. Mary, Peekskill.

Oct. 10—Order of St. Francis and the Poor Clares of Reparation, Mount Sinai, L.I. ■

The Bishop's Message

For the past several years I have held a series of two-day conferences at the Conference Center for the purpose of considering together matters of concern to the Bishop and clergy of our Diocese. From the letters I have received and the comments made to me, it would seem that the opportunities provided by these conferences, which enable us to meet together in groups of forty or more for worship, study and fellowship, have been of real value.

The Bishop's conferences this past winter were designed to help our clergy to minister more effectively to their congregations and to their communities in these times so troubled by racial crises. It is not easy to know what action or words would be most helpful in community situations, or to find solutions to the problems of race relations which confront us. But as Christians we have a responsibility to face up realistically to the factors which divide us, both racially and culturally, within the Church.

In the four conferences just concluded we have spent our time together in intensive, candid discussion of specific problems and issues confronting all of our clergy. If "mutual responsibility" or "interdependence" are to be something more than felicitous phrases, then we have an obligation to cope collectively with the problems which exist in our individual congregations.

The topics we have discussed together are these: How can we break down real or apparent barriers to the calling of clergy of one race to serve parishes wholly or predominantly of another race? What is the role of the clergy in "equal opportunity" efforts? What is involved in the participation of our clergy and laity in public demonstration? How do we grapple with public issues and community controversy? How do we help our congregation understand the issues involved? What is our responsibility for interpreting civil rights legislation? How can we help disseminate factual information in times when rumor and misinformation are rife? How do the clergy minister to those of any race who are under personal tension because of social changes? How do we achieve integration, as opposed to desegregation or token representation?

These questions must be the concern of our laity as well as of our clergy. I trust that in our parishes groups of lay people will meet together just as the clergy have done, to consider these matters with the objective honesty which is the hallmark of Christians. The world has a right to know both what we think about these things and what we plan to do about them. The day has passed when words without deeds will be taken seriously by anybody.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

The sequel to a previous article which discussed the gulf between the Church and the academic world, and asked "Is the Church Flunking Out of College?"

Bard Tackles

A story is going around of the college professor who said to his class of freshmen: "I will make you a bet that when this course is over, the religious faith of your childhood won't be worth a nickel!"

A lot of people would say this story is a good example of the "godless" college atmosphere our young people are living in. And the fact that 50% of the Church's "lapsed" members are lost within 10 years after Confirmation makes this spectre of the "godless" college even more frightening. What's going to happen to religion in the next generation?

Last October this magazine tried to sketch in a few details about how the Episcopal Church is working on college campuses—how both the Church and the academic world have begun to recognize the gulf between them, and how, finally, they are beginning to talk to each other. (See "Is the Church Flunking out of College?" Bulletin, October, 1963.)

Now we would like to tell you about one college in this Diocese — a church-related college — and how it is handling the situation.

Bard College, about 100 miles north of Manhattan, in the rolling Dutchess County hills overlooking the Hudson, is a century-old, sprawling, unconventional sort of place. It was founded in 1860 by an Episcopal layman, John Bard, whose grandfather had been the personal physician to George Washington. He called the college St. Stephen's, and he meant it to have two purposes: to be "a college of the arts, letters and sciences," and to train men for the Episcopal ministry. Until the Depression years, St. Stephen's turned out educated young gentlemen and future priests. Bishop Donegan was one.

Then, in 1928, the college became affiliated with Columbia University, which at the time planned a number of "satellite" colleges to develop its rather unusual educational experiments. In 1934, the name was changed to Bard, after the founder. As the Depression continued, many wealthy Episcopal families stopped sending their children. They no longer had the money. At the same time, Bard was getting a reputation for being a rather "progressive" kind of place. It was visualized as the kind of campus where bearded poets lay under the trees, read symbolistic French verse and espoused existentialism. More and more non-conformists joined the student body. In 1944, the college started to admit women, and it parted from Columbia.

Now the Board of Trustees began to modify some of the educational extremes. In 1960, it made a bold decision. It brought the college back into relationship with the Church, and it called an Episcopal priest as president.

All this time the Church had not been entirely absent from the campus. The chapel had held Episcopal services without interruption since the days of John Bard himself, but at one time there must have been only a handful of worshippers. Only a small part of the student body was Christian.

The new president was Dr. Reamer Kline, a cool, decisive man in his early fifties. He had grown up at another unconventional college campus, Middlebury, Vt., where his father was Professor of History. Most of Dr. Kline's career before going to Bard had been spent in parish work, with education an important sideline. Since his arrival, Bard has been running nicely in the black; student enrollment has edged upward; and several new buildings either have been built or are in the process of being completed.

No High Pressure Religion

Now, you might expect that with a clergyman as president and the Church again interested in the college, that Bard would become a place where there would be compulsory chapel attendance, lots of courses in traditional theology, a kind of big-brother atmosphere in the classroom, and a revitalized Canterbury Club on the campus.

Not with Dr. Kline.

What he did do was to retain the best of the college's academic principles. At Bard, students work by themselves a great deal. They have close faculty guidance, but there is a great amount of independent work. They are supposed to "make a substantial start" in formulating ethical, intellectual and artistic standards. Three of the college's divisions are like those of any high-grade, small, liberal arts college. The fourth, the Division of Art, Music, Drama and Dance, is particularly designed for talented students who hope for a career either in painting, sculpture, music, dramatics or some other area of the performing arts, and who, at the same time, recognize the need for a college education. By and large, Bard students are rather gifted.

When Dr. Kline speaks of the "intellectual community," as he often does, he knows what he is talking about. He believes that these intellectuals, more and more, will be the leaders of society and will be determining its direction. But, he says also, "The meeting of the ancient faith and modern learning is the most significant meeting of our time."

Why Haven't They Met?

He feels that the Church has not done as well as it should in higher education, because the educational method with which the Church is most familiar is the expounding of a body of revealed truth. Little children learn readily that way—they are used to learning by means of authoritarian pronouncements from the older generation. But by college age, the receiving of knowledge delivered in packaged units is not the best method of learning. College students learn by probing, seeking, investigating, trying, questioning. The Church has been less at home among these educational methods, and hence often less effective than it might have been at the college level. Too often the Church has returned to its old familiar method, and tried to teach in college by authority. And since this is not the way that college students will learn, the outcome is that they reject the Church. On the other hand, what you often do get in a church-related college is the overgrown Sunday School kid or the student whose parents want him in a churchy atmosphere which will defend him from the chills of the outside world. Working with these types does not constitute "college work," at any rate certainly not at Bard, Dr. Kline asserts.

To find out what does constitute "college work" now that we have glanced at all this background, let's turn to Bard's chaplain, the Rev. Frederick Q. (for Quentin) Shafer.

Chaplain Shafer is a Bard graduate. He was its chaplain for five years during the 1940's while he was also rector of nearby St. John the Evangelist, Barrytown. Then he went on to teach at the University of the South and at Claremont and Scripps Colleges. In 1959, he returned to Bard as the Chaplain and as Professor of Religion.

There are two things about Chaplain Shafer's position at Bard that immediately set it off from chaplaincy at a typical big-city campus. First, as chaplain in a church-related college, he is "in"—as much a part of the institution as the physics laboratory. He never needs to wander over the campus wondering how to make contact with students. He is part of the machinery. And second, he is a professor. As Dr. Kline points out: "He can hold his own with the intellectuals; but he embodies the Church."

Also, since the school is small, Chaplain Shafer has no trouble meeting every student. In fact, each freshman signs up automatically for the "Common Course," of which he is one of the teachers. It deals largely with the question of human freedom. If he were going to smuggle in commercials for the Episcopal Church, this would be the place to do it. But he doesn't. However, if students are curious and ask questions with a theological overtone, he answers them. With enthusiasm. And as things are today, Chaplain Shafer finds this is the Church's opening wedge.

He says many college students will not go to church. They criticize much of its activity as "irrelevant." They are violently anti-institutional. They are proud of being "the uncommitted generation." They don't want to be caught loyal to anything. They consider it smart to be unconvinced. But they are interested in religion. And they ask endless questions.

"One of the biggest phenomena of the past 30 years is this great interest in religion," he reports. Students will take all the religion courses they can find. And they will soak up the works of the theological moderns—Niebuhr, Tillich, Bonhoeffer and Bultman. They know the arguments. (Dr. Kline asserted that you could take three Bard students who would scandalize a typical church group the most, set them down in a discussion session, and they would give the group a very hard time on actual theology.)

According to Chaplain Shafer, his students ask questions like: "Isn't everything just cause and effect, so why are we wasting our time talking about freedom?" They wonder if "all religions aren't really the same after all." They wrestle with the proposition that nothing is really good or bad, right or wrong, "only what our culture says it is." They ask —but they are not always convinced.

Won't Something Change?

As a result, doesn't it look as if one side or the other would have to change if the Church and college students are going to get together? If the Church is adamantly traditional and the students are adamantly agnostic, where is the chance for this important "meeting of faith and learning"? Chaplain Shafer says, "Both will change. Together."

The answers the Church gives to questions like those above are crucial, he says. "And a satisfying answer may be a false answer." The chaplain adds, "Perhaps Christianity in the 21st century will have a very different shape, form and color."

Dr. Kline has pointed out that even within the Church today there are those who question whether the present services and parish structure really provide the ultimate answer. "They served perfectly for the Victorian Age, but do they serve for today?" Furthermore, he predicts that the brash, idealistic youth of today is going to temper down considerably when he becomes a man of responsibility with two kids and a house in the suburbs. Today's young people will change as they age. When they control the world 20 years hence, they will be quite different people.

The Episcopalians

So far, this discussion has overlooked another important group of students, however. What about the Episcopalians on campus? What about the students who go to church and take part in religious activities? These, of course, are a minority, and at Bard they are never expected to be in the majority. It is quality, not quantity, that is expected to count.

One of the most emphatic points Chaplain Shafer made about Episcopal students is that they can be of no help to the Church at all if they are just pious. If a student is pious and mediocre these days, his piety is simply linked with mediocrity, that's all. But if he is a Churchman, and he is also smart as a steel trap, then his piety becomes important.

"Episcopal students are at their best when they are real students, good students, bright, creative, inventive—and also Episcopalians who are sincere about their faith and worship," Chaplain Shafer declares. "When chapel membership and college leadership overlap, then we will have 'college work.' "

He sees this as an attainable goal. ■

Historic Trinity Church Plans to Build New Wing

Historic Trinity Church has announced plans for the first exterior alteration in 50 years.

Construction will begin almost immediately on a two-story addition at the southwest corner of the church. It will provide a new sacristy, choir rooms, conference rooms, dressing rooms for acolytes and clergy assisting at the various services, and a small exhibit hall. Adams and Woodbridge are the architects.

The last change in the exterior of this famous English Gothic church, which stands at the head of Wall Street, was made in 1914, when the late Bishop Manning was Trinity's tenth rector. At that time, All Saint's Chapel was added on the northwest corner as a memorial to Dr. Morgan Dix, ninth rector, whose ministry covered nearly half a century.

The wing now contemplated will be a memorial to Bishop Manning.

The Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, has pointed out that when the church was built in 1846, there was no need for the accommodations to be provided in the new wing. But under present-day conditions, which include five daily services in addition to organ recitals and many special services, the need for additional facilities has become acute. Despite Trinity's reputation for fine music, it has never had a choir rehearsal room in the church.

Furthermore, said Dr. Heuss, even the new expansion anticipates further crowding as plans materialize for the new housing developments south of Brooklyn Bridge. Presaging this, too, is the constant growth of the Trinity Church Sunday School in an area where for over 60 years there was no such school. ■

Two-Day ECW Meeting to Include Election

Episcopal Churchwomen throughout the Diocese will participate in a two-day conference and annual meeting Friday and Saturday, May 15 and 16, in Manhattan.

The conference will be held Friday at the Hotel Savoy Hilton, Fifth Avenue and 58th Street, with Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies, and Mrs. Robert N. Rodenmayer, Associate Secretary, Division of Christian Ministries, National Council, as guest speakers. Detailed information about this Conference, and registration forms, are available in all ECW branches.

The annual meeting will be held Saturday in Synod Hall, preceded by the Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering. The 75th anniversary of UTO will be observed. Bishop Donegan will preach at the service of Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 10:30 a.m.

The slate of officers to be presented at the annual meeting is shown in the accompanying box. ■

Noye's 'Fludde' To Be Performed

The medieval miracle play, Noye's Fludde, set to music by the contemporary English composer, Benjamin Britten, will be presented at St. George's, Manhattan, on Saturday and Sunday, May 9 and 10. It will be the first presentation of this work in New York City since its 1959 American premiere. According to the Rev. Edward O. Miller, Rector of St. George's, the presentation will be the largest production of Noye's Fludde ever held in the East.

A company of 200, including soloists, choir, orchestra, organ and piano, will be conducted by Charles N. Henderson. The play is a fanciful interpretation of the story of Noah's Ark. Richard Flusser is stage director and production coordinator. Peter Harvey is designing the scenery; and Adam Kilgour is creating the 98 animal and bird headdresses to be worn.

There will be no admission charge for Noye's Fludde, but cards of admission must be obtained by writing in advance to St. George's Church, 207 East 16th St., New York 10003. ■

Convention Convenes on May 12

Several important revisions to the Canons of the Diocese will be presented at the Diocesan Convention when it convenes on Tuesday, May 12, in Synod Hall.

The Convention, which is the legislative body of the Diocese, meets each year on the second Tuesday in May to act on whatever business is necessary for diocesan operation. Delegates, who represent the more than 90,000 communicants in the Diocese, come from the 206 parishes and missions. Each parish sends three lay delegates, and each mission sends one. All canonically resident clergy ministering in or for the Diocese may vote if so resident for six months. Retired clergymen also may vote under certain conditions.

This year, the day will begin with Holy Communion at 8:15 a.m. in the Cathedral. The Bishop will be the celebrant. Breakfast in Synod House undercroft will be followed by the opening of the business session at 10 a.m.

As at past conventions, the major event of the morning will be the Bishop's address. It will include a report on diocesan affairs and the state of the Church in the Diocese, and a summary of the Bishop's official acts during the year. If the Convention follows the usual schedule, major resolutions will come up for action early in the afternoon.

Most of the canonical revisions will have the effect of making possible the completion of the administrative reorganization of the Council, which was begun last year. They are being proposed by a special committee of the Council of the Diocese, headed by the Chancellor. The Council is the body authorized to exercise the powers of Convention during the months between annual meetings.

One of the principal series of changes involves the plan to relieve the Treasurer of administrative duties, which have been shifted to an Administrative Assistant to the Bishop and to a Controller. The incumbent Treasurer, Dr. Theodor Oxholm, is expected to serve as Treasurer and as a consultant until he retires in the spring of 1965. The new Treasurer, when chosen, is expected to be selected from laymen with a background of financial and investment experience rather than financial management. He would be unsalaried.

The appointment of Edmund J. Beazley as Administrative Assistant to the Bishop was announced last October. The present Assistant Treasurer, David George Adams, is expected to be appointed Controller.

The canonical changes spell out the new obligations and duties of the Treasurer, give the Administrative Assistant and the Controller membership on the Council and in the Department of Missions, and specify the duties of the Controller and assign him administratively.

Another series of amendments eliminates the Department of Finance of the Council and divides the present Department of Promotion into two new departments: Information and Development, and Stewardship. The functions of the Department of Finance, which are largely confined to budgetary and personnel duties, will be assumed by two committees of the Council, a Personnel Committee and the Executive Committee. A third committee to be concerned with planning the financing of the Council will be added to the standing committees of the Council under the name of the Ways and Means Committee. This Committee will work closely with the Department of Information and Development.

The proposed amendments which establish the Department of Information and Development and the Department of Stewardship are as follows:

Department of Information and Development

"The duty of the Department of Information and Development shall be to provide and disseminate to the membership of the Church within this Diocese and to the general public information regarding the aims, plans and programs of the Council, its affiliated agencies and the National Council; to develop and execute programs for raising capital and other special funds in accordance with the approved policies of the Convention; and to prepare a broad public relations policy and program and coordinate all public relations activities."

Two other canonical changes to be presented at Convention are these:

1. Expediting the balloting procedure in elections which do not involve the choice of a bishop. This would reduce the number of ballots required to elect under certain conditions.

2. Giving women the right to be appointed or elected to any committee, commission or other office for which men are eligible, unless specifically prohibited by the bodies involved. Women at present may serve as delegates to diocesan convention and as members of the Council of the Diocese, but not on a number of other diocesan bodies. Also, General Convention does not permit women to be seated as delegates. (So far it has consistently voted down proposals to admit women. By making the canonical change, this Diocese paves the way for its women to serve at General Convention if that body reverses its stand.)

Department of Stewardship

"The duty of the Department of Stewardship shall be to formulate and advance such programs and provide such materials as will assist the laity better to understand their personal obligation and commitment to work, pray and give for the spread of the Kingdom."

The division of the Department of Promotion into these two new departments gives official recognition to the work of stewardship education now being carried on. The expanded duties of the Department of Information and Development will continue to include The Bulletin of the Diocese, but will also include the development and execution of programs for raising capital and other special funds. A Development Committee of the department will coordinate its work with the Ways and Means Committee of the Council.

The remainder of the changes in Canons submitted by the special committee of the Council are concerned with Diocesan budgeting. There has been widespread demand

Convocations Meet April 26 To Discuss 'New Ways...'

"New Ways for a New Age" will be the theme of the convocation meetings to be held Sunday, April 26, throughout the Diocese. The convocations are the seven geographical areas which comprise the Diocese. Each convocation, headed by a dean, meets each year in the spring and fall.

The theme for April 26 is the same as that of this year's Princeton Conference, the adult study seminar held each summer at Princeton Seminary, N.J. Each convocation will consider areas of growth and change in the world and discuss the implications for the Church.

Most convocations will hold short business meetings to elect executive committee members. Manhattan will elect a new dean. Details about each of the seven meetings are as follows:

RICHMOND — St. Simon's, Clove and Richmond Rd. Evensong, 4 p.m., followed by program entitled "The Church in Changing Staten Island." Speakers, John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., diocesan Director of Christian Social Relations, and Kermit Cascelles, Staten Island attorney. The Rev. Andrew Long is the dean.

BRONX — St. Margaret's, 940 E. 156th St. Evensong, 4 p.m., followed by program on "New Ways for a New Age." The Rev. Basil Law is the dean.

MANHATTAN — Epiphany, York Ave. and 74th St. Evensong at 4 p.m. The service will be followed by a brief meeting of the official delegates. The Rev. Albert B. Buchanan is the dean.

HUDSON—Holy Innocents, Highland Falls. Dinner meeting, 6 p.m., followed by address by Joseph Leidy, vestryman at St. Peter's, Morristown, N. J. and a member of the Board of Missions, Diocese of Newark. He will discuss "New Ways for a New Age" as they affect problems of "The Ministry of the Laity." The Rev. Colley W. Bell, Jr., is the dean.

WESTCHESTER—Christ Church, Rye. Evensong at 4 p.m., followed by roundtable discussion on "The Church in the World of Tomorrow." Panelists will include the Rev. G. Clayton Melling of Mamaroneck, the Rev. David B. Weden of White Plains, the Rev. George Brätt of Tarrytown, Earl J. Frederick of Hastings, John L. O'Brien of White Plains, and Mrs. Fenton B. Neal, Jr., of Port Chester, chairman of the Westchester Convocation, ECW. The Rev. Henry S. Sizer, Jr., is the dean.

DUTCHESS — Trinity, Fishkill. Evening Prayer, 5 p.m., read by the dean, the Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, Jr. A dinner will be served by the women of Trinity, for which reservations should be sent, by April 20, to the Rev. Edmund Matthews, Trinity Church, Fishkill. A panel discussion will be held on "The Church Ministry in a Mobile Society." The panelists will be two men and two women from various parishes within the convocation.

RAMAPO — St. Stephen's, Pearl River. Evening Prayer, 7:30 p.m. Speaker, the Rev. Joseph G. Moore, Executive Officer, Strategic Advisory Committee, National Council. Topic, "Population Mobility and Missionary Strategy." The Rev. Douglas Glasspool is the dean. ■ for the simplification of the budgeting procedures. The amendments will permit the operation of all diocesan financial affairs on a fiscal year that will coincide with the calendar year. Then it will be possible to have only one budget, though it will still get its support partly from "assessments" (taxes) and partly from giving. The present Assessment Budget provides the funds required only up to May 1, 1964, whereas the Council Budget ordinarily to be acted on at the Convention on May 12 would be for the year 1965. The unified budget to be offered will therefore involve an assessment which will provide for the balance of 1964 (8 months) and all of 1965. Payments for the 8 months' portion will be payable as usual on June 30 and December 1. For the year 1965 and thereafter they will be due quarterly. This will have the effect of leveling out the payments. Under the Canonical amendments, parishes will be able to budget their assessments accurately. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Q. Where does it say that Episcopalians have to eat fish on Fridays? How does the Church ask its members to observe Fridays?

A. Obviously it doesn't say anywhere that Episcopalians have to eat fish on Fridays. Indeed, there is one Friday in the year on which an Episcopalian isn't supposed to eat anything. On page li (Latin 51) in the front of the Prayer Book, there is a Table of Fasts. Two days are set out as absolute fasts, Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. For the clergy, and quite presumably for great numbers of our people, this means that these are in the strictest terms fast days — days on which no food at all is eaten.

There are a number of "other days of fasting, on which the Church requires such a measure of abstinence as is more especially suited to extraordinary acts and exercises of devotion." There are a lot of these: the Forty Days of Lent, the twelve Ember Days, and all the Fridays in the year except Christmas Day and Epiphany, or any Friday which may come between these two feasts. This is, as a matter of fact, an awful lot of days of abstinence.

As to what one does to observe a fast, other than Ash Wednesday and Good Friday, certainly is a matter of personal conscience. An incredibly rich and expensive fish dinner on Friday scarcely meets the disciplinary and moral requirements of these rules of the Church. (It may well be that one man gives up smoking on Friday.) Fasting is certainly a personal and internal matter, not to be done to be seen of men. Which is, of course, so

West Point General Speaks at Breakfast

"Religion and concern with the world's affairs are fully compatible," the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point told a Washington's Birthday breakfast gathering at the Church of the Holy Innocents, Highland Falls.

Maj. Gen. James B. Lampert, the speaker, traced the growth of religious belief in the life of George Washington to illustrate the truth of his statement. He added that Washington was not the only military man to express a deep faith in God. Gen. Lampert referred to Moses, Gideon and David in Biblical times, and to more modern heroes such as Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson, and Gen. Sir William Dobie, the defender of Malta in World War II. He pointed out that West Point cadets today are obliged to attend religious services.

More than 100 men and boys from Episcopal churches in the area attended the service. The Rev. Wendell B. Tamburro, Rector of Holy Innocents, was host. ■

Thieves Get $1,000 at St. John's, Larchmont

Thieves broke into St. John's, Larchmont, over the George Washington's Birthday weekend and escaped with approximately $1,000 in cash.

According to the Rev. Kenneth E. Mackenzie, rector, the intruders opened the safe by using the combination. They removed the Sunday offering, which had been placed there for safekeeping overnight. They also rifled a Coke machine and took the collection from the early service from the sacristy. None of the church's silver was disturbed, however.

Mr. Mackenzie said that insurance would probably cover the loss. ■

Vicar Spearheads Drive for New County Jail

For more than 30 years, people in Putnam County had talked, off and on, about getting a new county jail. But like many of these community things, nothing much ever happened. Then, almost three years ago, the Rev. Peter Marks, Vicar of the Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, decided to see what persistence would do.

He probably had no idea that such a campaign would involve so many governmental bodies and be snagged on so much political barbed wire. But clergy of all three faiths lined up their support, and behind them were a number of civic leaders who also happened to be church members.

The new jail is now under construction.

The present jail is a two-story brick addition to the rear of the County Court House in Carmel. It has about a dozen cells. Those most frequently used are on the ground floor, about 5½ by 7 feet in size. They contain two bunks and an open toilet. For prisoners there is no exercise period, no work program, not even a medical examination before admission. For a short stay, these conditions are bad enough, but over the years a number of people have been sentenced there for a whole year.

Father Marks' first move was to confer with the Putnam County Board of Supervisors. Yes, conditions were indeed deplorable, they agreed, but money was tight. They would see what they could do. The Vicar realized that persistence in dealing with political bodies means not only patient waiting; it also means being wise enough not to wait too long. He went next to the State Department of Correction and to several members of Congress.

In the beginning, the clergyman and the citizens' groups behind him thought only in terms of improvements at the old jail. In particular they asked for medical examinations for newly admitted prisoners, a visiting area for the families of inmates, more adequate ventilation for the cells, and the construction of an exercise area. But the supervisors pointed out that a new jail was to be built eventually, and that to spend much money on the old one would be foolish. Meanwhile, nothing was happening.

Finally, from Washington, D.C., came an offer to appropriate $377,400 for the construction of a new jail, provided that the Putnam County Board of Supervisors voted to spend an equal amount. Once again this offer was followed by a lull, but then things started to happen.

Father Marks went to the Civil Liberties Union, which set up the machinery for an investigation into the whole situation. About the same time, the Putnam County Grand Jury called the Vicar to testify and to file a statement listing his recommendations for changes at the jail.

But the deadline to accept the government's $377,400 offer was drawing near, and it began to look as if the supervisors meant to let the money slip through their fingers. A delegation of ministers went to see the supervisors. Just a few days before the offer expired, the county voted its share of the appropriation, and the federal funds were assured. Land at the new jail site, at the County Farm on Gypsy Trail Road, Kent, was cleared. Bids for construction were authorized.

Within a year, the new jail should be a reality. ■

Question Is . . .

manifestly true that we tend to forget that there is also the matter of "bearing witness."

It may well be that some clergymen undergo very considerable personal discipline on Fridays, or some other of the fast days, but if their people are absolutely unaware that their clergy have any kind of discipline in their lives, then they have not only managed to do their fasting so privately that only God sees and knows it, but they have also managed to create a certain degree of scandal in the Church.

We must remember that fasting is a man-made rule; the days of fasting are determined by the Church, and the Church can change them, or dispense them, any time it chooses. The real point is that our Lord took it for granted that people would fast, and he has only given us the guiding principle of the "how" of fasting. People who approach what he says on the assumption that he is mistaken are not likely to understand him. ■

● Francis C. Canfield, a member of Ascension, Mount Vernon, has written a song about New York that he is hoping will be adopted as the official song of New York World's Fair exhibitors. Mr. Canfield, who has been writing poetry for some 50 or 60 years, is a retired real estate broker and advertising executive. The song has been put to music by his wife, Kathleen, who is organist and choir director at Ascension.

● Miss A. Bernice Quimby, who has served as executive vice president of the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies since 1956, was honored at the Federation's annual meeting and luncheon recently at the Americana Hotel. Miss Quimby is a communicant of St. George's, Manhattan. August Heckscher, Director of the Twentieth Century Fund, was the main speaker. Bud Collyer, TV personality, was master of ceremonies. Fire Commissioner Edward Thompson served as Mayor Wagner's representative.

● The interior of St. Martha's White Plains, which was scorched by fire about a year ago, has been restored. Repaired portions of the church and new altar appointments were blessed and dedicated by Bishop Boynton when he made a confirmation visitation recently. The wiring system, which is believed to have caused the fire, has been thoroughly inspected, and burned panelling behind the altar has been replaced. New flooring has been installed where needed. The altar and the celtic cross hanging above it, which were damaged, have been refinished. The dossal and altar vestments have been replaced.

There has also been some new work. Carpeting has been laid in the nave aisle and in the sanctuary. A new door has been installed at the basement exit and exterior drainage work has been undertaken. The Rev. Alvin E. Robinson is the Vicar of St. Martha's. He is also in charge of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, Elmsford.

● St. Mary's, Tuxedo, reports that "thieves do indeed break in and steal, as our Lord warned us." Recently they entered the parish house, broke innumerable locks on doors and cabinets, stole a great number of postage stamps, ruined a new fireproof metal cabinet, and made away with about $4 in cash and a few other not very valuable items. In their report, church officials said they believed their insurance covered the damage "but not the hurt and the trouble to repair and replace things." Then they added this memo: "See Malachi 3, verse 8."

● Peter Day, former editor of The Living Church and now the Ecumenical Officer of the National Council, will address the 76th annual meeting of the Westchester Episcopal Churchwomen. The meeting will be held at Christ Church, Bronxville, on Tuesday, May 5 at 8 p.m. Mrs. Fenton B. Neal, Jr., ECW Convocation Chairman, especially invites the clergy and the husbands of members.

Cathedral Choir School Gets New Library

One of the larger classrooms at the Cathedral Choir School has been remodeled to provide a new library. The project was made possible through a $5,000 gift from the Cathedral Guild. the headmaster, G. Coerte Voorhees, had pointed out the need to improve the library facilities.

The new room provides shelf space for 3,500 volumes. Some 100 volumes were culled from the old library (furnished in 1913 as a memorial to William Aspenwell Hadden) and to date approximately 1,000 new books have been purchased. Ten per cent of the new books are fiction. The rest are basic reference works and textbooks.

In planning the project, Mr. Voorhees was assisted by Nolan Lushington, Assistant Librarian of the Greenwich, Conn., Public Library. ■

● St. Paul's, Spring Valley, introduced its new organ to the parish and the community through a series of organ recitals. Organists for the four recitals were Edwin Flath, First Congregational, New Canaan, Conn., David Pizarro, St. Philip's, Durham, N.C.; James Palsgrove, St. Mary the Virgin, Manhattan; and Richard McCoy, St. Paul's, Spring Valley.

The organ is a small two-manual, classic style instrument of 14 ranks.

● The Hon. John J. Keppler, a communicant of Calvary, Manhattan, has been appointed Executive Director of the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies. He leaves the position of First Deputy Commissioner of Welfare of the City of New York.

● Regeneration, Pine Plains, will celebrate the centennial of its consecration and the 106th anniversary of the founding of the parish on Tuesday, May 26. Regeneration was the first Dutchess County church to be consecrated by Bishop Horatio Potter after he became Bishop of the Diocese of New York. Bishop Potter was born in Dutchess County and received his education there. Bishop Donegan plans to attend the celebration. Massed choirs from churches in Eastern Dutchess will sing. ■

Author of 'Honest to God' to Address ELNY

The Rt. Rev. John A. T. Robinson, Bishop of Woolwich, author of the provocative best-seller "Honest to God," will be the speaker at the annual conference of the Episcopal Laymen of New York (ELNY). All men of the Diocese are invited.

The meeting will be held at Hotel Thayer, West Point, on Saturday, May 16, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Bishop Robinson will give two addresses—at 10:30 a.m. and at 2 p.m. —in the Crest Room at Hotel Thayer. A luncheon will be held at noon. Theme of the conference will be "The Old Gospel in the New Order." A discussion period will follow the speaker's first address, and a general question period will follow the second. The conference will conclude with a celebration of Holy Communion at 3:15 p.m.

The event is ELNY's third annual diocesan rally. Some 400 laymen are expected to attend. For luncheon reservations, fill in and return the coupon below.

Dr. Robinson was consecrated as Bishop of Woolwich in 1959. (In American terms he might be described as Suffragan Bishop of Southwark, an area south of London.) After his ordination to the priesthood in 1946, he served as curate in a parish in Bristol. Later he taught at Wells Theological College and spent eight years as Dean of Clare College, Cambridge.

Bishop Wetmore, who has announced the program for ELNY, points out that Dr. Robinson had already established a reputation for New Testament scholarship before writing "Honest to God," and he had written several books. "He had stretched people's imagination liturgically, and had pushed hard for valid concepts," Bishop Wetmore notes. "But suddenly he faced an illness and the need for lengthy recuperation. 'Honest to God' was the product of that recuperation."

Actually written for the clergy, the book was seized upon by the secular press and later by the general public. It skyrocketed to the top of the best-seller lists, and prompted not only a scholarly refutation almost as long as the original, ("For Christ's Sake" by O. Fielding Clarke), but also a collection of critical comments on "Honest to God," containing a new chapter by Bishop Robinson, further explaining his stand ("The Honest to God Debate" ed. David L. Edwards).

Bishop Robinson

Bishop Robinson will visit a number of dioceses during his visit to the United States this spring.

The conference on May 16 falls on the same day as the Episcopal Churchwomen's United Thank Offering service at the Cathedral, but Bishop Wetmore emphasizes that the two events do not actually conflict. "ELNY has planned this diocesan event for laymen only," he pointed out. "We sincerely hope all women will attend the UTO service at the Cathedral. We also hope the clergy will attend the UTO service, because the event at West Point is strictly for laymen!" ■

Catholic Congress To Meet in N.Y.

The first of 17 regional meetings of the Tenth Catholic Congress sponsored by Episcopalians will be held April 16 in Atlanta, Ga. An address on Christian racial relations will be the highlight, according to the Rev. F. William Orrick of Chicago, Congress committee chairman.

A meeting in New York City will be held on Saturday, April 25, at 11 a.m. at the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, 139 West 46th St., Manhattan.

The Congress is being arranged by the American Church Union, a fellowship of Episcopal clergy and laity which emphasizes the Catholicity of the Anglican Communion. The first Congress held by Episcopalians was in 1925 at New Haven, Conn., and the ninth in Chicago in 1954. The term Catholic is used in its classical sense as describing Christ's whole faith for the whole world throughout all ages, Fr. Orrick explained. ■

The Rt. Rev. Albert A. Chambers, Bishop of Springfield, is shown officiating at the dedication of the new parish house of Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan. The six-story brick building adjacent to the church was purchased in 1961 while Bishop Chambers was the rector. He served at Resurrection for 13 years before becoming the Bishop of Springfield, (Ill.) in 1962. The building has been renovated to house clergy offices and Church School facilities on the lower floors and clergy apartments and the Episcopal School upstairs. # Women to Observe Fellowship Day

Episcopal Churchwomen will join women of other denominations all over the nation in the observance of May Fellowship Day on May 1.

The theme is "One Family Under God: Freedom of Residence and Job Opportunity." The observance is sponsored by the United Church Women of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., which has planned meetings, luncheons and seminars in communities across the nation.

In this diocese, participation in May Fellowship Day is part of the year's program planned by the ECW Department of Christian Social Relations, of which Mrs. Milorad Nikolic is chairman. For women who can conveniently reach Riverside Church, Manhattan, she is suggesting attendance at a symposium on civil rights to be held at that church on May 1 at 10:30 a.m.

The Rev. Canon William S. Van Meter of the Protestant Council, City of New York, will be moderator. Speakers will represent the Council on Racial Equality (CORE), the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban League, Interfaith Neighbors, the National Council of Jewish Women and the Catholic Interracial Council. Luncheon will follow the symposium. Reservations ($2) should be made with the Manhattan Churchwomen, 71 W. 23rd St., N.Y. 10010.

All this year the Christian Social Relations Department is stressing better race relations through contact, service and example, Mrs. Nikolic said. "CSR chairmen are being asked to encourage the exchange of invitations to all kinds of functions among parishes so that people of one race may have the experience of worshipping, talking, and breaking bread with people of another race. Foreign students in our midst should be a part of this contact across racial and cultural lines," she added.

Episcopal Churchwomen also are being asked to support and serve in hospitals and prisons and other institutions throughout the diocese, especially those serving large numbers of people of a race different from their own. ■

Trinity College to Hold Conference in Theology

The 15th annual conference in theology for college faculty will be held June 18 through 24 at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. The conference, sponsored by the three Eastern Seaboard Provinces of the Episcopal Church, and the National Council, attempts to aid academic personnel by presenting short courses in theology designed to stimulate inquiry into the Christian implications of college teaching.

Faculty members, administrators, college chaplains and graduate students from dioceses in New England, New York, New Jersey and Washington, D.C., are invited. Attendance usually is over 100. The sessions are open also to non-Episcopalians and to wives. The fee is $35. Information and registration material may be obtained from the Rev. Eugene A. Monick, Jr., Conference Secretary, Province II, College Work Office, Episcopal Church Center, Room 920, 815 Second Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Conference leaders this year will include Dr. J. V. Langmead Casserley, Professor of Apologetics at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary; Dr. Harvey H. Guthrie, Jr., Associate Professor of Old Testament, Episcopal Theological School; and Dr. John E. Smith, Profesor of Philosophy, Yale University. ■ will be approximately $100,000. The project is being financed partly from the sale of the old church property, from funds raised by the congregation, and partly by a diocesan loan from the 175th Anniversary revolving fund. The land was provided by the Diocese, having been purchased for $15,000 some time prior, in anticipation of expanded growth in this area of Dutchess Convocation.

The rectory at St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley, is a raised-ranch type house with three bedrooms and bath, living-dining el, kitchen and two-car garage. There is considerable room for expansion both on the upper and lower levels, but since the Rev. and Mrs. John Miner have no children, no additional room is required at present.

The house was built at a cost of $17,945 by William Reilly, Jr., a contractor of nearby Lagrangeville. St. Paul's, which is an aided parish, had an old rectory, built about 1825, which it sold because repairs were estimated to cost about as much as a brand new house. The Diocese has provided approximately $6,900 for the project. The church already owned the land. ■

THE CHOIR SCHOOL of St. Thomas Church

123 West 55th St., N. Y. 19, N. Y.

As a chorister, this boy daily sings to the glory of God and learns to know and love the great music of the Church. During the school year he lives, studies and plays with forty-three other boys in grades 5 - 8.

The school program encourages him to take advantage of the variety of cultural opportunities Manhattan offers. Happy hours are spent in the spacious gymnasium and on reserved playing fields in Central Park.

Two housemothers and a large domestic staff insure his well-being and comfort. He receives a classical and sound education from a faculty composed of eight resident and three part-time teachers, one, his personal advisor. Classes are small, the atmosphere informal and personal. His progress is carefully evaluated through standardized tests. When he graduates from this unique school, he will be well prepared for entrance into a leading preparatory school.

A large endowment makes possible for him the low tuition fee of $900 for the full year. Additional scholarship help is available.

THE CHOIR SCHOOL

of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine
Established 1901

Famous for over 60 years as an excellent elementary school (grades 5-8) with the plus of a magnificent musical training. Generous endowment affords a day tuition of $450 and a boarding tuition of $900. Scholarship aid is available, based on scholastic ability and need.

Applicants whose scholastic and musical potential are well above average may apply for the 5th and 6th grades. No previous musical training is required. The curriculum, including the newest mathematical approach and two years of two languages (German and Latin), is fortified by a fine library.

The school is a member of the Educational Records Bureau, the National Association of Independent Schools, and of the Division of Boarding and Day Schools of the Diocese of New York, and the Episcopal Schools Association.

Garrison Church Creates Fund for Seminary Students

St. Philip's, Garrison, has created a fund to help educate seminary students. The money, a substantial sum, will provide income to be used each year in these two ways:

- To give Bishop Donegan an amount to be used, at his discretion, towards the tuition and expense of two postulants of his choice in their three-year seminary course.
- To set aside an additional sum for the eventual use of any communicants from St. Philip's who meet the qualifications of a postulant from this diocese.

Creation of the fund was announced at services on Palm Sunday by the Rev. William S. Reisman, Rector. He said it was made possible by a member of the church in company with a group of his friends. The fund will be known as the "St. Philip's Fund" and will be administered by a special committee.

Mr. Reisman said that those responsible for the fund shared the concern of many in the Church who realize that comparatively few young men from Episcopal families annually enter our seminaries. "Both the increase in our communicant strength and our parochial expansion have, for years, proportionally outpaced the supply of men who have answered the call to the Episcopal priesthood."

He said: "There are many reasons for this; but not the least is the fact that there are many who cannot meet the cost of three additional years at seminary upon the completion of their undergraduate work. If they are married men with families, the financial burden is even greater."

The rector also said, "The donor and his colleagues prefer to remain anonymous; but I know that I speak for everyone in the parish when I say that generosity such as this, directed not to narrow parochial ends but to the larger needs of the Episcopal Church, reflects a rare appreciation and understanding of the ministry of Christ to all men. . .and for this we are truly grateful." ■

After a ruthless bombing of the Cathedral at Coventry, England, during World War II, this cross was made from beams picked up from the rubble. It will be seen all during the New York World's Fair in the Protestant and Orthodox Pavilion. Pictured at the ceremonies are the Very Rev. H. C. N. Williams, Provost of Coventry Cathedral; the Rev. James W. Kennedy, Rector of Ascension, Manhattan, and chairman of the committee of the World Council of Churches which made arrangements for bringing the cross to the Fair; and Bishop Donegan.*

Greer School To Build Ten Cottages

Greer School has begun the construction of 10 new cottages to accommodate 120 children on its campus at Hope Farm, near Millbrook, N. Y. According to Ian A. Morrison, executive director, the buildings will cost approximately $1 million and will be completed in September.

Greer is a private, non-denominational, year-round home and school for boys and girls from broken homes. It was founded in 1906 by an Episcopal bishop, the Rt. Rev. David H. Greer, for Protestant children of all denominations. Although it is interdenominational, it is a member of the Division of Boarding and Day Schools of the Episcopal Diocese of New York.

Mr. Morrison said that when the new cottages are completed, two will be used to house boys now living in a cottage which was built in 1906. The other eight will accommodate 96 additional children, thus increasing the total enrollment to 230.

The building project is part of a general plan designed to strengthen and modernize the child-care program at Greer. "A recent survey by the New York State Department of Social Welfare credited Greer with being a model institution providing excellent care and services for dependent and neglected children," Mr. Morrison reported. ■

THE COVER: St. Michael the Archangel, a sculptured figure of heroic size, which has been placed in the Chapel of St. Boniface at the Cathedral. The figure was designed and given to the Cathedral by Miss Eleanor M. Mellon, M.A., a distinguished New York artist. It is in memory of her parents, Charles Henry and Loraine Williamson Mellon. From the tip of its shoes to the top of its wings, the statue is twelve feet in height. It is cast in bronze and weighs one and one half tons. Photo by Barbara B. Loeffler.

The Bishop's Message

Our Lord Jesus Christ came into this world to establish a kingdom. The New Testament makes this fact clear beyond all question. The kingdom is to be a spiritual one. It is to bring all who enter it into living fellowship with Christ. This is its one and only purpose. But the kingdom is also to have an outward and visible existence. It is to be a kingdom which men can see and with which they are to be identified outwardly and visibly as well as inwardly and spiritually. The New Testament speaks of the kingdom in its invisible aspect as the life of inner fellowship with Christ. And again it speaks of its outward aspect as the society which is to bring men and women into that inner fellowship.

Before his earthly life ended, Our Lord formed the structure of this visible kingdom. To the little fellowship of believers he gave his special teaching. And after his Passion he gave them further instruction in the light of the great fact of his resurrection. He remained with them forty days "speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Upon this society or church in the fulfillment of his promise the gift of the Holy Spirit was fully bestowed at Pentecost. The kingdom thus founded and endowed with power to do its work of bringing men into fellowship with Our Lord has continued its visible existence in the world to this day. We are members of it by virtue of our baptism.

One of the deepest needs of this present time is that those who belong to this kingdom should better understand its meaning and their own place and part in it. One feels that there is little teaching in regard to the church which Our Lord came to establish and of which the New Testament says so much. This matter of our belief in the church is far from being a mere question of government or external organization. It has a vital relationship to our personal faith in Our Lord and to our realization of living fellowship with him.

The growing awareness of the need of deeper belief in the Church as the Body of our Risen Lord is one of the signs of this present time and one of the great impelling forces towards church unity. There can be little doubt that the large proportion of merely nominal membership, the all too common obscuration of faith among us is due more than anything else to the fact that many of our people realize so little what the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ is, and what membership in it means. It is time for us as churchmen to put ourselves to the trouble of clearly understanding the principles of our religion.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

EFFECTIVE IN OCTOBER

Presiding Bishop to Resign

The Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, has announced that he will resign next October when General Convention meets in St. Louis. Bishop Lichtenberger has been spiritual leader of America's three and a half million Episcopalians since 1958, when he succeeded the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill. A year ago he announced that he was troubled with speech difficulties caused by Parkinson's disease. He is 64 and would have reached retirement age in 1970.

Bishop Lichtenberger

In a letter sent recently to all Episcopal bishops, Bishop Lichtenberger expressed regret that his speech difficulties "do persist and evidently will continue." He said that the decision to resign "does not fill me with joy! In the New Testament sense of the word, I have had and I am having a good time in my work as Presiding Bishop. I do wish I could continue. But since I should not and cannot, I believe I am ready by God's grace to accept this necessity not in sorrow but in gladness of heart as His will."

His successor will be elected by the House of Bishops from a list of three candidates presented by a nominating committee. This 16-member committee consists of eight bishops (one from each Province) and four clerical and four lay members of the House of Deputies. The eight bishops were appointed by the Presiding Bishop. The eight members of the House of Deputies, one from each Province, were appointed by the President of the House of Deputies. Serving from Province II, which includes the Diocese of New York, will be Bishop Donegan and the Rev. St. Clair R. Désir of Haiti.

Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies, expressed surprise and sorrow when he heard Bishop Lichtenberger's decision. "The news comes as a shock not only to all Episcopalians but also to a multitude of other men and women of good will of every communion and race." Mr. Morehouse noted that the Presiding Bishop is "widely recognized as one of the truly great Christian leaders in America today." He added, "Under his guidance, the Episcopal Church in cooperation with other religious bodies has exercised an ever-growing witness in evangelism, ecumenicity, social relations and civil rights."

Bishop Lichtenberger in 1961 became the first head of an American Church to visit a Pope of the Roman Catholic Church. On his way to a general assembly of the World Council of Churches in New Delhi, India, he paid a courtesy call on the late Pope John XXIII. Last May, the Presiding Bishop issued a forthright message on civil rights, urging Episcopalians to support the movement and to involve themselves, financially and personally. Until recently, he was chairman of the National Council of Churches' Commission on Religion and Race.

A native of Oshkosh, Wis., Bishop Lichtenberger was graduated from Kenyon College and Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. He was a missionary to China before the Communist uprising in 1927. Pastoral, teaching and administrative church positions followed. He was elected Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of Missouri in 1950. He became the Diocesan two years later, and served until his election as Presiding Bishop. ■

National Council Adopts 1964 Budget

The National Council of the Episcopal Church has adopted an operating budget of $11,862,495 for the year 1964. This amount is $597,158 greater than last year.

Harrison Garrett of Baltimore, Md., chairman of the Finance Department, said that "the response of pledges to quotas made it possible to avoid cuts in the general Church program carried forward from 1963, and, in fact, made it possible to add some $300,000 in new work for 1964."

The budget was adopted at the Council's annual meeting in Greenwich, Conn. Also at this meeting, the Rev. Canon Almon R. Pepper, head of the Department of Christian Social Relations, reported that last year Episcopalians dispersed nearly $700,000 through the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief and Interchurch Aid.

The Council voted to appropriate the overseas portion of the 1965 Church School Missionary Offering to the needs of the new Bishop of Columbia.

Two persons from this diocese have been named to positions at National Council. Mrs. Peggy Morrison, former Director of Christian Education at the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, has been appointed Assistant Secretary in the Department of Christian Social Relations, in liaison with the General Division of Women's Work.

William Heuss, son of the Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, Manhattan, has been appointed a Youth Associate in the Department of Christian Education. Dr. Heuss is a former director of this department.

Three National Council officers have resigned. They are the Rev. Henry L. H. Myers, Executive Secretary, Division of Leadership Training, Department of Christian Education, to teach in the School of Theology, University of the South; the Rev. John C. W. Linsley, Associate Director, Overseas Department, to become a pastoral assistant; the Rev. Robert A. MacGill, editor of publications, Department of Promotion, to return to parish ministry. ■

● To most old-time New Yorkers, the name Damrosch recalls the famous brothers, Frank and Walter, who were such eminent musicians. Perhaps not so many realize that the second and third generations of this family have served with distinction in the Episcopal Church.

The Rev. Leopold Damrosch, grandson of Frank and grand-nephew of the conductor, Walter, is now Rector of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan. He spent many years as a missionary in the Philippines. Prior to 1963 he was Canon Precentor of St. Luke's Cathedral, Portland, Me., and Rector of St. Saviour, Bar Harbor.

His father, the Rev. Frank Damrosch, recently observed his 50th year in the priesthood. He was a member of the commission that revised the Hymnal in 1916 and again in 1940. One of his own hymns is in the current Hymnal (#131). Father Damrosch also is the oldest living priest associate of the Order of the Holy Cross. He now lives in Doylestown, Pa., where he was the Rector of St. Paul's Church for 22 years before his retirement.

● New entrance doors, ten feet high, of carved oak and glass, were dedicated at the 11 o'clock service at Grace, Manhattan, on April 26. The doors are a memorial to the Rev. Louis W. Pitt, rector from 1940 until his death in 1959. Many congregational gifts made the memorial possible. The Rev. Benjamin Minifie, the present rector, officiated. The Very Rev. John B. Coburn, Dean of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass., preached.

● Some 350 people—six busloads—from Trinity, Morrisania (Bronx) made a one-day trip to Washington, D. C. on April 11 to visit the grave of President John F. Kennedy. They left about 5 o'clock in the morning, offered a silent prayer at the grave, and boarded the buses again for the ride home. They also took a large wreath of red and white flowers. It carried the inscription, "To our beloved President." The Rev. Lemuel C. Dade, associate minister, accompanied the group.

● The Church of the Crucifixion, Manhattan, recently observed a grim anniversary—that of the disastrous fire which on March 25, 1963 totally destroyed the nearly 60-year-old edifice at Convent Ave. and 149th St. Plans are under way to build a new Church of the Crucifixion. According to the Rev. Chiron Forsyth, an architect has been engaged and is preparing plans for the new church. "But it all depends upon our budget," said the rector.

● "A taxi driver brought us here," a man and wife from New Hampshire told the Rev. Benjamin Minifie, Rector of Grace Church, Manhattan, at a Sunday morning coffee hour recently. The couple told Mr. Minifie that they were in the city only for the weekend, and had hailed a cab on their way to another church. But the taxi driver had his own idea. He told the couple all about Grace Church and pleaded, "Let me take you there." Naturally, Mr. Minifie wished he knew who the taxi driver was, and later he found out. Martin Kavicky, a member of Grace Church, had engineered the visit. He said he considers this kind of thing part of "the ministry of the laity."

● Kenneth S. Giniger, a member of Trinity Parish, Manhattan, has been elected President of the Laymen's National Committee. This interfaith organization, founded in 1940, sponsors National Bible Week each year in October. Mr. Giniger is President of Hawthorn Books, Inc., New York publishing house. ■

Bishop Pays Tribute to MacArthur

Bishop Donegan was one of the spokesmen from three faiths who paid tribute to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur at the memorial service on April 7 at the Seventh Regiment Armory, Manhattan. The Rev. Terence J. Finlay, Rector of St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, officiated.

The Bishop's brief remarks included this prayer:

"Almighty God, our heavenly Father, who has from ancient times ever called upon the strong to devote their lives to the protection of their people; We give thee humble and hearty thanks for this thy servant, Douglas, beseeching thee that his soul may be precious in thy sight, that the years spent in the service of our country may be accounted unto him as service unto thee. And grant that our nation may ever profit by his noble example of courage and dauntlessness in defeat; of generosity, compassion and benevolence in victory, that his memorial among us may be that which his loyalty has done for us.

"We pray thee that having opened to thy faithful servant the gates of larger life, thou wilt receive him more and more into thy service, that he may win with thee and thy servants everywhere, the eternal victory. May he rest in peace and may light perpetual shine upon him in thy heavenly kingdom.

"Give to those near and dear to him the spirit of faith and courage that they may have strength to meet the days to come with steadfastness and patience, and know the blessing of thy consolation and the joy of thy love which passeth all understanding.

"This we ask through Jesus Christ our Lord, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen."

Fair Exhibit Points Up Toronto Watchwords

A committee of clergy and laity from the dioceses of New York, Long Island and South Florida is responsible for the Episcopal Church exhibit to be seen in the Protestant and Orthodox Center at the World's Fair. Bishop Wetmore is the committee chairman.

Since the Episcopal Church actually is representing all of Anglicanism at the Fair, the exhibit illustrates the work of this world-wide Communion. In particular, it emphasizes the Archbishop of Canterbury's famous words at the Anglican Congress in Toronto last summer: "A Church that lives to itself will die by itself."

The exhibit also carries out the theme of the Anglican Congress report, "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ." This theme is illustrated through the use of large photographs taken by Canon Howard A. Johnson during his two-year trip around the world on assignment by the Presiding Bishop's Committee on Inter-Anglican Affairs.

The Barton-Gillet Co., of Baltimore and New York City, communications counselors to institutions, handled details of the actual design and construction of the Episcopal exhibit. In direct charge of the project was the exhibit committee, under the chairmanship of John W. Reinhardt, Director of the Department of Promotion, National Council.

Other members of Bishop Wetmore's committee were Herbert West, Vice President of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc.: Ellsworth Wallace, Director of the Office of Communications, Trinity Parish; Pennell Kirkbride, Director of Public Relations, Episcopal Mission Society; the Rt. Rev. Charles W. MacLean, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island; the Rev. John M. Haight and the Rev. Douglas L. MacLean, also of Long Island; and Mrs. Roger Glenn Mook, representing the Diocese of South Florida.

The total cost of the exhibit, including space rental and free literature, will be $95,000; $82,000 has been pledged from dioceses or bishops.

Visitors from this country and abroad will be welcomed to the display and also will be given suggestions of ways to enjoy their stay in the New York area. David Landon, son of Canon and Mrs. Harold R. Landon, will supervise the display.

Available also will be a 40-page brochure containing many of the pictures to be seen in the exhibit, together with more details about the Anglican Communion. The booklet will be sold at the Fair for $1. It may also be had by writing to the Episcopal Church World's Fair Exhibit, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., N. Y. 10025.

The Episcopal exhibit at the World's Fair.

The Protestant and Orthodox Center, which was erected by the Protestant Council of the City of New York, contains the exhibits of a number of denominations, as well as the famous charred Cross of Coventry. It was brought from England under the auspices of the World Council of Churches.

Six churches in this diocese have signed up so far as hosts for the Protestant and Orthodox Center. They are Ascension, Grace, St. James', and St. Thomas, all in Manhattan; St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, and Christ Church, Pelham Manor.

See The Episcopal Exhibit

Every World's Fair exhibitor must try to please the greatest number of visitors, but when a Church sets itself up at a Fair, it starts out with more problems than anyone else. First, a carnival atmosphere is not appropriate to an "other worldly" institution. So the Church has to worry about the kind of exhibit it prepares. Second, if it spends too much money, people may justifiably list all the valuable missionary work that could have been done. Yet you can't create a World's Fair exhibit with peanuts.

Some people have argued, from these two points, that a Church shouldn't be at a fair at all. But the fact is that out on Flushing Meadow all of the important denominations recognized the value of being represented.

This reviewer returned from the Fair with the opinion that Bishop Wetmore and his committee steered as well as possible between the pitfalls of extravagance and flamboyance. You won't find a piped-in sales talk, or spooky effects, or press-a-button Bible questions, or even expensive works of art. What you will find is words and pictures—bigger-than-life-size pictures, which depict the Church as a group of people who must try to care about other people because all are encircled within the mystical presence of Christ. The exhibit is more thought-provoking than entertaining; more designed to challenge the visitor than give him a sense of smugness. Of course, this exhibit will have its enthusiasts and its detractors. The best way to make a judgment is to go and see it for yourself.

Canon Harold Landon Named Head of Cathedral School

The Rev. Canon Harold R. Landon, Canon Precentor of the Cathedral, has been elected headmaster of the Cathedral Choir School. He succeeds G. Coerte Voorhees, who died April 2.

The announcement was made by the Board of Trustees of the Cathedral Church, which also disclosed that the boarding department of the school will be discontinued in June, 1965. Thereafter, the school will function entirely as a day school. A fourth grade will be recruited at once to carry the curriculum from the fourth through eighth grades.

Canon Landon has been a member of the Cathedral staff since the fall of 1958, when he was named Assistant Minister. He was installed as Canon Precentor on Thanksgiving Day, 1959.

Born in Cleveland, he was graduated from Denison University and Union Theological Seminary. After serving for five years in the ministry of the Baptist Church in Cleveland, he was received into the Episcopal Church and ordained to the priesthood in 1944. He served as rector of two churches in Ohio, and in 1952 became Minister of Education at Christ Church Christiana Hundred, Greenville, Del. In 1955, he and his family moved to East Africa.

For the next three years, Canon Landon was Tutor and Vice Warden of Buwalasi College in the Anglican Diocese of the Upper Nile, Mbale, Uganda. The college is the theological training school of that diocese.

Canon Landon is the editor of two books published by Seabury Press, "Living Thankfully," and "Rheinhold Niebuhr: Prophetic Voice in our Time." He is on the editorial board of The Witness, a monthly Episcopal magazine, and Secretary to the Diocesan Board of Examining Chaplains. ■

St. Luke's Plans $3 Million Apartment House

St. Luke's Hospital, which is now completing work on its new Woman's Hospital on Amsterdam Avenue between 114th and 115th Streets, is planning another major expansion program.

The hospital will build a $3 million, 15-story apartment house and underground garage on Amsterdam Avenue between 113th and 114th Streets. The site is one block north of the Cathedral and on the other side of the street, opposite the hospital's main building.

The apartment, scheduled to be completed in 1967, will house doctors and nurses on the hospital staff. Before construction begins, three six-story apartment buildings will be razed. The hospital has hired a relocation firm to help find new housing for the 65 families who now live in these 64-year-old buildings. Nine shopkeepers also are involved, but they will be offered space in the new structure.

Charles W. Davidson, executive director of St. Luke's, said recently that the hospital must provide housing nearby in order to obtain good nurses and keep them. St. Luke's is competing with other hospitals which do offer housing facilities for their employees, he added.

Earlier this year, the hospital purchased a building at 44 Morningside Drive from the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, and announced plans to convert this building into a nurses' residence. Thirty families who are living there have protested their eviction, and have taken their case to court.

With the announcement of its new apartment project, St. Luke's also revealed plans to demolish its 70-year-old Vanderbilt Wing on 114th Street and build a new $6.5 million, 10-story Services and Research Center on the site. At one time, Vanderbilt was used by the St. Luke's School of Nursing. But in more recent years it has housed the blood bank and some of the research laboratories.

At the same time, the hospital disclosed plans to close its 100-bed convalescent hospital in Greenwich, Conn. This building, which is 37 years old, and its surrounding 200 acres of land will be sold. Hospital authorities said the decision was primarily a medical one, because rehabilitation rather than convalescence is emphasized today. Also, the hospital in Greenwich was operating at a considerable deficit.

Two floors of the new Services and Research Center will be used for rehabilitation facilities, replacing the convalescent hospital.

St. Luke's is the fourth largest voluntary hospital in New York City. It has a staff of over 2,000, including 360 nurses and 116 interns and resident doctors.

The hospital was founded in 1850 by an Episcopal priest, the Rev. William Augustus Muhlenberg, who was Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion. In 1896, the hospital moved from Fifth Ave. and 54th St. to Morningside Heights, where it has been ever since in close relation to Columbia University and the many other religious and educational centers "on the Heights." Although the hospital is non-sectarian in operation today, its by-laws still state that two-thirds of the members of its board of directors must be Episcopalians. Bishop Donegan is an ex-officio member of the Board. Episcopal chapel services are held daily. The Department of Religious Services is headed by the Rev. Cornelius P. Trowbridge who is assisted by three full-time chaplains, all Episcopalians. ■

New York Youth Conferences

ST. John's-in-the-Wilderness, Bear Mountain Area

For boys and girls who have passed their 14th birthday and completed ninth grade.

Theme: "The Christian Implications of Community Life."

Dates: July 5-17, July 19-31, Aug. 2-14.

Cost: $40 per person each session. $5 (non-refundable) must accompany registration. Limited scholarships available.

Director: Herman Hunter of St. Margaret's, Bronx.

These conferences, of 12 days each, are designed to provide an opportunity and a setting in which young people can examine the Christian implications of community life. The members of a given Conference session will regard themselves as the Church at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness. As such, they will be engaged in all the normal activities of a Christian community, including worship, sports, buying and preparing the food for three meals a day, maintenance of the camp site and its facilities, study and fellowship.

Bard Conference, Bard College, Annandale, N. Y.

Four separate conferences:

1. Aug. 2-7, for those entering grades 7 and 8.
   Theme: "God in Science."
2. Aug. 9-14, for those entering grade 9.
   Theme: "God in History."
3. Aug. 16-21, for those entering grade 10.
   Theme: "God in History."
4. Aug. 23-28, for those entering grades 11 and 12, and high school graduates who have attended previous conferences.
   Theme: "God in Current Issues."

Cost: $30 per person, each session. $5 (non-refundable) must accompany application. Limited scholarships available.

These conferences, each lasting five days, offer a program of worship, study and recreation. Each year some aspect of the Christian faith is developed through a series of addresses and discussion periods.

Camping and conference opportunities in the Diocese of New York are varied enough this year to meet the needs of young and old everywhere. Here in handy reference form is a summary of programs for children, young people and adults.

All of the children's camps, except those of Trinity Parish, are open to youngsters from any parish of the diocese. In all cases, early registration is advisable.

The diocesan Department of Christian Education again will sponsor the New York Youth Conferences at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness and at Bard College for junior and senior high school students. Each uses a different way to help young people recognize the presence of God in the life of the world and in their lives.

The adult conferences are open to individuals over 18 and to adult parish groups. Eric Ley, Director of Stewardship for the Diocese of New York, will give a course entitled "Stewardship in Liturgy and Life" at the Finger Lakes Conference. Bishop Barrett of Rochester also will be a lecturer there.

A brand new program this year is a Creative Arts Camp sponsored by the New York Girls' Friendly Society. It will be patterned after several successful programs held in other parts of the country during the past three years. The emphasis will be on music, art, dance and drama.

Have a happy summer!

'Sponono' Cast Makes Chancel Echo with Song

The entire cast of "Sponono" participated in a special service of Evening Prayer recently at St. James', Manhattan. The new play, which is set in South Africa, was written by Alan Paton, author of "Cry, the Beloved Country," and Krishna Shah. The 25 African players, dressed in native attire, assembled at the head of the choir steps to sing typical folk songs and hymns from the mountains and veldt.

The American producer, Mrs. Mary K. Frank, is a member of St. James'. Mr. Paton, a native South African, is an Anglican layman. Last year Archbishop Joost de Blank conferred upon him the Order of Simon of Cyrene for outstanding service to the Church of South Africa. An estimated 800 attened the service. The collection, at Mr. Paton's suggestion, went to the Edendale Home for Crippled Children in South Africa. ■ has been called upon by generation after generation of many of the finest New York families. They know that, at Frank E. Campbell, services are dignified and meaningful ...a truly Christian funeral.

And they know that the Frank E. Campbell staff serves the family quietly yet efficiently with a proper regard for the sensibilities of the bereaved.

Clergy Changes

The Rev. Messrs. H. August Kuehl, from rector, St. Barnabas, Irvington, to rector, St. Paul's, Rochester; Allan B. MacKillop, from assistant minister, St. John's-in-the-Village, Manhattan, to rector, Grace, Port Jervis; David Wayne, from assistant minister, Epiphany, Manhattan, to rector, St. Edmund's, Bronx; George A. Westerberg, from assistant minister, St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, to vicar, St. George's, York Harbor, Me.

Also, the Rev. Messrs. Albert J. Hambret, retired as rector, Grace. West Farms (Bronx); Charles E. Karsten, retired as rector, Zion, Dobbs Ferry; Rene Vaillant, retired, but still priest-in-charge at St. Esprit, Manhattan; Stephen D. Matthews, from assistant minister, Trinity, Torrington, Conn., to assistant minister, Zion, Wappingers Falls.

OBITUARIES

Dr. Ray Francis Brown, Director of Music, General Theological Seminary, on March 23; Miss Alice G. Palmer, former Director of the Port and Immigration Service, Episcopal Mission Society, on April 10; the Rev. Grieg Taber, Rector, St. Mary the Virgin, Manhattan, April 8; G. Coerte Voorhees, Headmaster of the Cathedral Choir School, April 2.

Dr. Brown, 67, a native of Roxbury, Vt., was Director of Music at GTS for 30 years. He also served as organist and choirmaster in several churches in this area and was widely known as a lecturer and conference speaker. He was a member of the Joint Commission on Church Music and was partly responsible for the preparation of The Hymnal 1940.

Miss Palmer, 77, retired in 1960 after 30 years' service. Her work, originally sponsored by the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York and by Trinity Parish, was begun among immigrants at Ellis Island. Thousands of lonely, frustrated people, in danger of deportation from Ellis Island, were rescued by Miss Palmer, who represented them before the Port and Immigration Commission. After World War II, she worked with many demobilized men from other countries who were unable to obtain passage home and thus remained here illegally. She often succeeded in legalizing their residence here. She took pride in serving as a witness for many when they were sworn in as citizens. Before joining EMS, she taught for 13 years and had considerable experience in social casework. She is survived by a nephew.

---

Fr. Tabor, 69, died while attending the opera. He had been Rector of St. Mary the Virgin since 1939. He was born in Omaha, Neb., was graduated from St. Stephen's (now Bard) College and Seabury Divinity School. He was ordained in 1919, and served as chaplain and instructor in history and Greek at the Pawling School from 1920 to 1927. He was Rector of All Saints, Dorchester, Mass., before going to St. Mary the Virgin. In 1940 he received a D.D. degree from Seabury-Western Theological Seminary.

---

Mr. Voorhees, 56, had been Choir School headmaster since September, 1962. As he became critically ill at the beginning of the present school year, his tenure was rather brief. But in a letter to the Cathedral trustees, the Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean, noted that three days before his death he was still busy making plans for the next academic year, and trying as best he could to deal with present problems. "He was greatly beloved by students and parents, and we must always be grateful to him for his many gifts so freely given," the Dean said. Mr. Voorhees was born in Newark, N.J. He went to Kent School (where his father was a noted teacher), received his A.B. degree at Princeton, and his master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He taught at Kent School and at the Nichols School, Buffalo, before joining the staff of St. Andrew's School, Middletown, Del., in 1935. He remained there until 1962, except for Naval service during World War II. He was a lieutenant commander. He leaves his wife, two sons, a sister and one granddaughter.

First Donor at St. Luke's

Bishop Donegan gave the first pint of blood at St. Luke's Hospital in a program aimed at enlisting 2,000 voluntary donors from Episcopalians in this area. St. Luke's is the only Episcopal hospital in the Diocese. It does not participate in any of the city's blood programs and in the past has relied upon paid donors for its supply. Above, the Bishop chats with St. Luke's Chaplain Cornelius P. Trowbridge while Dr. Richard N. Pierson goes through the preliminaries.

The new blood bank project is being spearheaded by Chaplain Trowbridge, Director of Religious Services at St. Luke's. The chaplain, concerned with the hospital's periodic problem of maintaining an adequate blood supply, was asked if he could help. He recalled a voluntary community blood program in Morristown, N. J., where he served before coming to St. Luke's.

"Since St. Luke's serves the entire metropolitan area, one of our more easily definable communities is the clergy and laity of the Episcopal Diocese," said Chaplain Trowbridge. "I approached Bishop Donegan with this suggestion, and he endorsed it enthusiastically and requested the privilege of being the initial donor." The Bishop sent a pastoral letter to all his clergy, encouraging their participation as donors. Later the program will be expanded to the parishes and other church groups. The Bishop's blood, incidentally, proved to be one of the rarest types—AB positive.

EMS Elects 3 New Board Members

Three new members have been elected to the Board of Managers of the Episcopal Mission Society. They are Thayer Cumings of St. James', Manhattan; Thomas Rodd of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco; and the Rev. Paul C. Weed, Vicar of St. Luke's Chapel of Trinity Parish, Manhattan.

Mr. Cumings, former senior vice-president of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborn, is vice chairman of the Program for Harvard Medicine, which is raising $58 million. Mr. Rodd is a vice president of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and treasurer of the Episcopal Foundation. Fr. Weed is Superintendent of Education, the Society for Promoting Religion and Learning in the State of New York. ■

Name Change

The Presiding Bishop has proposed that the name "National Council" (The National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A.) be changed to something that would reflect more accurately the international character of the work done by this body and would not be confused with the name of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. Bishop Lichtenberger made this request informally at the annual meeting of the National Council in Greenwich, Conn.

■ A MILLION COPIES of a World's Fair edition of the Gospel of St. John is being printed by the New York Bible Society. The Rev. Y. R. Kindberg, general secretary, said that the small Bible portions will be given away as souvenirs to Fair visitors. This huge distribution project will be carried on as part of the Word of God exhibit sponsored by the Bible Society in the Hall of Education. Various other religious groups exhibiting at the Fair will assist.

■ A CATALOG is now available of service programs for young adults in work camps, caravans, seminars and community service in this country and abroad. Opportunities for individual service also are listed. The booklet, "Invest Your Summer," may be had from the Commission on Youth Service Projects, 475 Riverside Drive, Room 753, New York 10027. It costs 30 cents for single copies, $1 for five, $8.50 for 50 and $15 for 100. The programs listed are those of the National Council of Churches of Christ, the World Council and 38 other church-related and private volunteer agencies.

■ THE WORLD-FAMOUS evangelist, Canon Bryan Green of Birmingham, England, will speak on the 12-week Episcopal Series being given on the Protestant Hour starting Trinity Sunday, May 24. Canon Green will be heard in the New York area on radio stations WINS at 7 a.m. and on WBFM at 11 a.m. each Sunday. The series will end Aug. 9.

The programs will be produced and presented by The Parish of the Air of the Episcopal Radio-TV Foundation, Atlanta, Ga. The Foundation is celebrating its tenth anniversary.

■ A BOOKLET designed "to help property owners understand and cope with the issues of discrimination in housing" has been published by the National Council. The 24-page booklet, entitled "Crisis on Elm Street," projects a hypothetical situation involving a real estate broker, a woman seller and a Negro buyer.

The Rev. Robert A. MacGill, editor, emphasized that it is not intended to "argue the case." Rather, it marshals the facts and presents them in such a way that readers may study the issues and make informed decisions on a local basis. The booklet is available from The Seabury Press, 815 Second Ave., Manhattan, at 50 cents.

■ THE CITIZEN'S BIBLE, a new resource book, will be published shortly by Harper & Row "for use by the general public and in American classrooms in harmony with Supreme Court rulings." Plans for the new Bible were announced by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., at its annual meeting in Cincinnati. The book will not be a new translation but will use the Revised Standard Version and other translations "deliberately pointing out the differences between traditional readings of specific passages by Protestants, Catholics and Jews." The editors include men from all three faiths. ■

The Letter That Wasn't Sent

I have just done a terrible thing. In the depths of remorse I sit wondering whether I can undo it. How can I evidence my penitence or what apology can I make?

I have told the truth.

Somehow or other, people have a strange idea about a clergyman. They expect him to be truthful and above reproach, but then they do not exactly expect him to tell the truth.

My mail brought a request which read—"Will you please tell us all that you know about Mr. A., his character and financial responsibility? He has given you as reference."

My reply ran—"I found his name on the register of this parish when I came here five years ago. He has two children and one wife. I met them once. They do not attend church. The children do not attend the Church School; the reason given on the visitor's report is—'Father says it is impossible for him to get up on Sunday; it is the only morning he has to sleep.' He is not on the treasurer's books so I cannot tell you anything of his financial condition, or of his willingness to meet his financial obligations; in fact, so far as I know he never assumed any. As no member of the family ever attends church and as there have been no deaths or serious sickness in the family, they have not had an occasion for calling for the services of a clergyman. I have, as you requested, told you all I know about the gentleman in question. Since he gave my name as reference, he apparently did not expect you to receive such information."

I did not send this reply, but instead sent it to Mr. A with the comment that I had failed to answer the request for a reference since this was the only kind of a letter I could write.

He was "burned up," and did I get told! In the great lot of things which I got told was, "Any clergyman worthy of the name would know that a man's relationship to the Church and his financial contributions are of a confidential nature. You certainly have a strange conception of your calling, and you had better not send any such letter."

I did not—but undertook a second effort which ran thus—"All that I know of the gentleman is of a confidential nature, and he explicitly requested that I not tell the truth."

As they say on the radio—"These characters are entirely fictitious; resemblance to any man or group of men, living or dead, is purely coincidental."

I have merely shared with you one of the parson's problems—I really faced this one tonight, and it provoked these thoughts. How did I solve it? I didn't. There is another unanswered letter on my desk—which will be charged to the "unbusiness-like methods of the clergy."

Bishop at St. Augustine's Urges Rights Bill Support

A strong statement calling for support of the Civil Rights Bill being debated in Congress was delivered by Bishop Donegan in a sermon at St. Augustine's Chapel, Trinity Parish, on April 12.

The following day the statement was sent to all clergy in this diocese as a personal letter. The letter read as follows:

"The Civil Rights Bill now before the United States Senate must be adopted. I say this to you as strongly as I know how; and I want you to understand that I believe firmly that this is a moral issue transcending any political considerations.

"It is shocking to learn that our Senators are receiving more mail in opposition to this bill than in favor of it. This can only be because people of good will—concerned Christians and other Americans—have failed to speak out.

"It is imperative that we express our will in this matter to our Senators. We cannot shirk this duty simply because the Senators from New York are known to be committed to the passage of this legislation. They deserve and must have the assurance that the Christian community supports them in their stand.

"I, myself, have written to Senators Keating and Javits. As your Bishop, I urge you and your people to do likewise."

The sermon was given during a service of Confirmation, which was followed by the dedication of a new parish house. The Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, presented a class of 19 children and adults.

At a Confirmation service a year ago, Bishop Boynton laid the cornerstone for the new parish house at St. Augustine's. It is part of the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Parish.

The new building, at Henry and Madison Streets, forms an ell around the church. It is a brick structure with a one-story main section and a two-story wing. It provides 17 classrooms for both Sunday and weekday education programs, offices for the vicar, the Rev. William W. Reed, and his staff. There are also staff apartments, a kitchen and a conference room. ■

Presentation Service Is May 23

The annual Presentation Service, at which children from all over the diocese bring their missionary offerings for the past year to the Cathedral altar, will be held on Saturday, May 23 at 2 p.m.

Choirs and acolytes from approximately 85 parishes and missions will be in the procession. As usual, the procession will be reviewed outside of the Exhibit Hall by Bishop Donegan, the suffragan bishops and other clergy. A hymn sing also will precede the service. The Bishop will preach.

On view in the Cathedral bays will be exhibits of creative activities prepared by children in Church School classes and Girls' Friendly Society groups all over the diocese. These will be set up by the Children's Division of the Department of Christian Education the day before the service. The displays are based on this year's mission theme, "We Are Christians in an Urban Society." ■

Laymen's School Series to be Heard on FM

Talks given at the Laymen's School of Theology last winter at Calvary, Manhattan, have been taped and will be heard on station WRVR, 106.7 on the FM dial, beginning Sunday, June 7, from 4 to 5 p.m. A laymen's committee, led by Miss Anne Perkins and Richard Werkheiser, organized the series. It was sponsored by Episcopal Churches in Manhattan. An overflow audience, representing nine denominations, attended the six sessions.

The programs will be: "What is Theology?" Daniel Day Williams, June 7; "What Is Man?" Thomas Bigham, June 14; "Christ, Human and Divine," John Knox, June 21; "Christian Living," Roger Shinn, June 28; "Worship and Mystery," Cyril Richardson, July 5; "Modern Controversies," Daniel Callahan and Werner Rode, July 15. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

How can our church get rid of its rector?

Well, there is always the other side of that question: "How can the rector get rid of our church?" It just isn't that easy.

The rector was elected by the vestry, and this was done with the consent of the bishop of the diocese. The only way a dissolution of the pastoral relationship can take place is under very specific rules laid down by Canon Law.

May I, however, suggest that this kind of question somehow always implies the wrong thing. Something has broken down along the line. At some point the vestry of your parish thought this man was a good thing. Your vestry elected him. I'm not just fanciful when I say that the relationship between a rector and a congregation is in some mystical way much like the relationship shown forth in ordinary marriage. This is a state that is entered into for better or worse. And because one member of the partnership doesn't seem to be fulfilling his or her obligation to the utmost, is not adequate reason for breaking up the relationship. Indeed, in most instances the difficulties which occur between rector and parish can be resolved rather easily if anyone is really interested in the sort of basic Christian virtues of humility and charity.

Richard Garten Is Named Trinity School Headmaster

Richard M. Garten has been elected headmaster of Trinity School, the oldest institution of its kind on Manhattan Island. He succeeds Hugh C. Riddleberger, who has resigned to become headmaster of University School, Grosse Pointe, Mich.

The announcement was made by the Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish and President of the Board of Trustees of the School. Mr. Garten, 42, is a native of New York City. He has been headmaster of the Park School, Indianapolis, Ind. since 1960.

Trinity School was founded in 1709 by the Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. Its first classes were held in the steeple of Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall Street, and later in a small schoolhouse on Trinity Church property. It remained under the management of Trinity Church until 1806, when it received an endowment from Trinity and was incorporated as a separate institution. Today the school occupies a group of stone buildings at 139 West 91st Street. It has alumni all over the nation. Bishop Bayne is one of them. ■

Trinity, Bronx Gets New Look

Renovations, which include extensive interior painting and a new pulpit, have been completed at Trinity, Morrisania. The walls of the 90-year-old church have been painted light blue and all of the woodwork, including the pews and wainscoting, have been refinished. Gold stars ornament the chancel ceiling.

The new pulpit, a five-sided, walk-in type with Gothic panels, is of blond oak. It was given by eight members of the congregation. On its front panel is the shield of the Holy Trinity in blue and gold, and the Latin words which mean "God is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." An inscription encircling the top reads "Show me thy ways, O Lord; Teach me Thy paths," with the words "O Lord" in the center panel so they can be clearly seen by the congregation. The Rev. Wendell C. Roberts, the rector, said the color blue was chosen as symbolic of heaven and truth, and gold as symbolic of divinity. ■

ON THE BATTLE LINES, edited by Malcolm Boyd. Morehouse-Barlow Co. 295 pages. $5.95.

One of the sharpest criticisms of the Episcopal Church in modern times is that it does not speak to average men and women in their daily lives. "Irrelevant" is the word most frequently used. In this book, 27 "angry young men" of the cloth have raised their voices in protest of the Church's irrelevancy. The result may be a strong potion for some readers. But everyone who wants to know what's going on in the Church should read it.

"It is an unmistakable irony that when many Christians worship Christ as the Lord of religion they deny Christ as the Lord of life," asserts the editor, Malcolm Boyd, in his chapter entitled "Communication." With this thread running through their essays, the other clergymen write on race relations, urban life, politics, education, the technological revolution, church unity, liturgical reform, mission, the role of the laity and a great many other subjects. Six clergymen who are or used to be in this diocese are represented: Michael Allen of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, James A. Gusweller of St. Matthew's and St. Timothy; Dr. Lee A. Belford of Epiphany; Arthur Walmsley of National Council; and Walter D. Dennis and C. Kilmer Myers.

The title and book jacket may give the impression that the essays deal chiefly with civil rights. (All royalties will go to National Council for advance work in race relations.) And several writers regard this problem as the most vital. "I am persuaded that the issue of race is one of life or death for mankind, and is a matter of survival for the Church," writes John B. Morris, Executive Director of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity. But the impact of this book is so strong because it tackles so many areas of life. True, one or two chapters are uneven. But "On the Battle Lines" can be quite accurately described as "a manifesto for our times."

Diocese Is Host to 'Pilgrims'

The Diocese of New York was host to 39 "pilgrims" from the Diocese of Exeter, England, last month. The group—bishops, priests and laymen—arrived at Kennedy Airport on April 7 and remained in New York City for two days. They stayed in rectories in Manhattan, at Seamen's Church Institute and in the Cathedral Hostel.

The pilgrims remained in this country for about three weeks, coming at the invitation of Bishop Campbell of West Virginia. Bishop Campbell and a number of his clergy visited Exeter two years ago. In this return visit, the Exeter group spent about two weeks in West Virginia. They also visited Washington, D. C.

Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton and Bishop Campbell were at the airport to meet the travelers. Bishop Wetmore, who was in charge of arrangements, had a cold and could not be there. The pilgrims were delayed about four hours because of foggy weather, but they emerged smiling from their plane despite an unexpected side trip to Montreal.

The day after their arrival, they were taken on a conducted bus tour that included Trinity Church, St. Paul's Chapel of Trinity Parish, General Theological Seminary and Seamen's Church Institute. Trinity Parish was host for lunch. The Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity, and Ellsworth Wallace, Director of its Office of Communications, outlined Trinity's extensive ministry.

After the tour, the group was shown through the Cathedral by Canon West and honored at a reception and dinner given by Bishop Donegan. On the second day, the pilgrims visited points of interest on their own. ■

Bishop Attends Meetings Abroad

Bishop Donegan, as a representative of the Presiding Bishop, attended a meeting of the Primates and Metropolitans of the Anglican Communion, and the Consultative Body of the Lambeth Conference from April 21 to 27 in England.

The Archbishop of Canterbury presided at the meetings, which were held at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury.

Chief among the business was a thorough discussion of the "mutual responsibility and interdependence" report of the Anglican Congress. This document was the outcome of a meeting of the Advisory Council on Missionary Strategy and the Consultative Body of the Lambeth Conference, held during the week before the Anglican Congress in Toronto last August.

The Bishop returned just in time to participate in the official opening of the New York World's Fair. ■

Pilate Has Measles - - But Trial Goes On

"The Trial of Jesus" went off as scheduled, except that Pontius Pilate had the measles.

It was a shame, too, because Steven Crane, 8, had worked hard on his role for the three-act skit given by the choir boys at Trinity Church, Broadway and Wall St. His stand-in, John Liebell, 11, read the part from small cards because he had never seen the script. But no one really noticed.

The production, written, directed and acted by the 20 choir members, was given in the parish hall after the 9 o'clock Family Eucharist on April 5. Dr. and Mrs. Reuben Gross, who teach the boys in Sunday School, introduced the cast.

Bruce Bainbridge, 14, portraying Jesus in the opening scene, "The Last Supper," followed the script to the letter as he poured fruit juice into paper cups for his classmates and "disciples" saying, "This is my blood, shed for you." In the next scene, "The Arrest of Jesus," another actor, Paul Freund, 11, wore Christ's turquoise cloak. In the third and final scene, "The Trial of Jesus," Pilate's soldiers wore silver or gold sequined helmets and striped tunics. The tunics were donned quickly over the boys' shirts and ties because they had to hurry back to church for the 11 o'clock service as soon as the skit was over. Joe Calquhon, 13, and Albert Williams, 16, were the directors.

184th Convention Opposes Bible Reading in

At its 184th Convention on May 12, the diocese took a stand against any constitutional amendment permitting voluntary prayers and Bible reading in the public schools.

This opposition was registered by defeating a resolution from the floor which asked the Convention to support "a Constitutional amendment to restore the right of voluntary prayer and Bible reading to the public schools."

The action was one of many taken during the course of the convention which was attended by 1,100 clerical and lay delegates in Synod Hall. The business included the Bishop's annual address, reports from various departments of the diocesan Council, election of members of diocesan boards and delegations, adoption of a budget, and discussion and action upon a number of social issues and canonical matters.

The day began with Holy Communion at 8:15 a.m. in the Cathedral, with the Bishop as celebrant. After breakfast in Synod House undercroft, the all-day legislative session convened shortly after 10.

One of the important items of business was the adoption of a single, unified budget of $1,733,642 for 1965, and the designation of the calendar year as the fiscal year. (Previously the diocese operated with four different fiscal years.)

The 1965 budget combines what used to be the Assessment Budget and the Council Budget. However, it was emphasized that the funds still will be raised partly by assessments and partly from parish quotas. In order to carry the diocese through the balance of the year, a budget of $231,222 was adopted for 1964.

15 Offer Proposal

The resolution on Bible reading and prayer in the public schools was offered by the Rev. Leland B. Henry, St. Mary's, Scarborough, on behalf of himself and 14 other clergymen. Also speaking in favor of the resolution were the Rev. Benjamin Minifie, Grace, Manhattan, and Clifford P. Morehouse, St. Luke's, Katonah. Their position was summarized by Mr. Morehouse, who said, "The sovereignity of God ending at the schoolhouse door is the beginning of the erosion of God from our whole national life. This is not the end of it. . . ."

Speaking in opposition were the Rev. Miller Cragon, diocesan Director of Christian Education; the Rev. Michael Allen, St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan; Judge Thurgood Marshall, St. Philip's, Manhattan; and the Rev. Edward O. Miller, St. George's, Manhattan. The points made were that we "cannot legislate God into a classroom," that parents and clergy should be doing the work "instead of asking teachers to do it," that there is no way of knowing who will compose these prayers and what they will be like, and that the concern might well be "the secularization of our religion" rather than the secularization of the schools.

Another resolution which was defeated after considerable discussion was one which would have given clergy who are not the rectors of independent parishes only one-half vote at the adoption of the annual diocesan budget. The resolution was presented by the Committee on Canons, which did not recommend its adoption, however, because it was felt that the effect would be to increase the strength of the lay vote and decrease the strength of the clerical vote.

NO CONVENTION HERE

This diocese will not invite General Convention to hold its 1970 meeting in New York City, Bishop Donegan announced at the Diocesan Convention. A committee was appointed last year to consider extending this invitation. But this committee "was unanimous in its opinion that at this time it would be impractical to issue an invitation," the Bishop said.

Speaking in favor of the change were the Rev. G. Clayton Melling, St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck; the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, St. Thomas, Manhattan; and Chaplain Cornelius P. Trowbridge, St. Luke's Hospital. Mr. Melling said he did not consider the "wariness about the decrease or increase in lay votes well taken." He explained that the resolution was actually directed at the clerical vote. Study had shown "to our utter dismay" that the number of clerical votes representing parishes that have to raise the money each year is approximately equal to the clerical votes that do not represent any such responsibility.

Second-class Clergy

Opposed were the Rev. John M. Mulligan, Director of the Seamen's Church Institute; the Rev. Charles H. Graf, St. John's-in-the-Village; the Rev. John Heuss, Trinity Parish; and the Rev. Dudley DeC. Cobham, St. Clement's, Mt. Vernon. Dr. Heuss said he believed the resolution would "create a second-class type of clergy, and violate every canon of the democratic process for which the diocese stands." He pointed out that a large part of the budget "does not come out of the pockets of the laity, but out of endowments of large churches."

Father Cobham declared that every priest "is responsible for souls," and that while a missionary priest may not raise a large budget, "he is still responsible for souls, and when we bring these souls to Christ, that's the budget."

The Bishop giving his annual address.

Inside Synod Hall there is hardly a vacant seat as delegates hear the Bishop's address.

The Bishop himself spoke against a proposal to consider holding a two-day rather than a one-day convention. He pointed out that before World War II, the diocese did hold two-day conventions, and "there are many difficulties," such as the expense to delegates, accommodations, and the ever-present problem of maintaining a quorum. "I am in favor of anything that will bring this great, sprawling family together in a more cohesive way, but I do not think this will be practical," the Bishop said. The proposal was defeated.

The Rev. Irving Anthony of St. Andrew's, Manhattan, offered a resolution calling for more qualified Negro and Puerto Rican supervisory personnel in the schools, and in addition, to appoint at least one Negro supervisor in all-white or predominantly white schools "if and when such positions are available."

Fr. Anthony particularly stressed the lack of Negro and Puerto Rican supervisors in schools attended by large numbers of children of these ethnic groups, and decried the fact that "the students do not see any image of their own people in the supervisory personnel."

The action taken was on a substitute motion presented by the Rev. Michael Allen of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie. It noted that the city schools "suffer from de facto segregation which denies to all children, Negro, white and Puerto Rican, the educational advantages of integrated classrooms," that they "suffer from poor quality and low educational standards," and that "a severe racial imbalance in the administrative and supervisory staffs" is to be recognized.

The resolution declared the Convention's support of the "aims and goals of the responsible civil rights groups in this city in their struggle for quality integrated education as it applies to both children and administrative staff," as well as "the use of non-violent, responsibly-led demonstrations to further these goals." Copies of the resolution went to the Mayor and the President of the Board of Education.

The narcotics resolution (see box, page 4), as finally adopted, carried an amendment proposed by Fr. Cobham of Mount Vernon. This amendment provides that the Bishop will appoint a committee or commission responsible to the Department of Christian Social Relations, and that by next convention it will provide names, addresses and phone numbers of people whom the clergy can contact for referral purposes in dealing with the narcotics problem. ■

PASSED

Amendment to Constitution to permit election of a controller. Effective immediately.

Amendments to Canons 10 and 12 designed to expedite the balloting procedure in elections which do not involve the choice of a bishop. Effective immediately.

Amendments to Canons 6, 13 and 17, dealing with administrative reorganization. These do the following: Spell out the new obligations and duties of the Treasurer, give the Administrative Assistant and the Controller membership on the Council and in the Department of Missions, and specify the duties of the Controller and assign him administratively; eliminate the Department of Finance of the Council and divide the present Department of Promotion into two new departments—Information and Development, and Stewardship; simplify budgeting procedures; set up the calendar year as the fiscal year, thus making possible one budget instead of two (although it will still be raised partly by assessments and partly from giving.)

Resolution amending Canon 13, increasing the number of mandatory meetings of the Council from three to five, and including in the Canon a provision for an executive committee and defining its powers. This change became effective immediately.

Resolution calling upon the state legislature to raise State aid formula ceiling to at least the statewide average expenditure per child, and calling upon clergy and laity of the diocese to "recognize and accept the need" for increased state taxation if these urgent educational needs are to be met.

Proposed canonical change and amendment of the Rules of Order stating that women are eligible for membership on committees, commissions or other offices for which men are eligible, unless the body involved specifically prohibits such membership. (It will take another affirmative vote in 1965 to make this effective.)

Resolution requesting the Bishop to appoint a committee to study ways of achieving the most effective participation of this diocese in the legislative activity of the New York State Council of Churches. The committee will report at the 1965 Convention.

Resolution to record the fact that the Convention supports the Federal Civil Rights bill and urges its passage.

Resolution putting the Convention on record in support of "quality integrated education as it applies to both children and administrative staff."

Resolution providing that the names of clergy entitled to vote at Convention be sent out ten days before Convention convenes.

Resolution requesting the Bishop to appoint a commission to survey funeral practices prevailing within the diocese. The commission will report at the 1965 Convention.

Resolution asking General Convention to create a Joint Commission on Church-State Relations, and that "some or all" of the members of the National Council's Commission on Church-State Relations be included on this body so as to make their "work and experience. . .available." The resolution was proposed in the light of "continuing public debate over issues in Church-State relations, especially those involved in Federal aid to sectarian schools. . ." and "issues of religion in public education."

Resolution asking the House of Deputies of General Convention to change its rules, canons and by-laws to permit women to serve as members of the House.

Resolution putting Convention on record in support of national, state or local legislation calling for "humane treatment of narcotics addicts. . .as a person needing rehabilitation rather than as a criminal needing punishment." The resolution also supports strong court and legislative action against the narcotics racketeer, calls upon the people of the diocese to support agencies conducting effective rehabilitation programs, and asks the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations to keep the diocese informed "in regard to this grave sickness in our society."

Resolution asking General Convention to approve a budgetary request for staff in National Council's Department of Christian Social Relations, to work with chaplains across the country.

DEFEATED

Proposal to adopt the budget by a majority vote of all delegates without regard to orders, the delegates from missions and aided parishes to have one-half vote, and delegates from independent parishes to have one full vote apiece.

Resolution urging adoption of a constitutional amendment restoring voluntary Bible reading in the public schools.

Proposal to form a committee to study changes in convention procedure, particularly the possibility of holding a two-day convention.

Resolution stating that parishes may be given grants-in-aid by the Department of Missions without loss of their parish status. (The Committee on Diocesan Finances pointed out that grants of this kind are not prohibited now.)

Bishop Calls for Action in Three Areas

Bishop Donegan emphasized three main points in his annual address at diocesan convention: civil rights, "mutual responsibility," and the financial needs of the diocese.

On the question of civil rights, the Bishop went on record in support of the Church's active involvement in civil rights, although he took issue against demonstrations (such as the "stall-in") which endanger passersby; and he announced that he would appoint an Advisory Commission to the Bishop on Church and Race.

He read substantial portions of the document entitled "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ," which was a product of the Anglican Congress meeting last summer in Toronto. He said he believes that General Convention will endorse many of the proposals made in the document. After that, he said, he will appoint a diocesan committee to study "Mutual Responsibility" and recommend how this diocese can participate in the program envisioned.

In the area of diocesan finances, the Bishop evaluated the diocese's missionary program in the light of past accomplishments and future needs.

Six years ago, "after a very careful study," the diocese held the 175th Anniversary Fund campaign "to provide money for the replacement and expansion of existing urban facilities, new urban work, urban programs, and for suburban projects," the Bishop explained.

Without assigning quotas, $2,371,000 was raised, he said. $1,072,100 was spent for the replacement and expansion of existing urban facilities, $544,500 for new urban work, $75,000 for urban programs, and $679,500 for suburban projects. The Bishop continued:

"I bring to your attention the fact that the fund is now depleted. If we are to evaluate our present situation realistically, it is equally important that we view the 175th Anniversary Fund in its proper perspective. First, the Fund was primarily an emergency measure taken to meet pressing current and anticipated requirements. Second, major fund-raising campaigns are inherently unpredictable sources of income on which to base long-range financial plans to meet future needs.

"At this point I think it is important that you comprehend the magnitude of these requirements to which I refer. In this regard, I would remind you that the diocese, through its Board of Managers, controls approximately 90 buildings, including churches, parish houses and rectories. Exclusive of land, the valuation of this property totals over $10 million. According to established property management standards, two per cent of total building valuation is considered the absolute minimum amount necessary for the maintenance and upkeep of simple commercial structures.

"Because of their greater age and complex architectural design, church buildings necessarily require a much higher percentage of total valuation for maintenance. Estimating our annual maintenance on the basis of even an austere five per cent, we find that we should allocate $500,000 for this purpose. As over against this, we have been able only to include $50,000 in the budget for the maintenance of diocesan properties.

"You will realize from this that we confront a serious situation. We must determine whether we will continue to maintain and expand our ministry through a determined effort to obtain the required financial support for programs and maintenance, or whether we must drastically curtail our efforts, in order to live within our current resources.

"We have or can find the resources necessary, but only as we really apply ourselves to the task. Our first step should be to implement our new Department of Information and Development. Then, with the cooperation of the Ways and Means Committee, we can develop and foster new and imaginative plans for raising funds through other than the usual channels."

The Bishop prefaced his announcement of the Advisory Commission on Church and Race with a number of observations about the struggle for human rights. He said, in part:

". . . I am disturbed by this form of demonstration (stall-ins), as I know you must be. It is an unfortunate and irresponsible strategy, not because it might inconvenience us, but because it threatens indiscriminate harm to uninvolved and innocent people. . .

"If I am disturbed by the 'stall-in' tactic, however, I am equally disturbed by some of the reactions to it. For one thing, people are using the fact of this type of demon-

DEPARTMENTS REVIEW YEAR'S WORK

One of the most important items on Convention agenda is a report from the Council of the Diocese and each of its departments. Here are excerpts from these reports:

THE COUNCIL

Bishop Boynton, Secretary of the Council, summarized the year's meetings and decisions. In June, he said, the Council expanded its Executive Committee to include 11 members. It also directed the Committee to meet every month except July, August and September. At the October Council meeting at the Conference Center, departments and affiliated agencies presented detailed reports and the Bishop introduced his newly appointed Administrative Assistant, Edmund J. Beazley.

In February, the Council adjusted its 1964 budget to anticipated income, reducing it from $643,439 to $549,915. It was noted, however, that total giving by parishes and missions in 1963 amounted to a record total of $1,044,347, and that commitments for 1964 are $1,097,820. "The Council is again grateful to the 117 congregations which in 1963 met or exceeded quota, thus making this new record possible, and urges once again the 82 congregations which did not meet quota, and the three congregations which paid nothing on quota, to make renewed efforts to meet their responsibilities in full," Bishop Boynton said. He reported that in 1963 the diocese contributed $574,390 or 55% of its total receipts to National Council; in 1964 it will contribute $592,823, or 54%.

In February, also, the Council approved a 1965 Council budget (preliminary to consideration by Convention.) The departments and affiliated agencies had filed requests totaling $687,818. Although "there was no question . . . that this total was adequately accounted for and entirely justified," it was reduced to $643,-439, "out of respect for the feeling on the part of an increasing number of those parishes which contribute the largest percentage of monies for the Program of the Church that the quotas are as high as present giving patterns permit."

Bishop Boynton also included a report from Bishop Wetmore, chairman of the Episcopal Church World's Fair Committee. With the cooperation of the National Council, the dioceses of Long Island, South Florida, New York, Connecticut and Newark, and the discretionary funds of several bishops, the Episcopal display was erected in the Protestant Orthodox Center. The report noted that so far the display is being visited by about 7,000 people a week.

MISSIONS

Presented by Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy. Describing the challenges to this department in the light of today's great social changes, he declared that more adequate funds are necessary to answer these challenges.

In the 1965 "asking budget" of $398,171 "just $50,000 was allocated for repairs and maintenance of 90 properties." This sum is not a realistic amount "for essential upkeep, let alone for situations where trouble is," the Archdeacon said. "We are literally being forced into a static situation in a dynamic culture. . . We are perhaps not even holding the line when we ought to be moving out in new directions."

During the past year, he added, the following events occurred:

- New church building and vicarage at Church of the Resurrection, Hopewell Junction.
- New church building and parish hall at St. Anne's, Washingtonville.
- New rectory at St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley.
- Additions to parish house, St. James, Dover Plains.
- After a thorough study, decision to close St. Agnes Mission, Balmville.
- New church, All Saints, S.I., ready to begin construction.
- Stewardship campaign under way at Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, to provide funds towards construction of church and classroom facilities.
- Vicarage purchased for St. David's, Bronx. (This is the first time in its 60-year history that its priest has lived near the church.)
- Extensive repairs to parish house, St. Peter's, Chelsea.
- Chapel of the Incarnation, Manhattan, became a mission of the diocese and was renamed Church of the Good Shepherd.
- Community Center purchased for St. Mary's, Manhattanville.
- Structural changes planned for St. Clement's, Manhattan, to promote its ministry to the arts.
- Expanded work planned for St. Ann's Mission to the Deaf, in cooperation with National Council, the Church Army, the dioceses of Long Island and Newark, and with the help of the Rev. Eric Whiting of St. Ann's, and the Rev. Howard B. Hamilton, Rector, All Angels, Manhattan.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Presented by the Rev. Raymond Cunningham, substituting for the Rev. H. August Kuehl, department chairman, who left this diocese prior to Convention. The report described the work of the department's six divisions — Children's Work, Youth Work, Boarding and Day Schools, College Work, the Adult Division, and Leadership Training Division. For the past few years, Mr. Cunningham said, there has been a strong emphasis on youth work, particularly in the area of summer youth conferences. "There is no doubt in our minds that the young people who attend . . . get at least the equivalent of a whole year's parish program of Christian Education in five days," he said.

There has also been "a far more serious attempt to meet the challenges of secularism in the area of college work," the report indicated. And, in the areas of adult work and leadership training, the department "has been faced with the stumbling block that it is difficult to get people . . . to attend conferences a day or more in length. Yet this is an essential part of the method of speaking in depth with adults."

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL RELATIONS

Presented by the Rev. J. Norman Hall, department chairman. He reported "considerable change" in the department since last Convention, partly due to staff changes, but "much stems from a conscious reassessment of our role and function in the face of present challenges. That process of reassessment is not complete, and there are many unanswered questions, but certain new directions or emphases have begun to emerge," he said. The major emphasis at present is on social action and social education, largely on the racial front, Mr. Hall continued. But other social concerns on which the department is or has been working include housing, education, automation, poverty and juvenile delinquency. Equally important areas "in which the department has a historical stake" are the abolition of capital punishment, alcoholic rehabilitation and alcohol education, narcotics addiction, world relief and refugee aid, and public policy with regard to social welfare. An expanded Committee on Alcoholism has been formed with the Rev. Samuel Bird of Hopewell Junction as chairman.

In the area of social service, Mr. Hall said the needs and challenges have increased to the point where one staff person is not sufficient. But the question of how to handle social service, with respect to the needs of the diocese and church-related institutions, has not been answered, he added. He also said that the position of Director of Services to the Aged has not been abandoned, but the question of where this service might best be lodged also is being studied.

PROMOTION

Presented by the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, department chairman. He said the Department is "completely convinced of the wisdom and necessity of bringing into legal effect the recommendations of the management consultants, whereby the Department of Stewardship is separated from the Department of Promotion, and the function of Promotion is expanded to include development and information. We see no other way by which the future extraordinary needs of this diocese can be materially extended, and therefore the mission spiritually deepened. . . ."

Stewardship: This division has conducted 10 stewardship missions, involving more than 7,000 persons, since last Convention, Fr. Lang reported. Nine more will be conducted during 1964. Laymen from 22 congregations attended stewardship seminars last September. Special conferences with clergy, vestry committees or entire congregations were held at 27 parishes. The director has given several courses and seminars, and will teach at the Finger Lakes Conference this summer.

Promotion: This division has provided information to news media and the general public. Its speakers' bureau now has 53 speakers available. A clergy newsletter has been published since last October. A clergy handbook is being prepared. Concerning the diocesan magazine, The Bulletin, Fr. Lang said: "Thus far we have been unable to discover any way of printing, editing and distributing it to the supporting members of the Diocese, as directed by this Convention, for less than $39,010, or $1 per person per year."

FINANCE

Presented by Charles F. Bound, chairman of the new Ways and Means Committee of the Council. He reported that the former Department of Finance is being discontinued pursuant to recommendations of the management consultants. Two new committees are being formed, the Ways and Means Committee of the Council, and the Development Committee of the Department of Information and Development. Their duties, he said, are as follows:

Lunch time finds Manhattan rectors, the Rev. Clifford S. Lauder, All Souls, and the Rev. M. Moran Weston of St. Philip's, deep in conversation.

The Rev. Miller M. Cragon, diocesan Director of Christian Education, at right, goes over a few points with, from the left, the Rev. John G. Mills, Rector, St. Mary's, Cold Spring; the Rev. William J. Potter, Assistant Minister, Intercession Chapel, Trinity, Manhattan; the Rev. Jonathan L. King, Rector of St. John the Divine, and priest-in-charge, St. St Paul's, Eastchester, Mount Vernon.

Ways and Means: Be responsible for the financial affairs of the Council, including recommendation of financial objectives and policies, development of budgetary policies and practices, review and analysis of proposed annual operating and capital budgets, development of sources of income (in addition to that from parishes) to support the diocesan program, review and approval of monthly financial statements of the Council and departments, and the continuing review of the Council's financial position to insure a sound fiscal position.

Development Committee: Develop and implement plans and programs for raising capital and operating funds to support the work of the diocese, and disseminate information regarding the diocese and the national church so that both church people and the general public may be aware of the Church's services, accomplishments, problems, objectives and financial needs. ■

23 Elected to Diocesan Council, Boards and Delegations

Four men were elected to the Council of the Diocese and two to the Standing Committee at the Diocesan Convention on May 12. The Convention also elected provisional deputies to the Provincial Synod, and nominated three to the Cathedral Board of Trustees.

Those elected were:

To the Council (an executive committee of the Convention that exercises its powers between conventions and directs the work of the diocesan departments.)

The Rev. Raymond Cunningham, Jr., Rector of Grace Church, Millbrook; the Rev. Richard E. Gary, Priest-in-Charge, St. Mary's, Manhattanville; Charles F. Bound, banker, St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco; and Dr. Norman H. Pritchard, physician, All Souls, Manhattan.

Standing Committee (a council of advice to the Bishop)

The Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral, and Judge Thurgood Marshall, St. Philip's, Manhattan.

Provisional Deputies to General Convention (These are alternates. The Convention, the legislative body of the national Church, meets in St. Louis in October. Deputies were elected last year.)

The Rev. John A. Bell, Rector, Incarnation, Manhattan; the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, Vicar, Intercession Chapel, Trinity Parish; the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector, St. Philip's, Manhattan; the Rev. R. Rhys Williams, Rector, Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; Brooke Alexander, editor, Heavenly Rest, Manhattan; Paul B. Anderson, theological consultant, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains; Leland S. Brown, banker, St. Matthew's, Bedford; and Linden H. Morehouse, publisher and merchant, St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck.

Deputies to Provincial Synod (the legislative body of the Province, which is made up of 14 dioceses and missionary districts.)

Class of 1967, the Rev. Osborne Budd, Rector, St. John's, Tuckahoe; the Rev. William E. Ridgeway, Rector, St. George's, Newburgh; John L. O'Brien, Jr., architect, Grace, White Plains; and Frederick J. Woodbridge, architect, St. Ignatius, Manhattan. Class of 1965, the Rev. Howard O. Bingley, Rector, St. John's, Staten Island.

Provisional Deputies to Provincial Synod

Class of 1965, George A. Casscells, engineer, Zion, Wappingers Falls.

Trustees of the Cathedral

The Rev. George F. Brätt, Rector, Christ Church, Tarrytown; George W. Burpee, engineer, Christ Church, Bronxville; and Frederick E. Hasler, banker, Trinity, Manhattan. ■

Katonah Department Admits Negro Fireman

A Negro has been admitted to the Katonah Volunteer Fire Department, climaxing a campaign set in motion a year ago by a sermon by the Rev. Richard J. Bowman. Father Bowman is Rector of St. Luke's and Chaplain of the Fire Department.

His sermon denounced the fire department's blackballing of another Negro, James Jones, a communicant of St. Luke's.

The successful applicant is Ernest Fisher, a lifelong resident of Katonah who works in the Post Office. Mr. Jones and another Negro who was rejected are now expected to reapply.

Commenting on Mr. Fisher's admission, Father Bowman praised the department's new president, Lloyd Becker, "a courageous and committed Christian."

Father Bowman and other local clergymen also led efforts to bar discrimination in barber shops in Katonah and Bedford Hills. All barbers but one were persuaded to begin cutting Negroes' hair. In this one shop, in Bedford Hills, a Negro could get his hair cut, but for the "hard-to-cut" price of $4.50. The State Commission on Human Rights persuaded the shop to eliminate this special price for Negroes. ■

COLONIAL VILLAGE AT SOUTHOLD

Southold, founded in 1640, is located at the eastern end of Long Island, 90 miles from New York City. Unspoiled by the hustle of modern living, it has preserved its Colonial tradition and has long been ranked as one of the preferred retirement areas on the Eastern seaboard.

There is now planned a new Colonial Village located on six acres of land in the heart of this charming town within easy walking distance of shops, transportation, etc. which will be built in a Colonial setting (with even a "Commons") as garden apartments for those who are Senior Citizens and who wish to be relieved of the responsibility and worry of house ownership.

Under the recently enacted Condominium Law of New York, family units in this development will be sold outright (bank mortgage financing probably can be arranged for you if desired) and, in the best Colonial Tradition, there will be community maintenance of common areas and facilities, the actual cost of which will be apportioned among residents by your own elected Board of Managers.

If you wish to register your interest in becoming a member of such a Community, which (we think) combines the best of the Old and the New, please write (without obligation) to stration to discredit the entire civil rights movement, and this is manifestly unfair. . . The action of a few zealots cannot . . . be allowed to detract from the rightness of a cause or the integrity of its leaders.

"People are also choosing, in the face of this type of protest, to forget or ignore the very legitimate grievances that have inspired it. And this is as unwise as it is unjust. The simple truth is that civil rights progress since the orderly, non-violent demonstrations of last summer has been slow. The grievances voiced by those who would 'stall-in' are real, and they are felt with equal fervor by hundreds of thousands in this city who would take no part in such a form of protest. . .

"It is precisely because those gentler, legal approaches seemed to fail that many have turned to more radical tactics; we might yet win them back to a more moderate way by making our approaches produce results.

Role of the Church

"This leads logically to the role of the Church in this diocese at this time . . . and I am bound to say, first of all, that this role cannot be as circumspect as some would like to see it. Our Lord was not always circumspect when he walked among us. He came to save us in the world to come, but he also drove the money-changers from the Temple. . ."

The Bishop called for public witnesses, a "compassionate demonstration of concern for those who suffer injustice," and he recommended to all his listeners the statement on "The Church and the Racial Crisis" adopted by the Bishop and Chapter of the Diocese of Southern Ohio last October. (Copies can be obtained from the Department of Christian Social Relations.)

But public witness is not the Church's only role, the Bishop continued. "We have a responsibility to combat rumors, misinformation, and misinterpretation of events, and to counteract any distortion of the intention and programs of our Church in this sensitive matter. . . ."

The Bishop commented on the fact sheet prepared by the Department of Christian Social Relations at the time of the first school boycott, and said, "There will be more such fact sheets, I assure you. I believe firmly that through such interpretation, the Church can do much to allay unnecessary fears and to guide constructive thinking on vital issues." As summer approaches, the Bishop said, "there may be an acute need for briefing sessions for our clergy and perhaps lay readers in various parts of the diocese." He said he is asking the Department of Christian Social Relations to explore the potential interest in such meetings and to arrange them if the demand warrants.

The "Mutual Responsibility" document is "a communication, a manifesto, a summons, a challenge, a proposal from the primates and metropolitans of the Anglican Communion . . ." the Bishop explained. He said it proclaims as the keynotes of our time, "equality, interdependence, mutual responsibility," and it asserts that "if we are to find the new forms of unity and obedience we must at once, together," meet certain necessities.

These necessities would include "a comprehensive study of needs and resources" throughout the Anglican Communion. But since this long-range study would take considerable time, the document asks "each Church to join now in an immediate commitment to increased financial support, amounting to at least $15 million dollars in the next five years, over and above our existing budgets and engagements, to meet already-known needs. This should not be understood as a once-in-a-lifetime appeal. It is no more than a first step forward, without reference to the longer-range needs."

The Bishop said the document describes those needs as (1) training of clerical and lay leadership; (2) construction of churches and other buildings in new areas; and (3) "a beginning on the great needs of new provinces, if they are to be rescued from the humiliation of beggary and given the means to make their freedom real. . . ."

Asks for Manpower

He said the document also asks commitments of manpower, an examination of priorities, the evaluation of activities "by the test of mission and service to others," and the swift development of channels of communication with other Churches of the Anglican Communion.

In conclusion, the Bishop quoted Bishop Bayne, who said: "If we are content to stay as we are, our churches will become elegant mausoleums. But if we are intent to try to live out what full communion and equal brotherhood in Christ mean, I do not doubt but that we shall discover all we need to know—all we can hold, probably, of the truth about the One, Holy, Catholic Church."

The Bishop's address also contained some diocesan statistics and a brief resume of the year's administrative changes. Special tribute for his long years of service as Archdeacon was paid to the Rev. George Brätt, who is now Rector of Christ Church, Tarrytown. ■

Episcopal Laymen and visitors listen attentively to Bishop Robinson.

Be Like Salt and Yeast, Robinson Advises Laymen

"We must not think of the church and the world as being totally separate, that you are in either one or the other. Rather, we Christians should be like salt and yeast in the bread, active and effective and yet a part of the whole."

So said the Bishop of Woolwich, the Rt. Rev. John A. T. Robinson, when he addressed 420 persons at the annual conference of the Episcopal Laymen of New York. The conference, held at the Hotel Thayer, West Point, on Saturday, May 16, was originally for laymen only; but because of great demand, clergy and women were allowed to attend. About 40 priests of the diocese and 30 women were present.

Bishop Robinson, author of "Honest to God," gave two 45-minute addresses. The first was followed by small discussion groups, the second by questions from the floor.

The English bishop and scholar said, "It is significant that Christ communicated to us as a man. Men do not hear in our day because we have 'dehumanized' Christ. The only way to communicate with most people is through a humanist Christ and a secular Christ."

Mimeographed copies of Bishop Robinson's sermon may be had by writing Episcopal Laymen of New York, Synod House, New York, N.Y. 10025. Also, tape recordings of his two addresses are available to church groups by writing to the same address. ■

Two More Churches Come Into Incarnation Camp Association

The Board of Directors of Incarnation Church Camp announces that St. Bartholomew's Church and the Church of the Heavenly Rest have become members of the Association of Episcopal Church Camps in Manhattan.

This Association was formed in 1955 between Incarnation Church Camp and the camp formerly operated by All Angels, Manhattan. Since then, five others have joined the Association. They are the Girls' Friendly Society, (which operated Camp Sherwood), Grace Church (Grace Camp), St. James' Church (Camp Pequot), St. Thomas Church, and All Saints' Church, formerly St. Thomas Chapel.

Incarnation Camp was founded in 1929 by the Church of the Incarnation to serve 50 families of the Chapel of the Incarnation, now Church of the Good Shepherd. After World War II, it was decided that it would be wiser to develop one strong Episcopal camp in the diocese rather than maintain six smaller programs. The merger of the camps took place from 1955 to 1961. Last year 76 churches from every convocation in the diocese were represented at Incarnation Camp. It is located in Ivoryton, Conn., on a 600-acre campsite with a mile-long private lake. ■

General Convention to Pick PB

The election of a new Presiding Bishop will be the top item on the agenda at General Convention when that body meets in St. Louis, Mo., from October 11-23. Holding its sessions simultaneously will be the Triennial Meeting of the Episcopal Churchwomen. Official representatives from this diocese will be attending both of these national church meetings.

Both General Convention and the ECW Triennial meet every three years. General Convention is the national legislative body of the Church. It consists of two chambers, the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies. The former consists of all living bishops of the Church, including those in overseas missionary districts. The House of Deputies is composed of four clerical and four lay deputies from each diocese, and one clerical and one lay deputy from each missionary district, and from the American Churches in Europe. Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse of New York is President of the House of Deputies.

The Triennial is the national legislative session of the ECW. It will run from October 11-20 so that the women can visit General Convention sessions during the last three days. The two groups will hold joint sessions, and the women may attend services and visit open meetings of General Convention, but they may not serve as official delegates. A proposal to change this rule is on the calendar of business this year, however.

One of the numerous business items at General Convention will be to elect nine new members of the National Council, the body which functions as the Church's governing agency, administering policy, program and budget during the three years between conventions.

The eight official delegates to Convention from this diocese are the Very Rev. John V. Butler, the Rev. Messrs. John Heuss, John M. Krumm, and Powel M. Dawley; Judge Thurgood Marshall, Clifford P. Morehouse, Andrew Oliver and Charles F. Bound.

Provisional deputies, who will substitute if an official delegate is unable to attend, are the Rev. Messrs. John A. Bell, Leslie J.A. Lang, M. Moran Weston, and R. Rhys Williams; Brooke Alexander, Paul B. Anderson, Leland S. Brown and Linden H. Morehouse.

ECW delegates to the Triennial are Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., Mrs. Ralph F. Stott, Mrs. Landes Lewitin, Mrs. William L. Gardner and Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherford. Alternates are Mrs. Howard W. Weale, Mrs. Robert De F. Boomer, Mrs. Rutherford Platt and Mrs. Harold M. Lindstedt. ■

Two East Side Parishes Start Medical Chaplaincy

A new aspect of the Church's inner-city mission has been tackled by two cooperating Manhattan parishes.

For years Church of the Epiphany, York Avenue and 74th Street, ministered to the growing number of patients in the large hospitals concentrated in Manhattan's upper East Side. With churches of other denominations, it participated in a joint chaplaincy program.

But recently it became apparent that a ministry also was needed to serve more than 1,000 students and graduate students in these hospitals, schools of medicine and nursing, and the Rockefeller Research Institute. Epiphany, because of its location, had become the parish home of many doctors and students. But many more were not being reached.

This year St. James' Church, on Madison Avenue, some nine blocks from Epiphany, offered to underwrite the salary and expenses of a student chaplain to serve the many medical schools on the East Side. Epiphany accepted the offer to use this chaplain, and the Rev. John Fletcher, former rector of the R. E. Lee Memorial Church, Lexington, Va., has been appointed the new chaplain on the "medical campus." The program is on a three-year experimental basis. Funds will come from the proceeds of St. James' annual Spring Festival, and administration will come from Epiphany. ■

Bishop Pays Tribute to 2 Priests

In his address at Diocesan Convention, Bishop Donegan paid tribute to two clergymen who over a period of years have made valuable contributions to the success of the summer youth conferences. They are the Rev. Howard Bingley, Rector of St. John's, Staten Island, and the Rev. David Arnold, Rector of St. John's, New City.

"The summer conferences are among the most useful of our attempts to reach the youth of the diocese, and they have developed into their present strength through the efforts of these two men," the Bishop said. ■

On Race Relations

Where Do We Stand--

by Ruth Weber

I have spent the past month talking to people in the Church about race. I have buttonholed bishops, diocesan officials, white "liberals," Negroes in Harlem, white suburbanites, clergy of both races and just plain churchgoers wherever I could find them. I have asked direct and sometimes embarrassing questions:

How much segregation is there in this diocese? How many churches are desegregated and how many are really "integrated?" Do people know many of their neighbors of another race? Do they understand them? Hate them? Fear them? What do Negro people want, and what do white people want? Has the Church, that is, have its spokesmen failed to take "real leadership?" If the answer is yes, who says yes and why do they say so? Malcolm X, the Muslim leader, has mockingly declared that Negroes are "leaving the churches." Are they leaving the Episcopal Church? Has anything at all happened in this diocese that could be described as "progress?" What about the future?

After more than 20 formal interviews and many coffee counter conversations, informal telephone calls, chance meetings and a little eavesdropping, some of the answers have begun to emerge. Don't consider them entirely definitive. But they may give you some idea of what people are saying.

How much segregation is there?

Diocesan officials estimate that 85 per cent of the 210 congregations in this diocese are uni-racial—"segregated" for all practical purposes.

Segregation in the Church seems to be like a two-sided coin which is black on one side mixed with a little white, and white on the other side mixed with a little black. Most "white" congregations contain a few Negroes, but still quite often, none at all. Many "Negro" congregations contain a few white members, but perhaps more often, none at all.

A number of people emphasized that white people do not seek membership in Negro Churches. In one Harlem parish, there is an attractive young woman who enrolled her child in Sunday School and told the rector that she and her husband had chosen his church because it was their neighborhood parish. But this is rather rare. Negroes say they will welcome whites, but they also say that their own exclusion from white churches has been the dominant pattern up to now. The experience some years ago of one Negro family which was given precise directions for finding a Negro mission where "we think you'll be more comfortable," has apparently become an often-quoted anecdote within the Negro community.

Segregation, then, 85 per cent. Desegregation, the other 15 per cent.

Know Your Neighbor?

Under these circumstances, is it possible for people to know many of their neighbors of another race? You hear all kinds of remarks. In white churches more than 50 miles from Diocesan House, it was often "Integration? We just don't have that problem!" Closer to the city, the comment was sometimes, "Why, there are some very nice Negroes in our congregation." One Negro said, "Yes, I feel at home in the church I attend." But do people know their fellow parishioners?

The fact is that where churches become desegregated, it is not usually the conscious decision of anybody to do so, but chiefly the result of changing housing patterns. And the pattern changes again when all of the white people move away. Negroes with whom I spoke felt that the crux of the whole thing has been that white people haven't wanted to know Negroes. One prominent layman declared, "It's a white problem. The white community is responsible for the present situation; they created it, they are perpetuating it, and theirs is the responsibility for rectifying it."

As I made my rounds asking questions, I found varied reactions among white people. I met a few who want nothing to do with "civil rights." One couple had just sold their home "in what used to be a nice, residential neighborhood," but "the colored were moving in; we had to take a terrible loss." It didn't help to be told that economic decline doesn't necessarily follow ethnic changes in a neighborhood. They felt that they didn't want to live in a changing neighborhood, and they were bitter that they had lost money. Other people said, "Well, I know it's the Christian attitude, and these folk deserve every opportunity, but. . . ." But—"we don't want to lose what we've worked for all our lives, an investment, a job, a business." Many white Episcopalians, I was told, who have worked hard for material things, feel that they have a great deal to lose if the civil rights struggle succeeds. They feel threatened economically, and some admit freely that they feel threatened by the prospect of intermarriage. They are afraid. Many churchgoers are intellectually convinced that integration is necessary, and that it is a good thing; but there is a tremendous gap between conviction and action, between Sunday's prayers and resolutions and Monday's lack of achievement. This gap explains what the Rev. Arthur E. Walmsley, Executive Secretary of National Council's Division of Christian Citizenship, calls "the getting-off place." Some white people will accept integration to one point, some to another. But somewhere along the line, most of them get off. What they want can best be described in the negative: They don't want to lose what they have worked hard to acquire. In this diocese, many white people are scared stiff that they will.

Can't Protest Integration

Still, most of the white people with whom I spoke were not so outspoken as the couple who said they lost money on their house. And a sociologist who is on the staff of Brooklyn College told me this is increasingly true. "It isn't respectable to protest integration any more," he said.

On the other side of the barrier, Negroes live with unbelievable frustrations and humiliations. People told me stories like these:

A man grew up in a New England town and was able to go to an Ivy League college. But after he had his degree, he had to settle for a second-rate job because wherever he went he was told, "We're not hiring any colored." This was not in the South. It was in New England!

There was a "lucky" boy whose parents lived in a predominantly white neighborhood and sent him to a "good" school. Like most pre-adolescents, he developed a crush on a cute little girl who after a while told him, "I don't think I'll marry you when I grow up; I'll marry Johnny and you can be our chauffeur."

Some people told me that they, as Negroes, had "learned to play a game when dealing with white people." They had learned to adopt a humble role, to appear to be satisfied with what they have. They went along with the caricature of a laughing-and-singing character, one with no great aspirations. It seemed safer that way. But the Negro isn't going to play that role any longer. "He's not going to pretend he's inferior to someone who may well be his obvious inferior," said one man. "I have no intention of telling white folks what they would like to hear," said another. "I am not non-violent. I am willing to fight and die to see that these prejudices are removed from my children's lives. I pray that it will not get out of hand, but violence often does. We're caught up into something not of our own making, and we're all going to suffer before the necessary changes come about."

Sometimes when white people think they're being friendly they provoke resentment. A Harlem rector said, "White people make me angry when they're so surprised that a Negro is intelligent and literate. They annoy me when they're over-solicitous." He described an occasion when as part of a group he sat back and listened for a moment. "There wasn't any reason for me to be saying anything at that time, but one man made an obvious effort to draw me back into the conversation. I could see the wheels going around in his head; I knew he was thinking, 'Come, now, we must make this poor Negro comfortable.' White people, especially church people, have a way of being unbearably paternalistic."

I met a few Negroes who felt that anger and militant demonstrations are not really the answer. "I have found myself in a number of places where Negroes ordinarily wouldn't expect to be because I had skills that people really needed," said one man. He said he had done a series of slides that were "simply terrific by anyone's estimation," and that when the word got around, he was invited to show them in several parts of the country. "I knew the invitations came because of what I could offer, not either because of or in spite of the fact that I was a Negro." He added, "Some people don't spend enough time thinking and improving themselves. They just listen to what a lot of noisy people say, and figure it will happen the easy way. Yes, it is difficult, often painful to be a Negro in our society. My wife was told not to bother to study to be a teacher. But she got her degree anyway, and she got a job and taught school. Maybe you don't accomplish things right away, but if you work hard, you get there." This was a minority view, but it was strongly held, and like all the others, expressed with forcefulness and eloquence.

What do the Negroes want? They want to be treated like people, that's all.

Real Leadership?

A number of people felt that the Church in this diocese has not given "real leadership" in civil rights. One man was quite bitter. "The Church is very famous for making beautiful statements," he said. "We don't get any guidance," said another. On the other hand, others said they believe Church leaders must make statements and continue to make them if the battle is to be won. For instance, they applauded Bishop Donegan's message to diocesan Convention on May 12. At that time he said, "It is the Church's business to involve itself. The Church cannot remain on the sidelines, silent and inactive when theological and moral issues are at stake. It is by means of public witness that the Church's teaching becomes clear."

But some people like the first man insisted that words plus deeds are needed.

"In other public institutions — government service, large businesses — there is a definite attempt to see that Negroes get more jobs and are freely welcomed," a Negro clergyman declared. "But the sad thing is that we have as much de facto segregation in the Church as anywhere else. We talk about it, but we don't do anything about it." He added, "There is an aroused public in society at large, and it is not made up solely of Negroes. But as yet the Church does not have an equally aroused public."

Many Negro clergy are offended at past slights and are pessimistic about future recognition. "A priest in Harlem is trapped," I was told. "Once you become a rector, there's nowhere else to go. I might never want to leave, but it's terrible to feel that I'll never have the opportunity." Another said, "The Church sometimes puts white priests in charge of 'Negro' congregations, but no 'white' parishes ever call Negro clergy." Others commented with equal fervor on the lack of extra-parochial opportunities for Negro clergy on the diocesan level, reflected as far up in church structure as National Council appointments. In New York, there are Negroes in the diocesan organization, that is, on the Council and on diocesan committees; but some of the Negro clergy point out that these are appointments by the Bishop or elective posts, while they are referring to paid, professional positions.

Last year, said a Harlem clergyman, one of the interesting sidelights of diocesan Convention was an Interim Report of a Committee on Clergy Placement. Some 127 parishes responded to a questionnaire prepared by this committee, and 87 predominantly white parishes indicated a willingness to employ a Negro clergyman in some capacity ranging from rector to seminarian. At the same time, only four predominantly white parishes or missions reported that they were then employing Negro clergymen or seminarians. "Paradoxically enough, the clergy appear to be one of the most segregated careers in our society . . ." the report declared. "Have we made any progress since last year?" this Harlem clergyman asked.

Several years ago, this poster was created as part of a publicity campaign for the Episcopal Church's Theological Education Sunday. "You may have noticed that there was not one Negro among this group of students," said several of the Negroes who were interviewed for this article. One said, "We forgive these things, but wonder among ourselves."

These, then, are some of the criticisms. Is it possible that Negro Episcopalians may be swayed by the hate tactics of people like Malcolm X?

A few people told me they think the black nationalists will win if more and more Negroes continue to be disillusioned with the Church. "Malcolm X knows where he is going," one man declared. "we have to know, too. He says, 'Lift up your head, man' and that's what the Negro needs to hear! Our patience is fast coming to an end." On the other hand, it was suggested (by a Negro clergyman) that the importance of Malcolm X has been blown up out of all proportion by newspapers and the broadcast media. There were also those who were not sure about Malcolm X's power. "Unorganized good cannot defeat organized evil," said a clergyman, "but violence never breeds anything but violence." There was also the viewpoint that Malcolm X is being heard by many sophisticated Negroes who would not be likely to follow him, but who find themselves aroused, perhaps reluctantly, by his charges.

The majority, however, took the position that Black

Muslim leaders like Malcolm X are neither speaking to nor being heard by Episcopalians. Malcolm X, they said, is addressing himself to the very poorest, hopeless and downtrodden; and the Episcopal Church really doesn't contain many of these people. Sociologists, they pointed out, have frequently identified the Episcopal Church with "middle class" attitudes and aspirations. This applies to Negroes as well as whites, these people said. They observed that a number of "middle class" Negroes "have it made," and are living comfortably. This fact would not lessen their interest in the cause of civil rights, but it would deter them from joining a militant separatist movement. Furthermore, many Negro Episcopalians in this diocese come from the West Indies, where there is little of the racial tension that exists in the United States. West Indians, I was told, are independent, self-reliant and proud; they would not be militant separatists.

For these reasons, most people who spoke to me did not anticipate a great membership defection.

Statistics show that so far they are correct. An analysis of membership figures over a five-year period shows that the number of communicants in predominantly Negro churches has increased. In the same period, membership for the diocese as a whole has declined.

These are some of the things that people are saying. Doubtless they were unspoken thoughts for a long time, but now they are words, and they come pouring out with the surge of a torrential flood. There's a great deal of frankness and a sense of realism. People within the Church are not ostriches. Many realize that the onward movement of integration raises some unspiritual dilemmas like the Church's need for financial support from some of the very people angered by integration. They ask, "How should the diocese react if people of substantial means who oppose integration reduce their missionary giving? What do you do about the tendency of some white people to transfer from churches becoming increasingly mixed? How do you deal with parishioners' reactions to intermarriage?" There is speculation about whether the Church, as a social institution in modern times, has an active role in social change — or whether social change pulls the Church along after it.

Questions like these and some of the possible answers were discussed at a series of clergy conferences on "The Church and Race" called by Bishop Donegan this winter. Four sessions for four different groups of clergy were held at the Conference Center in Tuxedo Park. All three bishops attended. John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., diocesan Director of Christian Social Relations, and the Rev. Arthur E. Walmsley of National Council, were the group chairmen and resource people. There was a great deal of small-group discussion about many bed-rock issues. At one point the clergymen discussed the possibility of a "Princeton plan" of integration within the Church similar to that proposed for school systems. At another, they remarked that parish structures often reflect residential segregation, and they asked: "Should this structure be altered?"

A number of recommendations emerged. A proposal for both large and small interparochial gatherings was one. Another was a suggestion that Church people work with real estate brokers in an effort to achieve residential integration. An interracial conference for clergy and laity at Tuxedo Park was suggested. There was a recommendation that the diocese, parishes and church-related institutions survey the employment policies of companies in which they hold stock, and that where employment policies tend to be discriminatory, that these agencies send representatives to stockholders' meetings and register protests. There was a request that selected clergy and laity be named to a special advisory commission on racial matters, to advise the Bishop and perhaps work directly with parish clergy.

Of immediate significance, as a direct result of the conferences, was a paper on the school boycott prepared by Mr. Lassoe at the direction of the Bishop.

And then, at diocesan Convention, the Bishop announced that the Advisory Commission to the Bishop on Church and Race would be formed.

Post-mortems on the conferences indicated that generally the clergy who attended felt that they had received new insights and that their perception of racial issues had been sharpened. However, some observers felt that they had "lost out" because no more than half a dozen Negroes attended.

On The Local Level

There has also been some activity at the community level this year. One example is the Rockland County Conference on Religion and Race.

The conference was an interdenominational effort in which the Rev. George Regas of Grace Church, Nyack, was strategically involved. The people of Grace Church had certainly been conscious of civil rights issues, but until about a year ago they had not come to the point of spelling out their own convictions. Last May, the Rev. Mr. Regas read the Presiding Bishop's now-famous statement on civil rights. "There were many for whom Bishop Lichtenberger's words meant a drastically changed ministry, and I was one," he says.

The spark that had settled on Mr. Regas spread to his congregation. During the summer, a group of parishioners began intensive talks. By the end of October, they had drawn up a strongly-worded, nine-point resolution for adoption by the vestry. It dealt with many factors, including equal rights in housing opportunities, wages and job opportunities, education, and religious life. It emphasized that Christian laymen should do their best to see that these aspirations are fulfilled. Seven months would pass before the vestry would approve a somewhat more softly worded version of this resolution, but the original statement became the basis for united community action.

At the request of its vestry, the group from Grace Church presented its resolution to the Nyack Clergy Association, an interdenominational organization of some 15 churches and synagogues. The Association adopted it, but that was only the first step. Many talks were held. Out of these grew the idea for a great community conference.

The conference was held on Thursday, April 23, in Lamplighters Hall, New City. Invitations were signed jointly by a Roman Catholic monsignor, a rabbi, a Presbyterian minister and Mr. Regas. The Rev. Petty D. McKinney, a Negro minister of a Nyack Methodist church, was the chairman. Keynote speaker was the Rev. Eugene S. Callander, minister of the Presbyterian Church of the Master, Manhattan, and Moderator of the Presbytery of New York. There were workshops in education, employment, housing and inter-group relations. Three hundred people, representing 50 congregations from all over Rockland County, worked from 3 to 11 p.m. Grace Church sent 17 delegates.

Rockland Has Only Started

Out of the conference came many recommendations, starting with the principle that before anything can be done, each congregation must reach a decision within its own family. By the end of this August, each participating church will vote on a statement of beliefs. United community effort was urged in the areas of housing and fair employment practices. (Directly after the conference, an employment agency was created to pair jobs with people.) Conference delegates suggested using the influence of churches and their members in banking and the construction industry to see that Negroes have equal opportunities. They proposed a series of planned social visits like those held in Chicago and Detroit, where Negroes and whites visit each others' homes for tea and conversation. Mr. Regas says, "In Rockland County, we have really only started."

Likewise, on the parish level there have been efforts to raise the level of understanding between Negro and white people during the past year. For instance, small groups of parishioners at St. David's in the Bronx and at Epiphany and Holy Trinity (88th Street) in Manhattan, held a series of "Conversations in Race." They sprang from a desire of the two Manhattan parishes to do something constructive after the historic March on Washington.

The Rev. David Wayne, then assistant minister at Epiphany, knew the Rev. John Wells at St. David's, which is a predominantly Negro church on East 160th Street near Melrose Avenue. Four or five people from each church attended the first meeting and decided that they would all commit themselves to a series of three monthly meetings. When these ended, those who had participated became the leaders of newly formed groups, and the project enlarged.

One of the white participants said she felt that after "the preliminary business of everybody being polite and shy," there was a tremendous feeling of excitement at discovering the community across the barrier. She said, "I think I'm beginning to see Negroes as individuals and not as one body of people all thinking and feeling the same way. None of us really realized the pain that many of the Negro people have felt, and it certainly has awakened a response in me. I had never realized that the white community was suffering as much and losing as much by not having this communication."

This realization that personal relationships are perhaps the key to opening doors between white and Negro people was a thread that ran through all of my own conversations with clergy and laity. Bishop Boynton said, "When you're dealing with people sincerely and honestly, you forget what color they are. You become color blind."

But white people who have taken the initiative in race relations sometimes say that Negroes are not interested. They ask: Why didn't more Negroes attend the clergy conferences? Why don't they participate in clergy organizations? Is it really because, as some of them say, they are too busy? Or because they feel unwanted? Because people "cold shoulder" them? A brilliant and eminent man who can see both sides of the question as much as anyone, said, "No one really knows the answer."

But, he warned, "I am concerned that the Church act fast enough and soon enough not just to counteract grievances, but also be in a position to open doors. I hope the Negro people have not become so alienated that they are not prepared to accept the open door."

Finally, however, I was told that now, for the first time, real communication is becoming possible because white people are being directly confronted. "The protests have helped," said the leader of a Church action group. "White people are getting angry; this is a good thing. It is an indication that people have been touched and that they are responding. The demonstrations are a way of collectively stamping our feet and saying, 'Listen, will you?' And people are beginning to listen." ■

Bishop Appoints Advisory Group on Church and Race

Acting swiftly after his Convention announcement, Bishop Donegan has named 26 persons, 12 priests and 14 laymen, to his Advisory Commission on Church and Race. The group held its first meeting on June 9. In his Convention address, the Bishop said he would form this Commission to help him assess the mood and mind of the community in the racial crisis, help him understand and interpret civil rights developments, and advise him on programs that would enable the Church to respond forthrightly and effectively.

The Rev. Richard E. Gary, Priest-in-Charge of St. Mary's, Manhattanville, is Chairman of the Commission. The secretary is the Rev. Lorentho Wooden, Assistant Minister at Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, Manhattan. Fr. Wooden is being loaned to the diocese by Intercession to give full time to the Bishop and to the Commission on racial matters during June, July, August and September.

He will make his headquarters at Diocesan House during these four months. This has been made possible through the cooperation of Trinity Parish and Intercession, aided by a grant from the Presiding Bishop's Special Appeal Fund for the Church's work in race relations. Fr. Wooden will be directly responsible to the Bishop, but will work closely with John V.P. Lassoe, Jr., diocesan Director of Christian Social Relations.

In a letter to all 537 clergymen in the diocese, the Bishop said he was offering the assistance of the Commission and Fr. Wooden in this way "to underline my conviction that the Church has a special responsibility to allay unnecessary fears and to guide constructive thinking in any time of social tension."

In addition to Mr. Gary and Fr. Wooden, the following are members of the Commission:

The Rev. Messrs. J. C. Michael Allen, St. Marks-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan; John H. Gill, St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan; J. Norman Hall, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains; James B. Jeffrey, St. Luke's, Eastchester; Clifford S. Lauder, All Souls, Manhattan; Bernard C. Newman, Trinity, Manhattan; George E. Nichols, St. Mary's, S.I.; George F. Regas, Grace, Nyack; John W. Wells, St. David's, Bronx; and M. Moran Weston, St. Philip's, Manhattan.

The laymen are: Thomas H. Allen, NAACP field secretary, St. Luke's Chapel, Trinity Parish, Manhattan; Mrs. John C. Anderson, legal division, New York State Commission for Human Rights, St. Peter's, Peekskill; David P. Boyd, commercial artist, St. Simon's S.I.; Commissioner Bessie Buchanan, New York State Commission for Human Rights, St. Philip's, Manhattan; Judge Hubert T. Delany, former Domestic Relations Court Judge, St. Martin's, Manhattan; Miss Margaret L. Fisher, Acting Director, National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing, St. Luke's Chapel, Trinity Parish; Carroll Green, Jr., Associate Secretary, Division of Christian Citizenship, National Council, St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan.

And, Mrs. Thelma Johnson, Secretary, Harlem Parents Committee, Intercession Chapel, Manhattan; Dr. Charles R. Lawrence, sociologist, St. Paul's, Spring Valley; Dr. Edward S. Lewis, Consultant on Integration, New York City Board of Education, St. Luke's, Manhattan; Dr. Norman H. Pritchard, physician, All Souls, Manhattan; Judge Harold R. Tyler, U.S. District Judge and former U.S. Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division, St. Matthew's, Bedford; State Senator Jerome L. Wilson, Epiphany, Manhattan; Jack E. Wood, Housing Director, New York City Commission on Human Rights, St. Martha's, White Plains. ■

Bishop Donegan Visits Brazil Church Leaders

As chairman of the Committee on the Independence of the Brazilian Church, Bishop Donegan will be in Rio de Janiero from June 22 to 31. He will tour Brazil with Bishop John B. Bentley, Director of the Overseas Department, National Council, Lindley M. Franklin, Jr., Treasurer, and leaders of the Brazilian Church. ■

the QUESTION is ...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Some people use the sign of the Cross during Services, and some do not. Why doesn't the Church either require this of everyone, or frankly say it isn't necessary?

As a matter of fact the Church says it is necessary in at least one Service, and that is the Service of Holy Baptism. After baptizing the child, or grown person, the priest makes the sign of the Cross upon the child's (or person's) forehead and says, "We receive this Child (Person) into the congregation of Christ's flock; and do sign him with the sign of the Cross, in token that hereafter he shall not be ashamed to confess the faith of Christ crucified, and manfully to fight under his banner, against sin, the world, and the devil; and to continue Christ's faithful soldier and servant unto his life's end. Amen."

In medieval times it became popular to make the sign of the Cross whenever the "faith of Christ" was stated, so for example, the common habit of making the sign of the Cross at the end of the Apostles' Creed, or the Nicene Creed. But this is a devotional matter.

It must be stated, quite frankly, that if one finds it helpful to have an external sign to symbolize an inner attitude, then it is a very good thing. If, on the other hand, it is purely a bit of mechanics, it can be a very bad thing. It is something which no outsider is able to determine.

As a Church, on the whole, we believe that external attitudes—standings, bowings, sittings, kneelings, and various other gestures—not only ex-

Parishes and People

● The Women of St. Matthew's, Bedford, sent $1,300 of their Christmas Fair money to Bishop Francis Ah Mya in the Karen State of Burma. They received a letter which read, in part, as follows:

"I had decided to close down our mission school at Pa'an due to lack of qualified teachers, and that was due to lack of funds. . . . But this action of yours has revived our determination to carry on for another year. . . . From this you know how grateful we are to you. The quality of our future leadership depends largely on the training they get at our mission schools. This is why the idea of having to close down our school pains my heart. But now you have come to our rescue. . . ."

● The Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector of St. Philip's, Manhattan, was the commencement speaker at Virginia Theological Seminary. His father, the Rev. Milton M. Weston, was graduated from the Bishop Payne Divinity School before that school was merged with Virginia Theological Seminary.

● A new memorial window has been dedicated at St. Andrew's, Yonkers. It is in memory of Mrs. Virginia C. Young, first woman vestryman.

● The Rev. Charles H. Graf, Rector of St. John's-in-the-Village, Manhattan, was elected national president of the Anglican Society at its annual meeting held at Christ Church, Suffern. The Rev. Canon Peter Chase of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine was elected secretary.

● The Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, is serving on the Joint Committee on Program and Budget. This Committee, which is composed of six bishops, six priests and 12 laymen, serves as an agent of General Convention, the national Church's governing body, for the study and evaluation of a proposed program and budget for the Church's work during the next three years. Bishop G. Francis Burrill of Chicago is committe chairman.

● Ten years ago this spring a group of volunteer workers spruced up a pretty white house in Goshen as a welcome to St. James' new rector and his family. Several weeks ago some 200 people jammed St. James's new parish house to tell this same rector, the Rev. Douglas Glasspool, how much they have appreciated his service and friendship during the past decade. There was a dinner, the usual festivities, a gift, and some songs. Mr. Glasspool had served in Staten Island before going to Goshen. He has been Dean of the Ramapo Convocation since 1961.

● A new organ at Christ's Church, Rye, was dedicated by Bishop Donegan on May 20. A recital by Felix McGuire, church organist, followed the service. The instrument was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. John Ellis Knowles.

● On Rogation Sunday at St. John's-in-the-Village, Manhattan, city dwellers had a chance to sample what their country cousins take for granted—the out of doors. Built around a quadrangle, St. John's has a remarkable garden. More than 2,000 tulips and daffodils were in bloom for the service this year.

● The Rev. Gerald V. Barry, Rector of Christ Church, Riverdale, reports that his recent cataract operation was successful and that he is seeing better again.

● Thieves broke into the sacristy of Trinity Church, Mount Vernon, recently and stole a silver chalice and other altar objects. The Rev. Robert Willing, rector, reported the theft to local police, but no clues were found.

● A new drama group called The Intercession Players has been formed at Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish. Its first offering was "The Way of the Cross," by the French dramatist, Henri Gheon.

Donald Shonting, the director, says he hopes the group will present works from time to time which offer meaningful religious experiences both to the performers and the spectators. "I feel that it is not the purpose of organizing a drama group at the Chapel in order to provide a showcase for aspiring young actors, but rather to provide a meaningful experience for the congregation as a whole," he said. In their first performance, the Players were assisted by members of the choir, and the drama took place in the church.

● Church of the Epiphany, Manhattan, has instituted a "Monday School." It's actually a Sunday School for children who spend most weekends in the country.

● The Rev. Benson B. Fisher, Rector of St. Stephen's, Pearl River, has been named to a five-member Interfaith Committee, which will establish rehabilitation and religious policies at the Rockland County jail. A Methodist minister, two Roman Catholic priests, and a rabbi also are on the committee.

● Edward A. Wallace, associate organist at St. Thomas, Manhattan, is on a three-month leave of absence to study at the Royal School of Church Music, Croydon, England. He will return in August. ■

Funds Are Asked For New Church Center

An appeal for additional funds for the Episcopal Church Center, the new national headquarters of the Church at 815 Second Avenue, Manhattan, was made by Bishop Donegan during his Convention address.

"The amount expected from New York, as our fair share, is $265,000," the Bishop said. "To date, $158,000 has been received." This sum came from "very generous gifts from two of our parishes, and modest gifts from not many other congregations." The Bishop said, "You will, I know, wish to do your proper part in this, so I ask you to take the necessary measures in your individual parishes." Checks should be made out to "The Treasurer of the National Council" and sent to Bishop Donegan for forwarding. ■

Teens to Man St. Edward's Voter Center

The Church of St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, has opened a Voter Education Center at 1626 Madison Avenue, just around the corner from the church.

According to the Rev. John H. Gill, Vicar, the Center is a project of St. Edward's youth group, composed of neighborhood Puerto Rican and Negro teen-agers. They will work under the direction of Fr. Gill and Antonio Ramirez, Director of St. Edward's Community Center.

From their storefront headquarters, the young people will conduct a four-point program, Fr. Gill said. They will try to increase voter registration in the neighborhood, prepare voters to register and participate in political life, provide information about who represents the neighborhood, who is running for office, what the issues are, and so forth. They will also help get out the vote on election day. ■ press an internal attitude, but also often help to condition that internal attitude.

Question Is...

We are a Church committed in many ways to an external expression of internal things. Indeed our whole sacramental system is built upon this basis. The early Church, of course, tended to make the sign of the Cross over everything. It is mentioned by the early Fathers that a man made the sign of the Cross over his food, or over his letters, or even his stylus, when he was writing. It was long associated with particular moments in liturgical services. It was, rather, a personal expression of devotion.

Indeed, in the early Church, it is very hard to prove that the sign of the Cross had specific association with any service other than Holy Baptism. So, very largely, the honest answer is the Church still insists on it, as the ancient Church insisted on it; but it will not under any circumstances insist on it as a point of private rather than public devotion. ■

Groundbreaking in Mahopac

Church of the Holy Communion, Lake Mahopac, holds groundbreaking ceremonies on the parcel of land on Route 6, between Mahopac and Carmel, where a new church eventually will be constructed. Holy Communion, a mission of the diocese, is now housed in a small wooden structure on the upper shore of Lake Mahopac. Turning the first shovel of earth is the vicar, the Rev. Peter Marks, assisted by Leslie Thompson. Her father, Donald Thompson, Chairman of the Building Committee, looks on. Back row, left to right, George Mitchell, a parishioner; the Rev. Charles Schaum, Mahopac Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Leon Zinkler, Mahopac Methodist Church; Brother Daniel of the Russian Orthodox Hermitage of Our Lady of Kursk, Mahopac; the Rev. Frederick Knieriem, Carmel Presbyterian Church; Supervisor Jeremiah Downey, Chairman of the Putnam County Board of Supervisors; Supervisor Joseph Sullivan of the Town of Carmel; the Rev. Jack Savage, Carmel Methodist Church; and the Rev. Thomas Bichan, Carmel Baptist Church.

EMS Sponsors County Jail Program

The Episcopal Mission Society and its Woman's Council have assumed permanent sponsorship of a volunteer program for the women in Westchester County Jail.

Announcement of this sponsorship, which became effective June 1, was made by the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, EMS Director, and Mrs. William J. Kelley of Scarsdale, Chairman of the Westchester Citizens Committee of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency.

The program was begun as a pilot project about a year ago under the leadership of Mrs. John L. Cox, II, of Chappaqua. It was sponsored by the Westchester Citizens Committee, assisted by the Junior League of Mount Kisco. Volunteers conduct the program, which offers classes in knitting, grooming, reading, and flower arranging for the women inmates. Classes in typing and painting will be added in the future. ■

Zabriskie in New Post

The Home Department of National Council has a new associate director, the Rev. Philip T. Zabriskie. For seven years, he was the Executive Secretary of the College and University Division in the same department.

In his new position, which was just created, Mr. Zabriskie will serve as general assistant to the Rt. Rev. Daniel Corrigan, department director. The Home Department covers a vast range of domestic missionary responsibilities. ■

. . . in brief

■ OPPOSITION to Constitutional amendments that would permit devotional exercises in the nation's public schools was voiced recently by the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church. At a meeting in Greenwich, Conn., National Council members stated that Supreme Court rulings on prayer and Bible reading in public schools "are not hostile to religion and it is no proper function of government to inculcate religious beliefs or habits of worship."

■ A BOOKLET designed "to help property owners understand and cope with the issues of discrimination in housing" has been published by the National Council. The 24-page booklet, entitled "Crisis on Elm Street," projects a hypothetical situation in which a real estate broker, a woman seller and a Negro buyer must decide how they can conscientiously cope with the pressures against integrated housing.

The Rev. Robert A. MacGill, editor, emphasized that it is not intended to "argue the case." Rather, it marshalls the facts and presents them in such a way that readers may study the issues and make informed decisions on a local basis. The booklet is available from The Seabury Press, 815 Second Ave., Manhattan, at 50 cents.

■ THE CALLING CARD of Roman Catholic Brother F. Michael, F.S.C., of the Christian Brothers of Ammendale, Md., carries this further identification: Public Relations, for God and Country.

■ SPECIAL GIFTS and legacies have enabled the Chapter of Washington Cathedral to continue construction of this edifice. A $1,050,000 building contract will provide the clerestory and vaulting in the three bays of the nave adjoining the recently completed Gloria in Excelsis Tower. These bays are finished only to triforium level.

■ THE AMERICAN BIBLE Society reports a worldwide distribution of more than 34 million Bibles in 1963. This total establishes a record for the distribution of Scriptures, but the Society's avowed goal is to distribute 75 million Scriptures per year by 1966.

■ THE NATIONAL COUNCIL of the Episcopal Church has asked General Convention to enlarge the Council from 32 to 40 members, and to change its name from "the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church" to "Executive Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church." It has also requested General Convention to amend the Canons to permit a deacon to be placed in charge of a parish.

■ MRS. ROBERT H. LARKIN of Cortland, N.Y. has been named national vice president of the GFS, Society for Girls for Province II. Mrs. Larkin also is diocesan chairman for Project 2000, the Development Program for the Girls' Friendly Society. ■

Bishop Ordains Eleven to the Diaconate

Bishop Donegan ordained 11 men to the diaconate at a service in the Cathedral on June 6. The order of deacons is one of three orders of the ministry in the Episcopal Church. The other two are priest and bishop. Usually a deacon is advanced to the priesthood in six months or a year. Shown with the Bishop are, left to right, the Rev Messrs.

Ian Gordon George, ordained for the Bishop of Adelaide, Australia. He will be Assistant Minister at St. Thomas's, Mamaroneck.

Richard M. Werkheiser, Resurection, Manhattan, assigned to St. Thomas Church, Dacca, East Pakistan.

John S. Scannell, Good Shepherd, Bronx, assigned to St. Stephen's, Wolcott, and St. John's, Sodus, N. Y.

Harry S. Henrich, Resurrection, Manhattan, assigned to St. James, Callicoon.

James H. Maxwell, St. Paul's, Yonkers, assigned to Trinity, Covington, Ky.

Gregory M. Howe, St. Ignatius, Manhattan, assigned to Christ Church, Dover, Del.

Fred G. Coleman, Jr., Church of the Holy Nativity, Bronx. He will serve as Assistant Minister, St. George's, Flushing, L.I.

Joseph M. Elliott, St. Mary's, Manhattanville. He will be Assistant Minister, St. Paul's, Bronx.

Charles M. Hawes, III, Christ Church, Bronxville. He will be Assistant Minister, St. Paul's, Rochester.

Paul J. Christianssen, St. Ann's, Bronx. He will do graduate study at Union Theological Seminary.

Vincent H. Anderson, Epiphany, Manhattan. He will be Assistant Minister at Epiphany.

New Parish House Dedicated

Christ Church, Warwick, dedicated a new parish house recently, and although a drenching rain prevented placing of the corner stone as planned, the ceremony marked the fruition of a dream which started as far back as 1929.

Nearly 400 people attended the dedication services, which were conducted by the Rev. Leonel L. Mitchell, Rector, Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy, and the Rev. Douglas Glasspool, Dean of the Ramapo Convocation. An open house followed.

The new building includes a large parish hall with adjoining kitchen, a rector's study, choir vesting room, classrooms and a sewing room. There are large attic and basement areas, both for present storage and future expansion.

Construction was begun last August by the Nielsen Construction Company of Warwick. The architect is Frank L. Howe of Middletown, a communicant of Grace Church there. The parish building committee, under the chairmanship of Francis A. Roy, junior warden, raised over $40,000 toward the construction cost. Although the building program was first envisioned in 1929, the successful project had its actual beginning in 1961. Preliminary plans for the structure which has now been completed were drawn early in 1962. ■

Barrytown Church is 90 Years Old

The Church of St. John the Evangelist, Barrytown, celebrated the 90th anniversary of its cornerstone laying with a special service on May 9. A buffet supper followed. William Nichols, lay reader and former vestryman, who is the Director of the Library of the Dutchess Community College, Poughkeepsie, was the principal speaker.

On October 4, the Church plans a larger celebration to commemorate the 90th anniversary of its consecration by Bishop Horatio Potter. St. John the Evangelist owes its existence to a group of students at nearby Bard College (formerly St. Stephen's) who did considerable neighborhood calling during the early 1870's, with the result that services were held in a school house at Barrytown. The church was built by Mrs. John L. Aspinwall, as a memorial to her husband. ■

Leonel Mitchell Earns Doctorate

The Rev. Leonel L. Mitchell, Rector of Christ Church, Warwick, has received the degree of Doctor of Theology in course from General Theological Seminary.

His major field was liturgics, and according to the Very Rev. Lawrence Rose, Dean of the Seminary, Dr. Mitchell's degree was the first doctorate in liturgics given in the American Church. His minor field was church history.

Dr. Mitchell was ordained by Bishop Donegan in 1954. Before becoming Rector of Christ Church, Warwick, in 1959, he was assistant minister at Christ Church, Riverdale, and Rector of the Church of St. John in the Wilderness, Copake Falls. He is now the canonical examiner in liturgics for the Bishop.

A native of New York City, he was graduated from Trinity College, received his Bachelor of Sacred Theology degree, magna cum laude, from Berkeley Divinity School in 1954, and earned his S.T.M. at General in 1956. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, and is a contributor to the Church Historical Magazine and Studia Liturgica. In Warwick, he is active in local affairs and is chairman of the Warwick Valley Migrant Committee. ■

200 Attend All-day ECW Conference at Savoy-Hilton

More than 200 women from all over the diocese attended the all-day conference sponsored by the Episcopal Churchwomen at the Savoy-Hilton Hotel, Manhattan, on May 15. Its purpose was to help ECW members "understand and accept their responsibilities as Christian women in today's world."

The conference was part of a two-day schedule of events. On May 16, the Spring United Thank Offering was held in the Cathedral with Bishop Donegan preaching the sermon. The annual meeting was held in the afternoon following lunch in Synod House undercroft.

According to Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., diocesan ECW president, the combination of a full-day conference, the UTO Ingathering and the annual meeting was in the nature of an experiment. "Judging by the comments which have reached me, many members liked the idea and found the two days both beneficial and enjoyable," she reported.

The Savoy-Hilton conference opened with a devotional service led by Mrs. Douglas Glasspool, Devotional Life Chairman.

During the afternoon, the women attended workshops on various aspects of "The Creative Vocation of Christian Women."

The UTO Ingathering totaled $32,042.23 from 7,72 women. Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherford, UTO Treasurer, has announced that since this was the last Ingathering before Triennial, the books will be held open through July for any offerings which have not yet been sent in.

At its annual meeting, the ECW unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the federal Civil Rights bill, and voted to send copies to Senators Javits and Keating. ■

Presiding Bishop Receives Tribute

A resolution paying tribute to the Presiding Bishop and expressing regret at his forthcoming retirement was adopted at diocesan convention. Presented by the Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral, it noted that "he has served the Church so wisely that the partisan differences of a generation ago are now largely forgotten." It also called attention to the great personal respect with which he is regarded "even on the part of those who have disagreed with him most."

In his official address, Bishop Donegan also paid tribute to Bishop Lichtenberger, saying that "The painful and conscientious decision made in behalf of the Church by the Presiding Bishop was a source of grievous distress to us all." ■

A LAYMAN LOOKS AT THE CHURCH, by Clifford P. Morehouse. Seabury Press. 181 pages. $3.50

When Clifford P. Morehouse served with the Marines during World War II, his staff sergeant frequently repeated the observation: "The secret weapon of the Marine Corps is the well-trained Marine."

In his new book, "A Layman Looks at the Church," Mr. Morehouse expresses the belief that the Church also has a secret weapon—the converted, well-trained, committed layman. "With such lay people," he declares, "the parish can become a powerful unity in the Church Militant."

But the layman must have his eyes open and do some thinking, Mr. Morehouse suggests. And his book, written by a layman for the laity, is designed to be helpful in this respect. The author outlines the Church's faith, discusses its organizational structure, and then proceeds to comment penetratingly and honestly on such contemporary issues as church unity, the ecumenical movement, war and peace, segregation, Communism and the Church, and the role of the Christian family.

"A Layman Looks at the Church" is the spring selection of the Episcopal Book Club. ■

Work Begins At All Saints'

Construction of a new church at All Saints', S.I., started on May 11. The work is running well ahead of schedule, according to William M. Crapo, Jr., Administrative Coordinator in the Department of Missions. The project is expected to be completed in April, 1965.

The new building will provide a permanent home for this mission congregation, which in 1958 lost its church at Mariners Harbor in a disastrous fire. After a study to determine the most strategic location for a new All Saints', the Department of Missions purchased a plot of land on Victory Blvd., some three miles inland and southeast of the old location. It then authorized Lucas E. Bannon and James Tellefsen, architects, of Hohokus, N.J., to draw plans.

The new church will cost approximately $112,000. John P. Thompson of Staten Island is the general contractor. ■

Additional information about the conference is being mailed. The clergy are asked to please return the post cards indicating whether or not reservations should be made for them.

'Double 40' Party Held for Fr. Kidd

The Rev. Gordon L. Kidd, Rector of St. James', Hyde Park, and Mrs. Kidd prepare, in photo below, to cut a cake given to them at a "double 40" surprise party held by friends and parishioners. The event marked the couple's 40th wedding anniversary and Fr. Kidd's 40th anniversary of ordination into the diaconate. Some 300 guests attended, including Bishop Boynton, Bishop Brown of Albany and the Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, Dean of the Dutchess Convocation. Mrs. Kidd received a brooch with diamond and ruby chips. Fr. Kidd was given a purse and a certificate good for an extra month's vacation this winter. There was also a scrap book containing newspaper clippings and photographs. ■

Mission Society Woman's Council Plans 5th Anniversary Luncheon

Several important occasions will be observed at the fifth anniversary luncheon of the Woman's Council of the Episcopal City Mission Society. The luncheon will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 28, in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Plaza.

The date is the 18th anniversary of Bishop Donegan's consecration, and he will be the guest of honor and main speaker. The luncheon also will mark two centennials which are being celebrated throughout 1964: the founding of St. Barnabas House, and the official designation of the Mission Society as Protestant chaplaincy representative in public institutions.

"We hope that in marking these anniversaries, the whole family of our Church will join us — rectors, their wives, ECW members, officers and friends of the Society," said the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, EMS director. Reservations, at $3.50, can be made with parish ECW branches or directly with the Society, 38 Bleecker St.

The Society will hold its annual theater benefit on Nov. 12. It will be a performance of "Ben Franklin in Paris." ■

Canadian to Succeed Bishop Bayne

The Rt. Rev. Ralph S. Dean, Anglican Bishop of Caribou (British Columbia). He will succeed the Rt. Rev. Stephen F. Bayne, Jr., as Executive Officer of the Anglican Communion. The appointment, made by the 18 archbishops and metropolitans of the Anglican Communion, will become effective in November. At that time, Bishop Bayne is scheduled to return to the United States to become Director of the Overseas Department, National Council. This position is now occupied by the Rt. Rev. John B. Bentley, who is retiring. ■

Bishop's Secretary Dies

Miss Carol Wyllys Rede, Secretary to Bishop Donegan for 26 years, died suddenly on Sept. 15 at her home, 400 Central Park West. The Burial Office was read in St. James' Chapel of the Cathedral Church on Sept. 18 at 11 a.m.

Miss Rede was the daughter of the late Dr. Wyllys Rede, former historiographer of the Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, and of the late Caroline Potter Rede, a descendant of Bishop Alonzo Potter of Pennsylvania. She is survived by two brothers, Col. George Ross Rede (Ret.) of Carmel, Calif., and Marion Rede of Clarksburg, W. Va.

In commenting on Miss Rede's death as an unexpected loss to the diocese Bishop Donegan said that she was a practicing churchwoman all her life and a devoted, trusted gracious and competent secretary, who will be greatly missed by her many friends in the diocese and elsewhere." ■

The Bishop's Message

As Chairman of the Joint Commission of the House of Bishops and the National Council on an Autonomous Brazilian Church, I spent the last weeks in June in Brazil meeting with the bishops, clergy and laity of the three Brazilian dioceses. The report will be made to the House of Bishops, but I can say that I was favorably impressed by the quality, dedication and loyalty of its leadership. There is no question that if the Church in Brazil is granted independence it will be faithful to the tradition out of which it was born, and will assume its appropriate responsibilities in the family of churches that make up the Anglican Communion.

If the Church is granted independence, we must continue to support it through the sending of missionary personnel and the appropriation of funds; this will be in accordance with the principle underlying Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence. Having been a Missionary District for almost 80 years, the hour has come for its independence. Brazil today presents a unique opportunity to do a significant and pioneering work for the whole Anglican Communion.

By the time this issue of the diocesan Bulletin reaches you, the Every Member Canvass will be under way in your congregation. I would impress upon you the personal significance of the Every Member Canvass and its vast importance. Our present work can be maintained and be made more effective only in so far as every baptized and confirmed member accepts a full share of the responsibility. The failure of anyone to respond to the Canvass appeal means injury to the Church and the loss of individual opportunity. Think of how the work of Christ would advance if everybody pledged generously. Many of you are doing this, but ought not each one of you do so according to your ability?

The Every Member Canvass is more than financial; it is an appeal for personal loyalty and for an acknowledgment of all that your religion means to you. Your response is a token of your devotion; it helps to sustain an effective ministry at home, and through the missionary program overseas brings the Way, the Truth and the Life to all kinds and conditions of people.

May your support of the Church's Mission be a worthy expression of your allegiance to Christ and His Church and of your gratitude to God for all the blessings He has given you. "Freely ye have received; freely give."

God be with us all, as we seek to serve Him more faithfully in the coming days.

Faithfully and affectionately your Bishop,

Harry Wm. Morgan

What Lies Ahead for the

General Convention Sessions in St. Louis Will Set Church Priorities for Next 3 Years

From the standpoint of the general public and many Episcopalians as well, the election of a new Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U. S. A. will be the most exciting and eventful piece of business at the 61st General Convention when it meets Oct. 11-23 in St. Louis, Mo.

Naturally, there has been all kinds of speculation about a possible successor to the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger since his decision to retire was announced last spring. But the pre-election tempo within the Church is subdued, different in every way from the noisy scramble accompanying the national political campaigns this fall.

The new Presiding Bishop will be elected on Oct. 17.

Second in popular interest at the Convention undoubtedly will be the action to be taken on the much-publicized Anglican Congress document, "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ." In the past, each branch of Anglicanism has functioned almost autonomously, but this document urges each of the 18 Churches in the Anglican Communion to reassess its goals and priorities in terms of funds, manpower and strategy.

Observers have pointed out that if the American Church adopts the "mutual responsibility" recommendations, it could mean the abolition of some traditional structures to clear the way for a new emphasis on a more cooperative missionary strategy.

Many issues of national and worldwide scope also will come before the Convention, among them the increased urbanization of American life, poverty, race relations, church unity, and church-state relations. Consult the box at right for a quick rundown of important agenda items. A schedule of convention highlights appears on page 6.

General Convention, which meets every three years, is similar in structure to Congress. It has two legislative houses, the House of Deputies, composed of 678 clerical and lay deputies; and a House of Bishops, containing some 150 diocesan, coadjutor and suffragan bishops. As in Congress, any legislative proposal normally goes first to a committee in the house which is introducing the measure. Once out of committee, it is put to a vote, and if passed goes to the other house.

Convention business usually originates from four sources: from former Conventions, through regular committees and commissions and those set up to work on specific problems; from dioceses and missionary districts sending requests for action; from National Council, which carries on the program of the Church between conventions; and from individual members of the two houses.

The delegates from this diocese include Bishop Donegan, Bishop Boynton and Bishop Wetmore, who are members of the House of Bishops, together with four clerical and four lay delegates elected at diocesan convention. They include Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, who was elected in 1961 as President of the House of Deputies, and will preside again this year. One of the delegates originally elected, Andrew Oliver, will be unable to attend. His place will be taken by an alternate, Paul B. Anderson. ■

at general convention
These Things Could Happen

- Action on "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the body of Christ," could reassess the Church's priorities and pave the way for changes in traditional structures.
- Women could become General Convention delegates.
- Missionary areas could become known as "dioceses" instead of "districts".
- Services of healing could be emphasized in the Church's concept of mission and ministry.
- Trial use could be authorized for certain Prayer Book changes.
- Three Commissions dealing with church unity could be merged into one Joint Commission on Ecumenical Relations.
- New positions on National Council staff could be created.
- National Council staff members and aides could be authorized to act as consultants on joint committees and commissions.
- The present quota system for financing the world-wide work of the Church could be exchanged for a "partnership plan."
- There could be a new canon on "professional women church workers." This would set up a list of Approved Workers who would report to their bishops several times a year and receive letters of transfer when they move to another diocese.

ECW Delegation to Attend St. Louis Triennial

Mrs. Edgar

As the General Convention sessions convene in St. Louis next month, some 700 Episcopal Churchwomen simultaneously will attend the 31st Triennial meeting of the Church's woman's organization.

The women will hold their own daily sessions, but will meet jointly with both houses of General Convention on three occasions—to hear National Council's report, to hear the "mutual responsibility" recommendations, and to hear the report of the Joint Committee on Program and Budget.

Highlight of the Triennial will occur on Oct. 15 when bishops, deputies to General Convention and Episcopal Churchwomen assemble in Kiel Auditorium for the United Thank Offering Presentation.

The UTO—collected during the past three years—is expected to exceed the 1961 total of $4.3 million. The funds represent contributions from tens of thousands of women who have given to UTO in addition to their regular parish pledges.

Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., President of the diocesan Episcopal Churchwomen, will lead the Triennial delegation from New York. Accompanying her will be Mrs. Ralph F. Stott, Mrs. Landes Lewitin, Mrs. William L. Gardner and Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd.

Five major speakers will address the Triennial. The Rev. Dr. Massey H. Shepherd, Jr., of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, will speak at the opening session on "How God Is Working in His Changing World Today." Other speakers will be the Rev. Dr. Daisuke Kitagawa, Executive Secretary of the Division of Domestic Mission, National Council; Dr. Charles V. Willie, sociologist and anthropologist, of Syracuse University; Mrs. Harold C. Kelleran, Associate Professor, Virginia Theological Seminary; and Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, Assistant General Secretary for Program, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. ■

Plan Session On Retarded

Clergymen and other professionals concerned with the education of retarded children are invited to a Consultation on Religious Education of the Retarded, Wednesday, Oct. 14, at the Episcopal Church Center, 815 Second Ave., from 2 to 5 p.m.

Dr. Frances Conner, Department of Special Education, Teachers College, Columbia, will preside. The discussion will cover causes of retardation, training and education, the expectations of what a retarded person can accomplish, the Church's responsibility, and how to set up classes in religious education for this group.

The Coordinating Committee for the Religious Education of the Handicapped is sponsoring the program. Miss Irene Henderson, Associate Director of Christian Education, Diocese of New York (RI 9-1100) has further details. This diocese is cooperating in the operation of a Church School class for mentally retarded at the Park Avenue Christian Church, Manhattan, Sundays at 11. ■

Promoted

Dr. Dora P. Chaplin, the only woman member of the faculty at General Theological Seminary, has been named head of a newly created department and promoted to the rank of full professor. Dr. Chaplin, a recognized authority on Christian Education, will direct the new Department of Christian Education, authorized by the Board of Trustees recently. Previously the subject was contained in the Department of Pastoral Theology, and Dr. Chaplin was an associate there. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

What is original sin?

Original sin, according to the Articles of Religion, is the "fault and corruption of the Nature of every man. . .whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and is of his own nature inclined to evil, so that the flesh lusteth always contrary to the Spirit; and therefore in every person born into this world, it deserveth God's wrath and damnation. And this infection of nature doth remain, yea in them that are regenerated. . . ."

This austere 16th Century language just says what most of us already know to be so, that man's man left to his own devices is a beachcomber. Man, the child of nature, is not an unspoiled, simple, dear, good thing. Indeed, one of the most telling books and certainly one of the most effective movies of recent times shows exactly what happens with a group of children left alone on a desert island. The title of the book is "The Lord of the Flies." It's a terrifying book, and a terrifying movie. On the other hand, it shouldn't in the strict sense shock anybody who knows anything about human nature.

I'm afraid it is always necessary in our age to say that original sin does not mean sin of origin. It hasn't anything to do with the sexual side of marriage. Original sin is the corporate mess, yet self-chosen, and engineered by each of us individually. Each of us, therefore, has to be reborn. ■

Diocesan Staff to Sponsor Mission Study Workshops

The diocesan Department of Christian Education is offering a set of workshops to help clergy and lay leaders present this year's mission study program in their parishes.

There will be three similar sessions—day, evening, and on Saturday—in three different parts of the diocese. They are an augmented version of workshops which have been held in previous years by the department's Division of Children's Work. This year the workshops are being given by the whole department with the whole parish in mind.

The mission theme for 1964-65 is "Our Spanish-speaking Neighbors." Purpose of the workshops will be to introduce the materials which parishes will use to expand this theme, demonstrate and practice some of the techniques of presenting a successful program, and discuss some of the teaching resources which parishes may not be using.

Eligible to attend are Church School superintendents and teachers, youth leaders, clergymen and ECW education chairmen. The sessions are as follows:

Monday, Oct. 28, Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park. 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. (Lunch $1.75. Reservations are necessary.)

Wednesday, Oct. 28, St. Mark's, Mount Kisco. 8 to 10 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 31, St. Michael's, Amsterdam Ave. and 99th St., Manhattan. 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. (Bring own lunch.)

For further information about these workshops, call Miss Irene Henderson, Department of Christian Education, RIverside 9-1100 (914). ■

Eisenhower to Get Council Award

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower will be the recipient of this year's Family of Man Award given by the Society for the Family of Man.

The announcement was made by John Hay Whitney, editor-in-chief and publisher of the New York Herald Tribune. He is chairman of the 1964 dinner committee. Presentation will be made at the Second Family of Man dinner, Oct. 28 in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor.

The late President Kennedy was the first Family of Man recipient last Nov. 8, shortly before his death.

Each year the Society for the Family of Man will honor persons of international stature who have provided outstanding and creative leadership in certain key areas. The Society was created by the Protestant Council of the City of New York last year as a way of increasing its community service work.

The Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Rector of St. James', Manhattan, is President of the Council. Bishop Wetmore is Chairman of its Evaluation Committee and a member of the Board of Directors. ■

NEW AMERICAN PAYS $100 WEEKLY...

TO YOU THOUSANDS OF THE BULLETIN READERS WHO KNOW THAT DRINKING AND SMOKING ARE EVIL!

You do not drink or smoke...so why pay premiums for those who do?

Why pay the penalty for those who drink or smoke?

Every day you pick up the paper you read more evidence that drinking and smoking can shorten life. Because they are among America's leading health problems—leading to cancer, heart trouble, sinus trouble, liver trouble and many other diseases—they're a prime cause of the high premium rates most hospitalization plans charge. But why should you pay the price for those who drink or smoke? You no longer have to! Here's why.

Our rates are based on your superior health

The new American Temperance Hospitalization Plan is not offered to drinkers and smokers, because of the high rates they cause. We can bring you a whole new set of rates that are unbelievably low because they're based on your good health as a non-drinker and non-smoker. Also, your American Temperance premiums can never be raised because you grow older or have too many claims. Only a general rate adjustment up or down could affect your low rates! And only you can cancel your policy. We cannot.

HERE ARE YOUR AMERICAN TEMPERANCE PLAN BENEFITS

1) You receive $100 weekly—even for life

The very day you enter a hospital you begin to get $100 a week cash...as long as you are hospitalized, even for life! Good in any lawfully operated hospital in the world. Choose your own! We pay in addition to any other insurance you carry. And we pay direct to you in cash...tax free!

We send out our payments to you Air Mail Special so you have cash in hand fast. And there is no limit on the number of times you can collect.

2) We cover all sicknesses and accidents.

Your policy covers you for every conceivable kind of accident and sickness except pregnancy; any act of war or military service; pre-existing conditions; or hospitalization caused by use of liquor or narcotics. Everything else that could possibly happen to you is covered. You'll be protected as never before—at amazingly low rates!

3) Other benefits for loss within 90 days of accident

(as described in policy)

We pay $2,000 cash for accidental death. We pay $2,000 cash for loss of one hand, one foot, or sight of one eye. We pay $6,000 cash for loss of both eyes, both hands, or both feet.

We invite close comparison with any other plan.

There really is no other plan like ours. But compare our rates with others for similar coverage. Discover for yourself what you save. And remember, there is no limit on how long you stay in the hospital, no limit on age, no limit on the number of times you can collect!

Here's all you do.

Fill out the application at the right. Notice the amazingly low rates! Enclose it in an envelope and mail to American Temperance Associates, Box 131, Libertyville, Illinois. Upon approval, you will get your policy promptly by mail, and coverage begins at noon on the effective date of your policy. No salesman will call. Don't delay! Every day almost 50,000 people enter hospitals. Any day, one of them could be you. Protect yourself before it's too late!

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Read over your policy carefully. Ask your minister, lawyer and doctor to examine it. Be sure it provides exactly what we say it does. Then, if for any reason at all you are not 100% satisfied, just mail your policy back to us within 30 days and we will immediately refund your entire premium. No questions asked. You can gain thousands of dollars... you risk nothing.

TEMPERANCE PLAN EVEN FOR LIFE!

Here at last is a new kind of hospitalization plan for non-drinkers and non-smokers only! The rates are fantastically low because "poor risk" drinkers and smokers are excluded. And because your health is superior...there is absolutely no age limit, no physical examination, no waiting period. Only you can cancel your policy... and no salesman will ever call! Starting from the very first day you enter any hospital...

SEND FOR YOUR POLICY NOW BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE!

Casework Project Places Miss Yost In 3 Churches

Miss Kathleen M. Yost has joined the staff of the Episcopal Mission Society as a caseworker in charge of a new project designed to aid clergy in three Manhattan churches.

The churches are St. Mary's, Manhattanville; St. Peter's, Chelsea; and St. Matthew and St. Timothy. All are contributing financially to the project, as are two midtown parishes, St. James' and St. Thomas. Miss Yost's primary activity will be to help clergy with social casework problems they discover during parochial visitations. ■

People and Parishes

● For the first time in 40 years, the silver-flute tones of a boys' choir is echoing through the practice rooms at St. Michael's, 99th Street and Amsterdam Ave., Manhattan. The Rev. William F. Corker, rector, reports that a group of paid choristers, ranging in age from nine to fourteen and augmented by several tenors and basses, will soon be ready to sing at the church's main Sunday services. Robert Huddleston, organist and choirmaster, is in charge of this new venture. The group is shaping up very well, he says, although there are still a few vacancies. St. Michael's has a mixed choir at present — professionals and volunteers, men and women.

● "What do you see as you pass All Saints, Harrison?" the Rev. E. Walter Chater asked his congregation recently, "a jumble of buildings, or a lighthouse and a landmark—a place of inspiration for all?"

All Saints will look more like a lighthouse and a landmark from the outside as an alteration program scheduled for this fall gets under way, the rector continued. Old, weather-beaten shingles will be replaced with new ones; the vestibule will be enlarged and remodeled; the heating system will be improved; all the buildings will be painted white, and trees and landscaping will add the finishing touch. "But," the rector asserted, "Our lighthouse can only be effective as thankful men and women receive the light from Christ and allow it to shine forth in their lives. . . "

● Canon Peter Chase describes as "one of the great experiences of my life" his participation in "Operation Sail," the spectacular and historic gathering of sailing ships this summer. Canon Chase, who holds a commission as a lieutenant commander in the U. S. Coast Guard Reserve, was chaplain aboard the 265-foot Coast Guard bark EAGLE, flagship of "Operation Sail," from its starting point in Puerto Rico to Hamilton, Bermuda. The trip took eight days. ■

3 Clergymen Receive Honorary Doctorates

Three clergymen from this diocese were awarded honorary Doctor of Divinity degrees this summer.

The Rev. Arthur W. Hargate, Rector of St. Matthew's, Bedford, received his doctorate at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. The Rev. Orin A. Griesmyer, Rector of Transfiguration, Manhattan, was honored at Seabury - Western Theological Seminary.

The Very Rev. Lawrence Rose, Dean of General Theological Seminary, received a doctorate at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn. Dean Rose was the Baccalaureate preacher for the commencement ceremonies. ■

THE BARD CONFERENCES

more Christian living than a year in Sunday School

Story and pictures by Joseph Martin

Subjects ranging from the religion of Clarence Darrow to teen-age dating were given a brisk going over this summer as more than 300 junior and senior high school students attended the New York Youth Conferences at Bard College.

There were four conferences, each for a different age group. The total enrollment of 335, from all over the diocese, was a record.

The New York Youth Conferences, commonly known as the Bard Conferences, combine worship, formal talks, discussion, and a wholesome proportion of recreation. Each conference lasts from Sunday afternoon until Friday afternoon. Mornings are devoted to talks and discussion, afternoons and evenings to sports and other recreation.

The talks are designed not to teach in the usual sense, but to provide food for thought and discussion. There are two daily talks, each followed by discussion in small groups, with a priest assigned to each group.

The young person spends more time in these daily periods than he does in an entire year of Sunday School.

The Bard Conferences permit an intensity and continuity that no Sunday School can achieve. They also give the participants a chance to learn about Christian living in a small, self-contained community. Leaders consider this aspect of equal importance with the educational values. In fact, the leaders gauge the success of a conference by how soon this community spirit becomes apparent.

This writer was a counselor at one of the conferences, and it was this sudden transformation into a real community that was the most dramatic and thrilling. It happened on Tuesday morning when, almost as if by signal, these ninth-graders changed from 85 individuals into a community which happened to have 85 members.

Actually, the conference planners promote the community spirit by carefully thought out programming. Besides meeting and worshipping together as a whole, the young people are assigned to small groups. They eat with one group, discuss with another, share a dormitory wing with still another. It almost took a computer to work things out so that there was no overlapping.

Sports and other recreation are not looked upon as time killers but as a vital part of the conferences. So important are they that this year the diocese employed a director with a master's degree in recreation—Charles Exley. He is a YMCA specialist whose energy was a constant source of amazement to the less fit members of the staff.

This year's first conference, on "God in Science," was for boys and girls going into the seventh and eighth grades. Theme of the second, for ninth graders, and the third, for tenth graders, was "God in History." The last, for eleventh and twelfth graders and high school graduates who attended in previous years, was on "God in Current Issues."

The Rev. Richard J. Kirk, Associate Director, diocesan Department of Christian Education, was the general director. Individual conference directors were the Rev. Messrs. David W. Arnold, E. Perren Hayes, Howard O. Bingley and Fr. Kirk. Nearly 70 clergy and lay men and women staffed the sessions, all as volunteers.

The Department also sponsored three Wilderness Conferences, held at a campsite at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness in Harriman State Park. These conferences, for high school students, are designed to instill community spirit and show the relationship between work and worship. The campers live in tents, do their own cooking, keep the tents and buildings tidy and carry on various work projects. This "worship through work" is related in talks and discussions to formal worship in the church.

Herman Hunter, a teacher who is a member of St. Margaret's, Bronx, was the director. Various diocesan clergymen were the speakers. ■

The group from Trinity Church's Lower East Side Mission visited the hospital as part of a summer program in exploring career opportunities. While at St. Luke's, the teenagers were taken through the laboratories, x-ray facilities, the School of Nursing, dietary department and business offices.*

A wholesome, cultural, national weekly newspaper

Winner of the 1964 Supple Memorial Award for religious reporting

If you feel there is too much sex and scandal in the news these days, you'll welcome The National Observer with open arms.

For here is a new kind of national weekly newspaper that is entertaining and informative, yet devoid of sensationalism.

Recently The National Observer won the 1964 Supple Memorial Award "for excellence in reporting news of religion in the secular press." This high honor was for a series by reporter Lee Dirks – ranging from the Ecumenical Council's impact on an American parish, to an experimental mission in Las Vegas's Strip.

Not only in the field of religion, but in politics, science, medicine, space, education, foreign affairs, government, business, books and the arts, The Observer regularly brings you enriching, informative stories on just about every important aspect of the fascinating world we live in.

In just one recent issue, for instance, you would have learned: why some labor unions are disenchanted with profit-sharing . . . what GOP Senator Javits thinks his party must do to survive . . . how "Profiles in Courage" is being adapted for TV . . .

In addition, The Observer brings you regular, readable features such as The Week in Washington, A Chat With the Doctor, The Wide, Wide World of Books.

Right now you can sample the pleasures of The National Observer by taking advantage of the special no-risk introductory offer described in the coupon below. We'll send you 25 weekly issues for only $2.67 – just about half the regular subscription rate. Send no money now. Just mail the coupon.

Dr. Kennedy of Ascension Goes To Forward Movement

The Rev. Dr. James W. Kennedy, Rector of Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, for the past 10 years, has been named Director and Editor of Forward Movement Publications. The appointment, made by Presiding Bishop Arthur Lichtenberger, became effective Nov. 2.

Forward Movement is a national church publishing agency best known for its devotional manual, "Forward Day by Day." It also publishes many tracts and booklets. As its director, Dr. Kennedy succeeds the Rev. Clement Welch, who resigned last winter to become Director of Studies at the College of Preachers, Washington, D.C.

While rector of Ascension, Dr. Kennedy held numerous church posts and was a prominent leader in the ecumenical movement, working with the Episcopal Church, the National Council of Churches and the World Council of Churches.

He has been president of the Manhattan Division of the Protestant Council of the City of New York and chairman of its Radio and TV Department. He was at one time chairman of the diocesan Department of Promotion, and most recently was chairman of the Public Relations Committee of the Episcopal Mission Society.

He has appeared widely on radio and TV and has written several books. His outdoor summer Sunday afternoon short story hour, "A Word in Passing," conducted in front of the church at Fifth Avenue and Tenth St., is particularly well known.

Diocesan CSR Group Names 6 New Members

Six new members have been named to the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations, according to the Rev. J. Norman Hall, department chairman. They were elected by the Department and subsequently approved by the Council of the Diocese.

The new members are Miss Marie E. Eichelberger of St. Peter's, Manhattan; the Rev. James A. Gusweller, Rector of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan; Mrs. Irving L. Jones of Chapel of the Intercession, Manhattan; the Rev. John B. Kelley, Priest-in-Charge of St. Ann's, Bronx; the Rev. Samuel B. Bird, Jr., Vicar of Resurrection, Hopewell Junction; and the Rev. Lorentho Wooden, Assistant Minister, Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, Manhattan. ■

Churchwomen to Hear Dr. John Heuss at UTO Gathering

Dr. Heuss

A new triennial period will begin for Episcopal Churchwomen when the annual Advent meeting and presentation of the United Thank Offering takes place Tuesday, Dec. 1, at the Cathedral.

ECW members from all over the diocese will attend.

The theme will be "The Church's Mission in Urban Areas," a subject which was of great concern to Churchwomen attending the recent Triennial in St. Louis, and one which will be emphasized strongly during the year ahead.

The Rev. John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, Manhattan, will preach at the morning service. He has been one of the most active and vocal leaders in efforts to further the Church's work in the city. In an article written shortly before he left as a delegate to General Convention, Dr. Heuss emphasized the need to train missionaries and send them to the masses of people who live untouched by any Christian church right in the middle of most of the industrialized cities of this country.

He referred to urban work as "an opportunity for the whole Episcopal Church," and declared that "if we are to be true to our Christian vocation, the whole Church needs to face the opportunity of the city and plan its missionary strategy and budget accordingly." Trinity Church, throughout its history, has been a leader in urban missionary work.

This is the day's schedule: Holy Communion and UTO presentation in the Cathedral at 10:30 a.m. Lunch in Synod House undercroft at noon. Meeting in Synod House at 1.

At the ECW Triennial in St. Louis, the New York Diocesan Board filed a resolution on the Church's mission in urban areas. It recognized "the great missionary opportunity today in large urban areas," noted that "impetus and renewed opportunity for an effective program. . .for ministry in urban areas is now provided by the Chicago Interchurch Urban Training Center and other church-related social agencies," and resolved "that the women of this Church go on record in urging that the work in urban areas be given a prominent place in the consideration of the Church's program for the next triennial, and that pilot projects for urban areas be encouraged."

The resolution also called upon National Council to provide educational material and information programs to acquaint dioceses from coast to coast with the need and opportunity for a strong urban program.

At the same time, the ECW proposed a UTO grant of $75,000 for the new Community Youth Center at St. Philip's, Manhattan.

Two afternoon speakers on Dec. 1 will point up the significance of the St. Philip's project.

They are Miss Lillian M. Richards, Director of Social Service for the New York City Department of Hospitals, and V. Benjamin Louard,

The Bishop's Message

This message is written on the first day of General Convention. The most important action today was the election by acclamation of Dr. Clifford Morehouse as President of the House of Clerical and Lay Delegates. We are proud that a delegate from New York has for the second time been chosen for this high responsibility.

The main and over-arching theme of this Convention will be Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence. The report of the special Committee on Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence has not yet been made, but it is expected that it will point us to the reality and urgency of understanding the contemporary mission of the Church as ministry to the world.

In his forthright and deeply moving sermon at the opening service last night, the Presiding Bishop urged the Church "to put aside all romantic illusions about the world we live in and to begin where we are and move on." He said, "We cannot reverse the flow of time and return to the days when life was much more simple. In every aspect of our lives, in our homes, in business and industry, in the social and political issues which confront us, we have no choice but to begin where we are and move on."

The proposals of Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence, among other things, will undoubtedly mean the abandonment of familiar structures in order to pave the way for a truly cooperative and world-wide missionary strategy, and a realignment of priorities in order to respond to a new awareness of the Church as Mission. We shall be challenged to work out in our lives the meaning of Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence as people who know how much we depend upon one another as members of the Body of Christ.

Issues of national and world-wide significance are before us during these next two weeks — urbanization, poverty, race relations, church unity, family planning, church-state relations and international affairs.

Of supreme importance will be the election of a successor to Bishop Lichtenberger, whose illness has necessitated his resignation as Presiding Bishop. We are profoundly grateful for the wise, brave and kindly leadership of Arthur Lichtenberger as a teacher, as a Bishop in the Church of God, and in particular as Presiding Bishop. We rejoice that our friend and leader has been chosen to reveal God's power and we pray that God will give him strength sufficient for every need.

In these days of deliberation and decision, may we be given grace to think clearly, speak directly and act wisely, and when we return to our homes "mutually encouraged by each other's faith," may we show what great things God has done for us.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

These Churches Are Growing . . .

Yonkers, Peekskill, Hopewell Junction and East 29th Street, Manhattan, represent four distant points of the diocesan compass, but this fall they have had one thing in common: the completion of substantial building projects.

Here are the details of the bishops' visitations and a description of the new facilities in these parishes and missions. This is followed by a summary of work done recently by the Department of Missions.

Contemporary design characterizes Church of the Resurrection, Hopewell Junction.

BISHOP DEDICATES CHURCH AT HOPEWELL JUNCTION

The new Church of the Resurrection, Hopewell Junction, was described by Bishop Donegan in his dedication sermon as "a rare combination of functional structure and aesthetic integrity."

But "its glory will never be in its walls, but in its extension—in the people who worship here and then go out and make this world a better place in which to be born," he told his listeners.

The dedication was held on Sunday, Sept. 27. The church is a mission of the diocese in Dutchess County, about 10 miles southeast of Poughkeepsie. The dark brown, redwood and cinder-block structure with deep-sloping eaves, topped by a redwood cross and "crown of thorns," is located on a 5½-acre hilltop site. It is about a mile from the small white frame church it replaces in the center of Hopewell Junction.

An overflow congregation of nearly 350 crowded into the building for the dedication. Its ordinary capacity is 220.

The Bishop's sermon dealt with the reasons why a church building exists at all—first and most important, to be a place where people worship; second, to be a source of knowledge; third, to be the place from which people go out and share what they have acquired. The Bishop was accompanied by Canon West, who served as his chaplain. Many area clergy accompanied the vicar, the Rev. Samuel Bird, in the procession.

The new church has been in use since August. A new rectory nearby was completed and occupied last winter. The church cost $70,000 to build, the rectory, $30,000. The land, which cost $15,000, was provided by the diocesan Department of Missions, which bought it some time ago in anticipation of a population increase in the area. Construction costs were met from sale of the old church, from money raised by members, and from a loan from the diocese's 175th Anniversary Revolving Fund.

The architect is William H. van Benschoten, who has designed a number of buildings in the diocese. The builder is Heitman and Heitman, brothers who live in Hopewell Junction. Their father, a cabinet maker, built the pews.

Resurrection has more than tripled its membership since Fr. Bird became the vicar two and a half years ago. Then there were 35 families and individuals on the rolls. Now there are

120. Aside from the vicar's diligent efforts, the increase is due to general population growth in the Poughkeepsie area. The Component Division of IBM has a plant for 1,500 workers 2½ miles from the church. When it is expanded, late in 1966, there will be at least 3,500. A new grade school is being erected right behind the new church. A town hall is to be built within a mile.

1,500 ATTEND DEDICATION AT ST. JOHN'S, YONKERS

"A step toward community betterment and service to youth" is the way Bishop Donegan described the new $350,000 parish house at St. John's, Getty Square, Yonkers. The Bishop officiated at dedication ceremonies on Sunday, Sept. 27.

Speaking to some 1,500 persons who thronged the historic church, the Bishop briefly touched on Yonkers' recent narcotics problem by saying that the city "has seen a heartbreaking teenage situation," and that St. John's has built "to help eliminate such tragedy." The Bishop also praised the "dedicated leadership" of the Rev. Lemuel J. Winterbottom, rector for the past 16 years, and he saluted the "far-reaching ministry of Oliver Shaw Newell," 23rd rector of St. John's, for whom the hall in the new parish house is named.

Mayor John E. Flynn, Congressman Robert R. Barry, city councilmen, county supervisors and other civic leaders attended.

The new building is built of brick and fieldstone to harmonize with the older parts of the church. Newell Memorial Hall, on the first floor, is a combination auditorium-gymnasium with a seating capacity of 500. Nine classrooms, which can be opened into four large meeting areas, are on the second floor. A number of memorials were given by individuals and parish organizations. One is the library, given in honor of Mr. Winterbottom, during whose rectorship the building program was begun.

Edward A. Fleagle of Yonkers was the architect. The James A. Jennings Co., Inc. of New Rochelle was the general contractor.

The oldest part of the original church was built in 1753 and consecrated in 1789 by the first Bishop of New York.

Mr. Winterbottom said that he and the vestry saw the need for the new facilities several years ago. There are over 600 children in the Church School, and they were meeting in badly outmoded facilities. But besides meeting parish needs, the new building was planned to coincide with the many improvements in the Getty Square area of Yonkers. The church is virtually at the doorstep of the city's first Urban Renewal project, Phillipse Towers, which last month began to receive its first tenants.

"What St. John's has done through the loyalty and sacrifice of hundreds of parishioners is part of the Urban Renewal of Yonkers," Mr. Winterbottom said. "We have confidence both in the present and the future of the Getty Square area as the heart of our community."

Assisting Bishop Donegan at the dedication service were other clergy of the parish: the Rev. Ellison F. Marvin, the Rev. H. Douglas Coleman and the Rev. Isaac Yohannan.

BISHOP BOYNTON BLESSES PEEKSKILL PARISH HOUSE

Bishop Boynton blessed the new parish house at St. Peter's, Peekskill, on Sunday, Sept. 27. He also dedicated to a new use as parish office and classrooms, the former rectory known as Howard House.

Kilted musicians from a Yonkers Scottish band led the procession at 11 a.m. from the church through the park to the new parish house and then into Howard House. Following this, a celebration of Holy Communion was offered by the rector, the Rev. Malcolm L. Foster, assisted by the Rev. John C. Anderson, assistant minister. Bishop Boynton preached.

The new parish house, a two-story, contemporary-style structure with redwood trim, is the first addition to the buildings of St. Peter's parish since 1913, when the Frost memorial parish house on Howard Street was opened. St. Peter's itself was founded nearly 200 years ago, and has been on the corner of Division and Howard Streets, in one building or another, since 1838.

The building project, under way for the past year, cost an estimated $70,000, including the acquisition of a new rectory. The parish house faces Pugsley Park. The building is constructed of cement blocks covered with stucco. It contains three large Church School classrooms, one of which may be divided, a sacristy, choir room and acolytes' robing room.

Howard House, possibly the oldest building in Peekskill, has been renovated to house Church School facilities from kindergarten through second grade.

Frank Edward Dushin was the architect. A. M. DeLuca Associates, Inc. was the general contractor. Both are from Peekskill.

TRANSFIGURATION PROJECT ENHANCES OLD BUILDING

Founder's Day at the Church of the Transfiguration, Manhattan, (The Little Church Around the Corner) had a particular significance this year. It marked the dedication of a two-story brick parish house adjoining the church.

Bishop Boynton led a procession of clergymen and a congregation of about 200 to the door of the new building following the 11 o'clock choral Eucharist on Oct. 4. Also participating were the Rev. Orin A. Griesmyer, rector; the Rev. Graham Butler-Nixon, of the Church of England in Australia and the Rev. Carleton J. Sweetser, Senior Protestant Chaplain for East Midtown Hospitals.

The new building cost $400,000. A neighborhood newspaper, describing the structure, remarked that "It is refreshing, in this city where additions and annexes to distinguished buildings have a tendency to look nothing like the original structure, to see an addition that really seems an integral part of the whole. This building was so cleverly planned that it even enhances this noted New York landmark." Holden, Egan, Wilson and Corser were the architects. The structure was the first reconstruction project at Transfiguration since 1900.

The building includes a recreation area, activity rooms, meeting room, cloister, sacristy, five classrooms with folding doors for space adjustment and a housekeeper's apartment. There is also a penthouse apartment for a curate.

Transfiguration, at 29th St. and Fifth Ave., has been the home of the Episcopal Actors' Guild for many years. According to Fr. Griesmyer, the church's special mission has been in the field of the theater. Now, however, a new profession, medicine and related fields, is being increasingly represented in the congregation as people associated with the large medical center nearby learn of the church and increasingly participate in its work.

VARIETY OF WORK IS DONE AT DIOCESAN MISSIONS

It's true that people and not buildings are the real substance of churches, but problems like leaky roofs and antiquated facilities have a way of plaguing many people who are in the process of trying to be churches.

In the Department of Missions' far-flung province, there were more than a dozen mission churches in need of repair, reconstruction or new work this year.

Since summer is the best time to do this kind of thing, here's what happened between June and the first of October:

All Saints, Staten Island—After long years of study and planning, the walls are up and the roof is on this new mission on Victory Blvd. Since it lost its church in a fire in 1958, All Saints has been without a permanent home. Completion is scheduled for December. The project will cost $120,000.

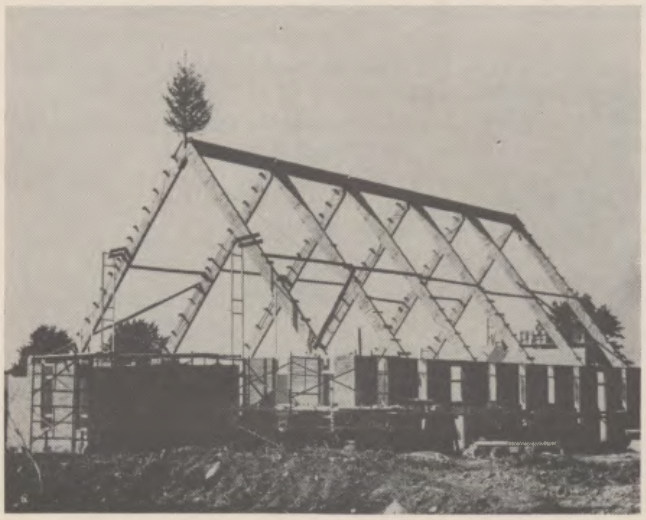
St. James, Dover Plains — The growth of this small rural mission in Dutchess County has made a new parish house necessary. It is a two-story, frame structure about 30 by 33 feet, adjoining the church. A kitchen, meeting room and study are on the upper level, and a large assembly hall, 19′ x 30′, is downstairs. Members of the church plan to do the painting and other finishing work.

St. Peter's, Manhattan—This mission, on West 20th Street near Ninth Avenue, needed plastering in the church, new windows and doors, and repairs to the tower windows. Largest portion of the job was the removal of glass from the lower tower windows and its replacement with a material that looks like wooden louvers. New main entrance doors were installed, and the many broken panes in the front windows were repaired with a more durable plexiglass. It's almost unbreakable.

Synod House—The leaky roof was repaired and the interior is being repainted and refurbished.

St. David's, Bronx—A three-story brick building across the street from the church was bought some time ago for use as a rectory and now is being renovated so that the Rev. John Wells and his family can live in it. Parish offices, a conference room and library will be on the first floor. The second and third floors will serve as living quarters.

St. Paul's, Bronx—A variety of projects was undertaken, including repair of the church and parish



*All Saints, Staten Island, is "topped out." When the highest point of a building is reached, contractors traditionally place a pine tree up there and have a small celebration. house roofs, termite control, repairing a fire escape, and doing other miscellaneous repairs. The interior of the church was painted.

St. John's-in-the-Wilderness — Repairs were made to the roof and other portions of the building.

Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center, Tuxedo Park—Several minor repairs and one big project—conversion of the heating system from coal to oil—accounts for the money the diocese spent on the Conference Center this summer.

St. Andrew's, Bronx—A new vestibule, necessary but not included when the church was first built, has been installed and the church windows have been weatherproofed.

St. Clement's, Manhattan — This old mission is being almost completely renovated. See pages 8 and 9.

Chapel of the Holy Name, Cragsmoor — Repairs were made to the front doors, a new roof was put on the sacristy and new back doors to the chapel were installed.

St. Edward the Martyr—Fireproof doors were installed between the church and rectory.

St. Margaret's, Bronx—Over 6,000 feet of new cement sidewalks laid.

Church of Christ the King, Stone Ridge—New parking lot installed.

The cost of the new buildings came to $132,500 and the repairs and renovations, $84,450. ■

In Brief...

■ HOW CAN YOU HELP a child overseas? The Committee on World Relief and Inter-church Aid of National Council reports that the best way at present is through projects supported by the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief. Persons who are interested may obtain a pamphlet entitled Second Mile Giving, which describes special projects in overseas schools and other programs. Write the Overseas Department, 815 Second Avenue, New York, 10017.

■ ALEC WYTON, Organist and Master of Choristers at the Cathedral, has been elected a Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music. It is an international organization limited to 50 members.

■ A TALKING BOOK edition of The Episcopalian, national church magazine, is being distributed by the Home Department, National Council of the Episcopal Church. It will be sent free to church members who by legal definition are blind.

This new service will supplement the edition, in Braille, of the Home Department's Church Herald for the Blind. Braille, however, is difficult to learn and is being widely replaced by recorded materials. Talking Book machines are provided free to all legally blind people through the state agencies designated as distributors by the Library of Congress—Division for the Blind. Legal blindness is defined as the inability to read ordinary newsprint even with the help of corrective lenses. All requests for subscriptions to the Talking Book edition of The Episcopalian should be addressed to The Home Department, Episcopal Church Center, 815 Second Avenue, N. Y., 10017.

■ THE DIOCESE of Western Michigan, at its 90th annual convention, voted to move the diocesan center from Grand Rapids to Kalamazoo. The decision to make Kalamazoo the see city was the result of several years of planning by various committees of church leaders. ■

The Churc
That Dares

THE CURTAIN WENT UP on a new theatre presentation October 30 on West 46th Street. The first-nighters were an enthusiastic crowd, and between the acts they gathered to nod in a pleased way and exchange such comments as "exciting idea," and "really a much-needed venture. . . ."

They were not simply referring to the play, although it was the modern American poet, Robert Lowell's hard-hitting drama, "The Old Glory." They were commenting on the fact that Lowell's play was starting a long-term run not in a theatre, but in a church!

The church, St. Clement's, Manhattan, is a rather nondescript brick building in the middle of a neighborhood known for years as Hell's Kitchen, a notoriously tough section of town. Located between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, the church was built around the turn of the century and survived many changes in the area. Between 1920 and 1962, it was "our church" for a slowly diminishing number of people from three congregations which had merged: St. Cornelius, which had occupied the building; St. Chrysostom's Chapel of Trinity Parish, whose building had been demolished, and St. Clement's, which moved up from Greenwich Village and gave its name to the new unit.

But as the years passed, families one by one left the neighborhood for the greener and more pleasant suburbs. Finally, so many people were coming from out of town just to worship on Sundays that during the week the church was closed. There was a good chance of its being closed entirely.

In 1962, the Rev. Sidney Lanier, who was then 39 and an assistant at St. Thomas, Manhattan, went to see the Bishop. "Let me go down to St. Clement's," he pleaded. "I have an idea."

Knowing that Mr. Lanier had an enormous interest in the theatre, and that he had certain startling, missionary views about a new kind of relationship between the Church and the theatre, Bishop Donegan listened.

It was his plan, Mr. Lanier told the Bishop, to establish a center for the arts, especially the drama. The theatre and the Church once drew their inspiration from identical sources, but today art and religion have become estranged, to the impoverishment of both, said the priest. The Church has neglected its obligation to support the artist's search for moral truth, he declared, adding that the theatre, for its part, has more and more cut itself off from its religious origins until it is no longer the mirror and conscience of its time—until it has become mediocre and trivial.

The Church cannot undertake this mission in a conventional way, Mr. Lanier further told the Bishop. It must experiment and find a new, mobile missionary style. Mr. Lanier is a dynamic man, fired with enthusiasm and very convincing. The Bishop appointed him as Vicar of St. Clement's.

And that was the beginning of a series of events which culminated in the first-night performance of "The Old Glory" on October 29. The play will continue for six weeks.

"The Old Glory" may be said to have marked the debut of The American Place Theatre, an organization which Mr. Lanier refers to as "a guest in the house." It is a separate theatrical organization devoted to the nurture of extraordinarily gifted and creative playwrights. The American Place Theatre "lives" at St. Clement's. It pays no rent, and it has its own trustees and advisors consisting of people like Tennessee Williams, Myrna Loy, Michael Tolan, Heywood Broun, William Francis Gibbs, August Heckscher and Alfred Kazin. But it will have much to do with the expected interaction between the Church and the theatre. The relationship between St. Clement's and The American Place Theatre already is very intimate. It is also difficult to describe.

It must be said that Mr. Lanier's ideas about the alliance between the Church and the theatre are so novel that some people are not sure they understand. "Is St. Clement's a church or a theatre?" they ask. "When do we get the commercial?" they say, meaning at what point does this church knuckle down to the basic job of converting people and counting new members?

Mr. Lanier is not sure that the Church's purpose is to convert people in the traditional way, not in the church on West 46th Street, at any rate. He sees the function of a Christian community as "a point of meeting and mutual strength and refreshment and sharing."

To Be Different

The Church and the theatre become unusual partners at St. Clement's, a small mission in the west forties

Architect's sketch of renovated chancel. The raised platforms will have seats instead of benches, however.

It is a group that "looks out to the world to find needs to respond to." He says, "When a writer of ability is writing his best, he is bringing to the surface problems that might not be directly expressed in Christian terms. But simply by being in the place where the writer is, the Church has great power. One cannot help absorb something from its presence, and vice versa."

No sooner had Mr. Lanier been named the new vicar than St. Clement's began to become a new kind of Sunday morning "home" for a new kind of people—actors, writers, designers, and others. Some of these newcomers have been Christians; some have not. They can never be sure what to expect on an average Sunday morning, although the order of the Communion service fixes the outline. There is also, every Sunday, a special prayer for members of the theatrical profession and a greeting, the ancient Pax Vobiscum — a double handclasp, passed from one member of the congregation to another. But sometimes the clergy wear vestments; sometimes they do not. Sometimes there is a "contemporary epistle," a reading from modern literature which it is felt will cast light upon the day's lesson. Before the Holy Communion, there is sometimes a play reading or a chancel drama.

One week a portion of Becket's "Waiting for Godot" was presented. Another time there was a reading of "Remembrance," from James Agee's "A Death in the Family." On still another Sunday a group of Broadway actors did the quarrel scene from Clifford Odets' social drama of the Depression, "Waiting for Lefty."

"Lefty," Mr. Lanier admitted, "was not nice-Nelly-ism or do-goodism." It is a stark play and its language is not meant for a Sunday School class. "But the quarrel had its own religious connotation," commented the New York Herald-Tribune the following morning.

Mr. Lanier says it has been interesting to analyze the composition of his growing congregation. Most are under fifty. There are more men than women. There are, in addition to theatre people, editors, patent attorneys, doctors, largely "people who have been put off by the Church in the past, but are still really concerned about the Christian gospel; self-examiners and Church-examiners." What is most interesting, Mr. Lanier says, is that St. Clement's seems to be able to stimulate people who have lost their vitality to work in other parishes. "St. Clement's retreads them and sends them back," he says.

A person who came into the St. Clement's story rather early is Mrs. Edwin S. Webster, Jr., widow of an investment banker. After her husband's death, she earned a Bachelor of Divinity degree at Union Theological Seminary, where she became an enthusiastic supporter of the drama program. A mutual friend introduced her to Mr. Lanier, and it became apparent that they had similar ideas about the relationship of the Church and the theatre. Besides being a financial supporter, she has continued to be involved as a member of Mr. Lanier's staff.

The idea for The American Place Theatre began during the winter of 1962 when Wynn Handman and Michael Tolan, a director and a Broadway actor, and Mr. Lanier discussed the need for a program to develop new playwrights. Mr. Lanier had met them through his wife, Nan, formerly Executive Secretary of the Actors Studio Playwrights Unit and now of the Actors Studio Theatre.

As they talked, the trio recalled the famous art gallery created some 25 years ago by Alfred Stieglitz, the photographer. It was called The American Place, and it was more than a gallery. It was a meeting place for artists of all kinds, and the source of germination for much that was exciting and valuable in the creative life of those days. The group asked itself why it could not create a new American Place, a sort of window-box for promising writers, where their creative talents could be encouraged and where bold new ideas could be exchanged. They obtained permission to use the name, "American Place", and the organization was born.

The yearly operating budget of the American Place Theatre will be approximately $125,000. Almost immediately grants have been forthcoming from the Rockefeller Foundation, Laurance Rockefeller and The Webster Benevolent Foundation. Last month the Ford Foundation announced a three-year grant of $225,000 to be used by The American Place Theatre for writers and their artistic development. As both St. Clement's and The American Place Theatre progressed, it became obvious that improvements to the old church building would be a necessity. For this project, too, funds came in rather quickly. The Webster Benevolent Foundation, the Diocese of New York, St. Thomas Church and a number of individual contributors joined forces to raise the necessary $73,500. National Council, through the support of Bishop Corrigan, head of the Home Department, also provided aid. Bishop Corrigan was emphatic that the enterprise was to be for the Church as it worked with the secular theatre. "This is not a religious drama group, is it?" he was careful to ask.

For weeks, with the opening of "The Old Glory" as the deadline, the church resounded with the clatter and buzz of hammers and power tools. The interior was completely renovated. The chancel was ripped up, although two square, gothic-style vestries, one in each corner, remain for dramatic and liturgical purposes. The altar was relocated and made free standing, and the chancel steps were moved forward. But the most ingenious and resourceful part of the design was the creation of movable platforms on which the seats slope down as theatre seats usually do. These platforms can be placed so that all seats face the chancel, or they can be placed amphitheater style with the altar toward the center of the church and seats on three sides.

So in its physical character at least, St. Clement's is both a church and a theatre. Mrs. Webster says, "The theatre helps us to find out what the Christian commercial is." Mr. Lanier adds, "So far as the theatricals are concerned, the audience participates simply by coming and listening. When a group of people become part of the creative process, they become a church." —Ruth Weber

Linden Morehouse Retires As Head of Family's Firm

Linden H. Morehouse of Mamaroneck, President of Morehouse-Barlow Co. since 1932, has resigned because of ill health. He was elected Chairman of the Board, effective Oct. 1, and will henceforth devote part time to editorial and production matters and to management consultation at the firm's main office at 14 E. 41st St., Manhattan.

The 80-year-old company, founded by Mr. Morehouse's grandfather as The Young Churchman Co., is the largest independent publisher and bookseller dealing primarily with the Episcopal Church. It is also a supplier of religious curriculum supplies, vestments and brassware to churches and church schools.

With Mr. Morehouse's resignation, his cousin, Clifford P. Morehouse of Katonah becomes President of the company. He, too, has been associated with the firm for many years and has been prominently active in the affairs of the Church. He is a former editor of The Living Church, the weekly Episcopal news magazine. At both the 1960 and 1964 General Conventions he was named, by acclamation, President of the House of Deputies, highest office in the Church that a layman can hold.

The other officers of the firm now are Harold C. Barlow, Vice President and General Manager; E. Allen Kelley, Secretary; and Ronald C. Barlow, Treasurer.

Linden Morehouse has been associated with Morehouse-Barlow Co. for 47 years. The nephew of its former president, Frederic C. Morehouse, he began work in 1917, at the age of 17, in the small bookstore then located in Milwaukee. He became vice president in 1925, and president upon the death of his uncle in 1932.

Mr. Morehouse has been the senior warden of St. Thomas's Church, Mamaroneck; a member of the Department of Christian Education of the Diocese of New York from 1944 to 1947, and a member of the Standing Committee from 1960 to 1964. From 1932 to 1952, he was the publisher of The Living Church, and secretary of the Church Literature Foundation from 1928 to 1952. He was editor of the Episcopal Church Annual from 1947 to 1955.

Effective Nov. 1, Mr. Morehouse also retired as President and Director of Morehouse-Barlow Co. of California, which maintains stores in San Francisco and Los Angeles. ■

St. Agnes Names Administrators

St. Agnes School, Albany, began the year with a new administration. Two men are at the helm for the first time in the history of the school. They are Hamilton H. Bookhout, former Supervising Principal of the Bethlehem Central School District, Delmar, N.Y., as the school's first headmaster; and the Rev. A. Orley Swartzenruber, former chaplain at The Darrow School, New Lebanon, N.Y., its first assistant headmaster.

Although it is an Episcopal, church-related school, St. Agnes is an independent institution welcoming students of all faiths. ■

Mission Services

A five-day evangelistic revival was held at St. Andrew's, Fifth Ave., and 127th St., Manhattan, from Oct. 19 through 23. The mission services each night were conducted by two members of the Church Army. The rector, the Rev. Irving Anthony, celebrated Holy Communion every morning at 7. The evening services started with community hymn singing at 7:30 p.m., followed by a prayer service, preaching and a question period. ■

CORRECTION

The evening session of the Diocesan School of Worship scheduled for Nov. 16 will be held at the Church of the Resurrection, 115 East 74th St., Manhattan, and not at Church of the Heavenly Rest as stated in last month's issue.

The School is being held on the first four Mondays in November with morning sessions at 10:30 a.m. at the Cathedral and evening sessions at 7:30 in four Manhattan churches. The theme is "Anglicans: Our Origins, Our Identity, Our Characteristics, Our Destiny," or "Self-understanding—A First Step in Ecumenics." The last session, on Nov. 23 at Trinity, Broadway and Wall St., will start with dinner at 6 p.m. followed by Holy Communion.

Parishes and People

● At Grace Church, Hastings, the Rev. Arthur R. Willis returned from a meeting about 3:30 one afternoon recently to find that the rectory door had been jimmied with such force that the framework was ripped from the plaster and the tongue of the heavy brass lock was bent. But nothing was disturbed and nothing was stolen. The rectory was exactly as it had been left by the rector at 10:30 that morning, except that the intruder unlocked all the doors from the inside.

● Considering that it was more than 75 years since the attic at St. John's-in-the-Village (Manhattan) had received a good cleaning, it seems to have been a fairly well kept place. Along with the dust, two curios turned up, the Rev. Charles H. Graf reports: a one-pint lemon soda bottle, Campfire brand, from the Carl H. Schultz Company, and a copy of Scribner's magazine from 1899, carrying a photograph of Col. Theodore Roosevelt and the Battle Flag of the Rough Riders. The attic was spruced up in preparation for a renovation program about to be started.

● From an Episcopal Churchwoman's notebook comes the story of this encounter between two people of different races—a cab driver and a lady passenger:

The lady, on her way to an ECW conference during the time that New York had two Hilton hotels, the Hilton and the Savoy Hilton, jumped into a taxi without realizing this. Upon arrival, she discovered that she had forgotten her wallet and that she had just enough money to pay the taxi fare. She looked around the lobby for the familiar faces she expected to see. None were there. She asked where the conference was, and the desk clerk said, "You're in the wrong Hilton."

Standing in front of the hotel somewhat shaken, she saw an empty taxi pull to a stop. Half musing to herself, she said, "I don't suppose you would take me to the Savoy Hilton . . ." "Sure," said the driver. "But I must tell you that I have no money," said the lady, explaining what had happened. To her amazement, the cabbie opened the door. "Jump in," he said. On the way, he asked her how she would get home. "My friends will take care of me," she assured him. But as he helped her out of the cab, he pressed a dollar bill into her hand, saying, "This will make sure you get home!"

● While on a European vacation this summer, the Rev. William F. Corker, Rector of St. Michael's, Manhattan, stopped in Hamburg, Germany, and ordered two new organs from the von Beckerath firm of organ builders. One, a one-manual, six-stop choir organ, is expected to reach this country in January or February. The second, a three-manual organ of 34 stops, will take three years to deliver. The smaller organ will take the place temporarily of a 50-year-old instrument that St. Michael's wishes to replace. When the big organ arrives it will be placed in the rear gallery of the church, and the small one will go in the chapel.

● St. Andrew's, Fifth Avenue and 127th Streets, Manhattan, has been busy for the past three years. Under the leadership of the Rev. Irving Anthony, the congregation liquidated an old debt of nearly $17,000, laid a new floor covering in the church, renovated all of its rooms and offices including the large auditorium, reactivated the carillon, and did exterior repairs. Everything seemed perfect. Then the old pipe organ broke down.

Undaunted, the congregation decided to buy a new one, and formed a committee to raise $47,000 in 2½ years. With pledges for $27,000, the go-ahead signal was given. First recital on the new Schantz organ will be held Advent Sunday, Nov. 29, at 4 p.m. Dr. Thomas Richner, Professor of Music at Columbia and Rutgers, will play. $14,000 must still be paid on the organ. Through 1,000 coin folders worth $10 when filled, it is anticipated that another $10,000 can be obtained. That leaves only $4,000. ■

Diocesan CSR Department Forms Alcohol Committee

The diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations has formed a new group, the Committee on Alcoholism, which will be responsible for leadership in the fields of alcohol education and alcoholic rehabilitation.

According to John Lassoe, Director of the Department, the Committee held its first meeting on Sept. 17 to begin the study of ways in which it can help diocesan clergy minister more effectively to alcoholics and their families.

The Rev. Samuel B. Bird, Jr., Vicar of Resurrection, Hopewell Junction, is the chairman. Members are the Rev. H. Gordon MacDonald, Jr., of St. Mark's, Yonkers; the Rev. Stanley Nelson, Chaplain at Grasslands Hospital, Valhalla; the Rev. William W. Reed of the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Parish; the Rev. William S. Reisman of St. Philip's, Garrison; the Rev. George J. Willis, Jr., of Calvary, Manhattan; Mrs. Lee A. Belford, Mrs. George Reynolds, Dr. Percy E. Ryberg and Mrs. Howard L. Ross, all of Manhattan; M. Mallory Gray of Briarcliff Manor and Philip Grossman of Yonkers. ■

New Department of Stewardship Holds Meeting, Forms Committees

"The Department of Stewardship shall . . . formulate and advance such programs and provide such materials as will assist the laity better to understand their personal obligation and commitment to work, pray and give for the spread of the Kingdom."

This is the first paragraph of the bylaws for a new department—the Department of Stewardship. Created at diocesan convention last spring, Stewardship previously operated as one of two divisions of the Department of Promotion. Now it is on its own.

At its first formal meeting in Cathedral House, the Department drafted its bylaws and planned its initial year's work as a separate entity. Bishop Donegan and his Administrative Assistant, Edmund J. Beazley, attended the meeting, at which the chairman, the Rev. George Regas, Rector of Grace Church, Nyack, presided. Eric Ley is Director of the Department. In addition to the chairman, there are nine members.

The specific duties of the Department of Stewardship involve the preparation and promotion of stewardship education programs to be used by congregations throughout the diocese. The Department will give "reasonable assistance" to clergy, vestries and advisory boards in conducting stewardship programs, and it will conduct education workshops for clergy and laity. Three standing committees have been formed. Each of the department members serves on one of these. They are:

- The Stewardship Education Committee, which carries the responsibility for leadership training in all of its aspects. Mr. Regas is the temporary chairman, and members are the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, Jr., Vicar of Intercession Chapel, Trinity Parish, Manhattan; the Rev. Robert N. Willing, Rector of Trinity, Mount Vernon; and Charles Flynn of St. James the Less, Scarsdale.

- Committee on Gifts and Legacies, which will "advise and assist in preparation and presentation of methods and materials to promote a greater sensitivity among the laity to making the local parish church an important beneficiary in wills and testaments." This committee consists of two laymen, George Chapman of Christ Church, Bronxville, chairman, and Alexander Wilkie of St. Stephen's, S.I.

- Committee on Promotion, which will make the aims and services of the department known in a variety of ways. The Rev. Charles H. Graf, Rector of St. John's-in-the-Village, is chairman, and the other members are the Rev. Samuel B. Bird, Vicar of Resurrection, Hopewell Junction; the Rev. George Brätt, Rector of Christ Church, Tarrytown, and Alexander Brown of Trinity, Pawling. ■

Bishop Dedicates Cathedral Carving

The official Coat of Arms of the Bishop of New York which has been carved above the west portico of the Cathedral Church was dedicated by Bishop Donegan on Thanksgiving Day.

The arms were cut into a limestone slab at the top of the gable of the porch over the central portal. These arms are set between the shields of the City of New York and the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine. The vast scale of the building required that the arms be eight feet high and six feet wide. After completion of the model, it took the stonecutter two months to complete the work on the site.

The whole work is a memorial to Mrs. Pembroke Hand Donegan, the Bishop's mother. At the time of Mrs. Donegan's death, numbers of friends had contributed towards a memorial. The Bishop personally added the funds necessary to cover the total cost of the work, and the Trustees of the Cathedral approved the whole project last spring. ■

The angelic promise of peace and good will toward men may sound empty and unreal in this world of ours—a world divided by strife, and suspicion, and the self-assertiveness and ill will which lead to war. Nevertheless, the message of the angels is no more unreal this Christmas than it was on the first Christmas Eve.

The peace of God never meant what the world means by peace. The world talks of peace as merely the absence of military hostilities, the absence of disorder, the absence of active oppression. This is not peace as the Bible understands it. The peace of the Old and the New Testaments, of which the angels sang, is the peace of God which passeth understanding—which goes beyond human reason; a peace which keeps the heart and mind in the knowledge of God and of his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

When the question is asked, "Why has Christianity not been able to abolish war and bring about a world of settled and secure peace?" it suggests that Christianity is an outside power interested in forcing men to be good. But Christianity is not a method for control over men. It is a life, and a love, expressing itself in men—in men of good will. This is the only way to peace, the only remedy for the troubles of our own time.

Only good will in action on a global scale can dissolve the barriers of race and class and nation that keep men apart and embitter life. Good will is the divine way for peace—the peace for which mankind longs. It is the way our Lord took, the way of love, of forgiveness, of humility and patience. The failure is not of God but of us.

The world will be at peace to the extent that you and I are at peace. And we are only at peace as we are, in the words of the angels, "men of good will." Peace begins in the human will. And it is from that beginning that it can reach out into our world. As we commit ourselves to Him whose birth the angels hailed, He fills our hearts with that spirit of mercy, of love and truth which is the only way by which the will becomes good.

At Christmastide we discover afresh the reason for our faith in the power of good will, and we pray that Christ who came to draw all men to Him will guide our feet into the way of peace.

And so, a Blessed Christmas to you all. May God guide you and protect you throughout the coming year.

Faithfully your friend and Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

MRI to Be Triennial Theme

During the next three years, the initials MRI will become a basic part of Episcopal Churchwomen's vocabulary. The initials stand for the first words of "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ," the title of the Anglican Congress document which was endorsed with such fervor at General Convention.

The Triennial meeting of the women of the Church, held simultaneously with Convention, adopted MRI as its theme for the next triennium. In doing so, the Triennial added the sub-title: "What this means to us as individuals in our home, our neighborhood, our parish, convocation and diocese; and its significance to our special commitments as Episcopal Churchwomen."

Five delegates and two alternates from this diocese attended the Triennial. Their pictures are on page 6. Leading the delegation was Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., diocesan President, who served as vice chairman of the Committee on Appreciation during the meeting.

Without doubt the most gratifying event for the New York delegation was the election of Mrs. William L. Gardner to the General Division of Women's Work, Executive Council (formerly National Council.) She was among 16 candidates to be nominated and among eight to be elected. Mrs. Gardner, a communicant at St. Philip's, Manhattan, is Parish Assistant and Director of Christian Education in that parish. She will serve a three-year term. More than 10,000 women from this diocese had a part in the United Thank Offering MUTUAL RESPONSIBILITY AND INTERDEPENDENCE IN THE BODY OF CHRIST.

These words, the title of the now-famous document produced by the Anglican Congress of 1963, were key words at the 1964 General Convention which ended Oct. 23 in St. Louis.

Less than three days after he returned from General Convention, Bishop Donegan took the first step toward making Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence (MRI) an integral part of the program in this diocese. He named a 20-member Diocesan Commission on MRI to begin an immediate study of how the Diocese of New York should proceed. The first meeting of this Commission was to be held Dec. 3.

The Bishop said that the Commission's first task will be the development of convocation conferences on MRI. These conferences will be attended by clergy, wardens and vestry, ECW officers, ELNY representatives and other delegates named by each parish, aided parish or mission. A chairman for MRI will be appointed in each convocation, to be assisted by the dean of the convocation, the ECW chairman and the ELNY chairman, the Bishop said.

In a statement to The Bulletin shortly after his return from Convention, Bishop Donegan said he believes MRI is the most significant and profound development to take place in the Anglican Communion within our generation.

"MRI has to do with a basic truth —that we are our brother's keeper," said the Bishop, adding, "What we do now, in this diocese, in our churches and homes, is tremendously important. 'A church that lives to itself will die by itself,' the Archbishop of Canterbury has eloquently pointed out. But if we earnestly and prayerfully try to learn what true fellowship in Christ means, then we will not only have made our own days more productive, but we also will have begun to create a world fit for our descendants to live in."

The Bishop reported that General Convention itself had established a commission to coordinate the national Church's response to MRI. The Convention's acceptance of the document was one of the last items on the 10-day agenda of both the House of Bishops and House of Deputies. Its adoption actually means that the entire scope of the Episcopal Church's work will be centered around the development of a whole new range of missionary strategy, both at home and overseas. Part of this strategy involves the raising of $6 million during the next three years. But it was repeatedly emphasized that money is not the index of MRI.

Bishop Donegan said: "It is more than the exchange of money and manpower. It is a summons to a renewal of church life at every level. This will call for courage and vision and may well result in a drastic reorgan-

Here's a Glimpse of the New Presiding Bishop

Presiding Bishop John Elbridge Hines. What kind of person is he?

The question was asked hundreds of times in the days following his election at General Convention in St. Louis, and it probably will be asked many times more until some measure of the "new PB" begins to percolate through the Church.

Bishop Hines, at 54, is the youngest man in Episcopal Church history to serve as chief pastor and administrative leader. In 1945, when he was consecrated as Bishop Coadjutor of Texas, he was only 34. He became Bishop of Texas in 1955.

He was born in Seneca, S. C., the son of a country doctor. He claims always to have been "ecumenically-minded,"—he was born into a family consisting of nine children, five Episcopalians like their mother (who "single-handedly ran" the Seneca parish), and four Presbyterians like their father. Bishop Hines was a pre-med student at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., but after receiving his bachelor's degree entered Virginia Theological Seminary. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1934. The following year he married the former Helen Louise Orwig of St. Louis. Before going to Texas, he served parishes in St. Louis and Hannibal, Mo., and Augusta, Ga. Bishop Hines is known throughout the Church as one of its most "well-rounded" men and as a "fighter" for what he believes. In his home diocese, he has the reputation of being a liberal and an advocate of racial justice. His ringing declaration, "All men are one in Christ," voiced during the press conference held immediately after his election, is well known in Texas. It has not always

CONVENTION

MRI—Adopted the report of the Committee on Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ.

Presiding Bishop—Elected the Rt. Rev. John E. Hines, Bishop of Texas, as 22nd Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church.

Independence for Brazil—On a resolution introduced by Bishop Donegan, voted to create an independent national Church in Brazil. It comprises the three existing missionary districts, and will be the 19th autonomous Church in the worldwide Anglican Communion.

Program—The national Church's program for the next three years will cost $12,777,017 in 1965, $13,399,351 in 1966 and $13,922,675 in 1967.

New Name—The National Council of the Episcopal Church was renamed the Executive Council. Effective immediately.

No Women—The proposal to admit women as deputies to General Convention was defeated by a slim margin in the lay order. Efforts to permit women to be deputies date back to 1952.

New Province—A Ninth Province, consisting of eight Caribbean missionary districts, was formed. Included in the new Province are Central America, Colombia, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Mexico, Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Protestant?—Compromised on the recurring proposals to change the name of the Church. Voted to "keep the name as it has been but to accept the name 'Episcopal Church in the U. S. A.' for ordinary usage. "This must be acted upon again in 1967 but for all practical purposes is in effect now.

Election of Bishops—Four were elected: Bishop Arnold M. Lewis, Suffragan Bishop of the Armed Forces, a newly created position; Bishop F. Reus-Froylan, Bishop Coadjutor of Puerto Rico; Bishop George T. Masuda, North Dakota; Bishop James C. Wong, Missionary Bishop of Taiwan.

Prayer Book Changes—Constitutional amendment passed authorizing trial use of certain changes in the Prayer Book calendar and Collects, Epistles and Gospels for lesser feasts and fasts.

which was presented in Kiel Auditorium on Oct. 15. The nation-wide total was $4,790,921.51. Of this, $217,215.05 came from the Diocese of New York.

Two resolutions, one proposed by the ECW board of this diocese and the second proposed by Province 2, of which it is a part, were passed during the Triennial. The first urged that work in urban areas continue to be given a prominent place in the consideration of the Church's program for the next three years. The second proposed that the General Division of Women's Work appoint a committee to make a critical analysis of the ECW organizational structure.

Mrs. Gurney Williams of Chappaqua, President of Province 2, presided at the session at which representatives of the Province 2 missionary districts gave reports.

In response to a resolution offered by the ECW executive board of this diocese in 1961, a new national by-law was adopted. It eliminates the provision for a sixth delegate to the Triennial to represent racial minority groups within a diocese.

WHAT MUTUAL RESPONSIBILITY IS AND IS NOT

"It is not a neat, promotional campaign to strengthen the Anglican Communion—it is rather a summons to the Anglican Communion to be true to itself and to the Body of Christ of which it is one, visible company. It is not an appeal for funds, open or disguised—the only mention of money is an interim, preliminary, emergency statement of the needs of the younger churchs now, to hold the fort until "mutual responsibility" itself can begin to establish new vitality and new relationships. It is not a program for more overseas missions—it starts with our overseas relationships, but only as a kind of mirror in which we may better see ourselves, and offer ourselves afresh in a more devoted and faithful obedience abroad and at home. It is not a plea for the revival of old confessional attitudes—it is a new statement of the profound ecumenical implications of full communion. It is not an adventure in centralism—it is a resolute and costly attempt to take seriously freedom of younger nations and their churches."—Bishop Bayne

HIGHLIGHTS

Civil Disobedience—House of Deputies voted down a "statement of Christian conscience" urging Episcopalians to react against laws or social customs which are "in basic conflict with the concept of human dignity under God." The motion stated that churchmen "ought to obey God rather than men." The House of Bishops later issued its own position statement on "Christian Obedience." The statement urged obedience to the laws of God even if this obedience means obeying God rather than man.

Anti-Semitism—Both houses adopted a statement condemning the centuries-old attitude that charges the Jews with deicide. The statement strongly condemns anti-Semitism.

Quota to Go—Present quota system of financing the work of the Church both at home and abroad probably will be supplanted by a "partnership plan" in 1967. A partnership plan means that the Church at every level will pass along an amount equal to the amount spent on itself.

NCCC Report Reaffirmed—In spite of several resolutions calling for withdrawal of the Episcopal Church from the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., the Convention adopted a report which included a statement strongly calling for continuance of NCCC membership and support.

Open Communion—No action. The House of Bishops agreed on a statement favoring a broader position on open Communion but the Deputies were unable to concur.

Translation of Bishops—Preliminary action favorable on a proposal to allow diocesan bishops to transfer from one diocese to another. Final decision in 1967.

Family Planning—Reaffirmed resolutions passed at the Lambeth Conference and previously by the Episcopal Church pointing out that there are special circumstances in which family planning by artificial means should be approved.

Next Convention—Seattle, Wash., was selected as the probable General Convention site for 1967.

made him popular. He has not always won the favor of right-wing conservatives, either. On the other hand, he has been described as "a prophet with the courage to differ from many of his contemporaries" and "a person who exhibits a high regard for the integrity of persons. . ."

In his personal affairs, Bishop Hines is a well-organized man who maintains a demanding work schedule yet manages never to seem hurried. Among his enthusiasms are classical music, foreign cars, tennis and golf, and antique furniture.

He and Mrs. Hines have five children: one daughter, Nancy, who is now Mrs. Taylor K. Smith; and four sons, Michael John, married and a student in Baylor Medical School; John Christopher, serving with the U. S. Army; John Moore, a student at Duke University; and John Stephen, a high school sophomore at St. Stephen's Episcopal School, Austin, Texas.

Bishop Hines is the founder of St. Stephen's School, a highly respected church-related school. He has made his diocese's college chaplaincy program one of the strongest in the Church. He also has led work in the areas of urban ministry and theological education. Nationally, he has helped guide the destiny of the Executive Council (formerly the National Council) by serving for two six-year terms. Most recently he was Home Department chairman. As chairman of the Presiding Bishop's Strategic Advisory Committee, Bishop Hines has been instrumental in planning the Church's long-range strategy. He was one of the first bishops to endorse MRI after the 1963 Anglican Congress.

When he was elected on Oct. 17 as the 22nd Presiding Bishop, succeeding the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, Bishop Hines remarked, "It is an awesome thing to hear behind me the footsteps of great men." The several thousand Episcopalians who greeted him in Kiel Auditorium responded to his appearance with a prolonged standing ovation — applause and cheers. Then, with apparently no cue, came the full-throated chorus "Praise God from whom all blessings flow . . ."

The new Presiding Bishop will be installed on Wednesday, Jan. 27, at the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, Washington, D. C. ■

Bishops Issue 4 Position Papers

Four "position papers" of the House of Bishops are included in a Convention summary being mailed to all parishes by the Church's Executive Council. (A "position paper" is a statement expressing the bishops' views.) The papers are: "Anti-Semitism," "Christian Obedience," "Faith," and "Poverty."

The bishops said anti-Semitism is "a direct contradiction of Christian doctrine," and that "The charge of deicide . . . is a tragic misunderstanding of the inner significance of the crucifixion."

On Christian Obedience: Christians may "reserve the right to obey God rather than man," but they must a) accept the penalty, b) be non-violent, and c) "exercise severe restraint . . ."

On Faith: ". . . For us the criterion of what constitutes the Christian Faith is the corporate consciousness of the Body guided by the Spirit down the ages, in preference to the necessarily limited views of any man or generation living or dead."

On Poverty: ". . . this has become a moral issue to be faced not only in the lives of Christians but in the corporate behavior of the Church." ■

ization of the structure of the Church and its program in order to communicate the Gospel against the social background and changed conditions in the world in which we live."

Bishop Bayne, who was for some years the Executive Officer of the Anglican Communion and is now Director of the Overseas Department of the Executive Council, told a joint session of Convention that ". . . in the end, mutual responsibility turns out to be a program about ourselves, about our own discipleship, about the life and witness of our own Church, in our own land . . . The point is, you can't get rid of mutual responsibility by giving a little more money. It is a radical challenge to personal service, to conversion, to a new start . . . a renewal."

Bishop Thomas H. Wright of East Carolina, chairman of the committee which presented MRI to the Convention, described "renewal" as a process which includes better training for the laity and better use of them in Christ's service; reorganization of parishes "around things that are important to God and man, rather than irrelevant activities"; and a "stronger life of prayer and sacrament, a greater understanding of what it means to be a Christian which will give us a new awareness of the great fact of our baptismal brotherhood with non-Anglican Christians." His committee consisted of four bishops, six priests and 10 laymen.

One of the laymen, Prime F. Osborn, III, vice-president and general counsel for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company, delivered an eloquent address, using as his point of departure recent news events, such as the slaying of Catherine Genovese while 38 people heard her scream and did nothing. "Not only are we not our brother's keeper—we just don't give a darn about him," asserted Mr. Osborn. "We have lost the concept of Christianity as a way of living. The Christian Church, as we all well know, is losing out as a major factor in the lives of men . . . I am convinced that God gave man the right and opportunity to let the world go to the devil. The dark ages can return—it is up to us to avoid this."

The House of Bishops' pastoral letter, which must be read in all churches throughout the nation, also contains many references to MRI.

A summary of the most important items of business at the Convention will be found on pages 6 and 7. Since the daily newspapers have already covered some aspects of the Convention in detail, the rest of this article will deal with items of particular interest to the Diocese of New York.

One of the chief events was that for the second time Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse was elected, by acclamation, as President of the House of Deputies. Actually, because of a new ruling, Dr. Morehouse was elected twice. The first time applied to this year's Convention. The second applied to the Convention of 1967. The Deputies had decided that it would be more efficient to elect officers before the end of each Convention rather than at the start of the next one. This time the elections overlapped.

Another New York layman to be elected at Convention was Charles Bound of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco. He will serve a six-year term on the national Church's Executive Council.

The Convention elected two men as trustees of General Seminary. They are Leland Brown, vestryman at St. Matthew's, Bedford, and Frederick G. Atkinson, vestryman at Heavenly Rest, Manhattan.

On the controversial issue of admitting women as delegates to the Convention, the New York contingent was on record as having supported this proposal. At the diocesan convention last May, this diocese expressed itself as being in favor of women delegates.

The 20 men asked to be members of the Bishop's Commission on MRI are:

The Ven. Richard E. McEvoy, Archdeacon of New York; the Rev. Canon Howard Johnson, Canon Theologian of the Cathedral; ten rectors: the Rev. Canon John Heuss, Trinity, Manhattan; the Rev. Dr. Frederick Morris, St. Thomas, Manhattan; the Rev. Clifford Lauder, All Souls, Manhattan; the Rev. Bernard Hemsley, St. Andrew's, S. I.; the Rev. Perren Hayes, St. Stephen's, Bronx; the Rev. Allan Wentt, St. Luke's, Bronx; the Rev. Arthur Hargate, St. Matthew's, Bedford; the Rev. Raymond Ferris, Christ Church, Bronxville; the Rev. Joseph Matthews, Grace Church, Middletown, and the Rev. Rhys Williams, Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; and the Rev. Lloyd Uyeki, Vicar of St. Gregory's, Woodstock.

Also, Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., President of the Diocesan Board of Episcopal Churchwomen; Mrs. William L. Gardner of St. Philip's, Manhattan, member of the General Division of Women's Work, Executive Council; Mrs. Landes Lewitin, member of the Triennial UTO Committee; John Murphy, Chairman of the Diocesan Board of the Episcopal Laymen of New York; Dr. Charles Lawrence, vestryman at St. Paul's, Spring Valley; Charles Bound, warden at St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, and member of the Executive Council; and Edmund Beazley, Administrative Assistant to the Bishop. Bishop Donegan will serve as chairman of the Commission, with Bishop Boynton, vice chairman and Bishop Wetmore, secretary. ■

Library Receives Encyclopaedia

The Cathedral Library has been given the 1964 edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica by Mrs. Frank H. Merrill of Baltimore, Md. Her late husband was once editor of the diocesan Bulletin and executive secretary of what was then known as The Program of the Church.

The Cathedral has announced its grateful acknowledgment of this gift, which fills a long-standing need. The Library, which is located on the first floor of Diocesan House, is open Monday through Friday. ■

Deputies Comment on the Convention

What ideas did New York's delegation to the House of Deputies bring back from St. Louis? The Bulletin asked each of them to say, in a brief sentence or two, what he considered most significant. Here are the answers:

Paul Anderson: "I think the most significant action was a negative one, the unfortunate action refusing women the right to be deputies. Of most significance to me as a layman was the action on the preamble to the constitution of the Church, authorizing alternative use of the words, 'Episcopal Church.' MRI is tremendously significant, but the problem is how to make it stick. . . ."

Charles Bound: "My answer is MRI—the astonishing document passed in spite of the negativism and conservatism so evident at Convention . . . MRI means individual responsibility. It means St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, where I am a member; it means every other church in the diocese. Also significant was the emphasis on ecumenicity. It came through loud and clear, too. But it is very much tied into MRI."

Judge Thurgood Marshall: "Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence. I think this is more important in this diocese than in a lot of places. There's a lot more that we can do."

Clifford Morehouse: "I would list the important actions as 1) MRI, 2) the new Presiding Bishop, and 3) relations with the National Council of Churches. With MRI in 1963, the Anglican world was stirred by a call to a new era. Now we have spelled out what MRI means for us. It is not primarily a financial matter, but a responsibility placed upon the entire Church for reconsideration of its priorities in work and worship. . . ."
About the NCC: "The Church . . . has rejected demands . . . that we withdraw, and has affirmed its determination to take an even greater part in the cooperative efforts of American Christianity. Also, it has instructed our delegates . . . to clarify this Church's stand, and to dissociate it from any programs or pronouncements not reflecting the considered judgment of the Church's official agencies."

The Rev. John V. Butler: "A heightened ecumenical interest and a strong faith in MRI. These two are not unrelated."

The Rev. Powel M. Dawley: "The restless turbulence of this Convention is what I will long remember, although I do not think this is necessarily discouraging. It may mean that the Episcopal Church is going through the painful process of trying to grasp positively the nettle of some of the most difficult issues facing the Church in our time. I believe one of the most significant accomplishments was the enthusiastic acceptance of the challenge of MRI."

The Rev. Canon John Heuss: "The election of a new presiding bishop and the presentation of the MRI report. I think the various resolutions passed jointly by the Bishops and Deputies dealing with social questions are of great significance. I also think the adoption of the triennial budget was important, distributing as it does a 15% increase over the three-year period. On MRI, my feeling is that unless we get to work pretty soon in reorganizing the administrative pattern of the whole Anglican Communion, MRI is likely to be one of these things that lasts for five or ten years, then dies out. . ."

The Rev. John M. Krumm: "Most significant, I am afraid, was the gap between clergy and laity in the area of Christian social ethics. . . . What a judgment is on our role as teachers that the laity could vote down overwhelmingly a balanced and sane resolution on civil disobedience, an action which in effect repudiates the gospel injunction to "obey God rather than man." The clergy must take more seriously their obligation to lead our people . . . to an understanding of the relation of Christian ethics to social and political issues." ■

Bishop Praises EMS Women At Fifth Annual Luncheon

Nearly 400 persons, including members of the Episcopal Mission Society Woman's Council, EMS chaplains and special guests, attended the fifth annual Woman's Council luncheon held in the ballroom of the Hotel Plaza on Oct. 28.

Bishop Donegan, who was observing the 17th anniversary of his consecration on that day, was the main speaker. He paid tribute to the Woman's Council for the wide range of activities in which it is engaged. The Council, he said, has given women in the diocese an opportunity to serve the Church in many new and useful ways. He added that the possibility of forming a Men's Council is being explored.

Mrs. Gurney Williams, Chairman of the Woman's Council, reported briefly on the year's activities.

In a brief report, the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, EMS director, announced that Church World Service, an interdenominational agency, has taken over the Port and Immigration work. Mr. Bonacker explained that this work has always been more ecumenical than denominational and that it therefore seemed logical for Church World Service, which is an arm of the National Council of Churches, to do the work. Miss Dorothy Bigelow, who was in charge of Port and Immigration, is now Household Manager at St. Barnabas House, Mr. Bonacker announced.

Mr. Bonacker presented five citations for outstanding service to the Society. The recipients are Mrs. Richard W. Wilson, Mrs. Samuel W. Eager, Mrs. Raymond Youmanns, Mrs. William C. Dickey and Mrs. Frederic R. King. ■

Clergy Changes

The Rev. Messrs. Leonel L. Mitchell, from rector, Christ Church, Warwick, to rector, St. Luke's, Beacon; William E. Ridgeway, no longer rector at St. Thomas, New Windsor, but continues as rector, St. George's, Newburgh.

The Rev. Wayne R. Schmidt, formerly assistant minister, St. James the Less, Scarsdale, is priest-in-charge at St. Paul's, Pleasant Valley. A previous statement that he is at St. Paul's, Spring Valley, was incorrect.

OBITUARY

The Rev. E. Warren Cromey, who retired in August as Episcopal Mission Society chaplain at the Bird S. Coler Hospital, Welfare Island, on Oct. 10. His son, the Rev. Robert W. Cromey, was formerly Rector of Holy Nativity, Bronx. ■

the QUESTION is ...

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

In some churches recently I've seen reredos that go around the sides of the altar. What was the purpose of this?

In the strict sense, what you saw was not a reredos. What you saw would have been a curtain hanging behind the altar and curtains hanging on either side of the altar. This is the arrangement often found in medieval English churches, and is commonly described as an English Altar. Actually, in ancient days, originating in Byzantium, there was a great canopy over the altar. This canopy, called a ciborium, had horizontal rods connecting the four columns which supported it, and from these rods, curtains were suspended. The whole structure was adopted in imitation of the setting for the imperial throne. The curtains were closed during the most solemn moments of the service, and the deacon, "the angel of the congregation" —in Eastern terms this means ambassador—moved in and out of the area, whereas the bishop and priests stayed inside.

In the West, the top of the canopy gradually moved up to become the vault, and only the lower posts were left. In England, the side curtains and the back curtains, called respectfully the riddel curtains and the dossal curtains, were continued, whereas in the East the three back curtains disappeared, and the front curtains developed into the great screen of icons which soon became identified with the chancel screen of the early Church.

In certain types of buildings this form of altar is extremely effective, since it tends to break up any horizontal space which is too great.

Council Gives Eisenhower 'Family of Man' Medallion

General Dwight Eisenhower was the recipient of the second annual "Family of Man" award given by the Protestant Council of the City of New York at a dinner on Oct. 28 at the Hotel Astor. Since the former President was in the hospital on that night, his son, Lieut. Col. John Eisenhower, appeared in his behalf.

Col. Eisenhower also delivered his father's prepared address to an audience of some 3,000 guests. He made a vigorous plea for a new approach to the global problems of war and race prejudice.

The award, a gold medallion, was given in recognition of Gen. Eisenhower's "life-long dedication and contribution to the principles of freedom and humanity throughout the world." The first recipient was the late President Kennedy. This year's presentation was made by John Hay Whitney, dinner chairman.

Four citations in the form of $5,000 grants also were made for outstanding "examples of excellence." They went to Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson, world peace; TV Channel 13, education; Edward R. Murrow, communications; and Chief Albert John Luthuli of South Africa, President General of the now banned African National Congress, human relations. Dr. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Manhattan, is President of the Protestant Council. He described the gathering as "a striking example of the growing ecumenical spirit of our times, drawing together many adherents of the three major faiths." ■

Critics Lead Film Series

The new rector at Holy Rood Church, Fort Washington Ave. and 179th St., Manhattan, was looking for a program series that would attract not only his parishioners but also people in the neighborhood on whom, he felt, Holy Rood should be having more impact.

The rector, the Rev. Nicholas H. Holt, who had done considerable work with films while taking his master's degree at Union Theological Seminary, arranged for the showing of five award-winning movies: "Question 7," "The Savage Eye," "Hand in Hand," "A Raisin in the Sun" and "The Oxbow Incident." He also asked four top film critics and a professor to lead a discussion after each film. The series was called "The Film—The Faith."

If attendance is any criterion, the program was a success. The largest crowd was 140 for "A Raisin in the Sun," while the average ran between 40 and 50 people, consisting of a core of parishioners and what seemed to be a different group of outsiders each time, Fr. Holt reports. The discussions were lively. The one on "Raisin" with David Slavitt, film critic for Newsweek, lasted until 12:30 a.m., the rector said.

Dr. Tom F. Driver of Union Theological Seminary led the discussion on "Question 7," Fred Myers of Christianity and Crisis was the guest for "The Savage Eye," Allan Morrison of Ebony Magazine came for "Hand in Hand," and Liz Smith of Cosmopolitan led the discussion on "The Oxbow Incident." ■

2 From Diocese Take CPC Posts

Two women from this diocese have been named to positions of significance in the national organization of the Church Periodical Club.

Mrs. Clifford Morehouse, Director of CPC in the Diocese of New York for the past year and a half, has been appointed Chairman of the National Books Fund Committee. This committee, which meets monthly at 815 Second Ave., is the core of the Church's national Periodical Club operation.

Mrs. Rudolf F. Mattesich, CPC Director in this diocese for six years, has been elected First Vice President of the national organization and will be its representative to the General Division of Women's Work of the Executive Council (formerly National Council.) ■

Ann Willis 'Gets the Story'

Ordination anniversaries are pretty much routine assignments for most daily newspapers, but the Herald Statesman in Yonkers recently handled the 30th anniversary of the Rev. Arthur R. Willis, Rector of Grace Church, Hastings, in an unusual way.

Fr. Willis' daughter, Ann, is a staff reporter for the Statesman. The city editor assigned her to "get the story." Here, in part, is what Ann wrote:

"From what Pop told me (I hadn't thought to ask him before), he never wanted to be anything but a good priest and pastor. As most people know, the priesthood is a 'calling,' but with the exception of Cecil B. DeMille's extravaganzas, it is seldom dramatic. In Pop's case it was a growing awareness from the time he was 16 that he had a particular vocation in life.

"I asked him what aspect of his work in the ministry has had the greatest appeal. He said institutional work (for quite awhile he was a member of the bishop's staff in the Diocese of Chicago and worked with prisoners, mental patients, TB patients, and other dependent people) was probably the most natural type of work he had done. 'Mainly,' he said, 'because ministering to people's real needs and not their whims and prejudices is more likely in such situations.'

"Pop got pretty excited when I pressed him to tell me what he didn't like about the ministry. 'Sure I have my gripes,' he said, 'who doesn't? Mainly, they take the form of parents who let little Johnnie and Susie decide for themselves whether they shall receive the Church's instruction and ministrations, people who contribute depression-sized offerings in boom times, and those who want to be patrons but have no time to be penitents. The list is long, but mercifully my list of thanksgivings and blessings is longer.' "

Ann asked, "And what do you consider your blessings?" She said he replied, "First of all, a lively, steadfast and growing faith in the Lord; secondly, a never-ending amazement that I was called to do this job, and thirdly, my wonderful wife and family, and a host of friends of all sizes, faiths and colors."

She continues: "Because Pop counts me as a blessing, I would like to add a few words on being a clergyman's child. From the time I was old enough to understand the eternal question, 'What's it like to be a P.K. (Preacher's Kid)?' I have wanted to answer what I really think. Now I will. It means to be different — and I thank God for it. Living in a goldfish bowl makes putty or character out of anyone. If living in a God-centered atmosphere can't teach one values—nothing ever will. I wouldn't have wanted anything changed in my crazy mixed-up, crisis-ridden childhood—and I hope I speak for other minister's kids."

The Rev. Mr. Willis was born in Kidderminster, England, was brought to the United States as a child, and grew up in Amsterdam, N.Y. After high school he worked in a bank for three years and then went to St. Stephen's College (now Bard) and Seabury-Western Theological Seminary. He was ordained in 1934. ■

Organ Dedicated At St. Paul's

St. Paul's Chapel of Trinity Parish observed the 198th anniversary of its dedication on Nov. 1 with the dedication of a new organ. The Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity, preached, and an organ recital by John Upham, St. Paul's organist, followed. The organ is a modern counterpart of the instruments used during the 17th and 18th centuries, when organ music reached its highest development. There is a trend nowadays to return to this type of organ. The instrument at St. Paul's is believed to be the first complete one of this type in the New York area. It may be heard in weekly half-hour recitals on Wednesdays at 12:30 p.m. The chapel is at Broadway and Fulton St. ■

Three Dutchess Join Forces for

Story and photos by Ruth Weber

A group of Dutchess County parents, convinced that religion and learning belong together, have founded a new school.

It is called the Dutchess Episcopal Day School, and it started its second year on Sept. 14 with 88 children registered in kindergarten and the first grade. By adding another grade each year, it expects eventually to become a full six-grade school.

Three parishes are involved in the venture: Christ Church, Poughkeepsie; Zion, Wappingers Falls; and St. James', Hyde Park. Last year the sessions consisted of two kindergarten sections, junior and senior, held in classrooms at all three church plants. This year the kindergarten is continuing at the three churches, and a first grade has been added at Christ Church. As the school grows, the kindergarten will continue in the various locations and the elementary program will be centralized in Poughkeepsie. In its fourth year of operation, the school will be eligible for membership in the diocesan Division of Boarding and Day Schools, which is part of the Department of Christian Education.

The Community of the Holy Spirit, which operates St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School, Manhattan, is helping with the curriculum and administration, assigning Sister Mary Elizabeth to spend one day a week at the school. Later, it is hoped that members of the Order will do much of the teaching in the elementary grades.

According to the Rev. Miller Cragon, Director of the Department of Christian Education, the new school in Dutchess County may well reflect a nationwide trend toward the establishment of more church-related schools. The Executive Council (formerly National Council) lists nearly 600 Episcopal schools in this country, he said, and of these, 30 per cent were founded within the past five years. There have been more in the South and Southwest than in the Northeast, however.

Clergy and laity from the three cooperating parishes began to plan their school a little more than two years ago. One of the most enthusiastic and hard-working leaders was the Rev. Alfred H. Whisler, who until recently was Rector of Zion, Wappingers Falls. With him at the start were the Rev. Rhys Williams of Christ Church and the Rev. Gordon L. Kidd of St. James'.

Each of the three rectors named three lay persons, making a school board of twelve persons, plus Raymond E. Aldrich, the attorney. Now the board consists of 15 persons, including Mr. Aldrich and Dr. J. Stuart Fishler, a consulting pediatrician. Each board member has a particular talent which makes him valuable. For example, the president, Dr. Edward V. Stevenson of Christ Church, a physician, is a trustee of the Rectory School, Pomfret, Conn. Mrs. Lionel Lawrence of Zion, the secretary, is a retired principal in the Spackenkill School District. The Martha Lawrence School in that district bears her name. Her knowledge of educational affairs and her administrative ability have helped the fledgling school immeasurably. So has the assistance of Milton W. Pinckney of Zion, a school trustee in the Wappingers District. Other lay members of the board are: from Christ Church, Robert B. Breed, a businessman, and Mrs. Austin J. Ehleider, a teacher in the Christ Church Nursery School, which had been held for some 20 years prior to the formation of the new school; from St. James', Mapledoram Fink, a retired administrator of Greer School, John W. Golden, a businessman, and Mrs. Boyd W. McConaghy, a school teacher; from Zion, Henry E. Diggelmann, a businessman. Clerical members are Fr. Williams, Dr. Kidd, the Rev. Donald Gardner, assistant minister at St. James', and the Rev. Robert MacGill, new rector of Zion.

Members of the school board point out that their area, especially the 25-mile district around Poughkeepsie, has been rapidly changing from a rural to a suburban character as industry moved in and hundreds of new development homes replaced cow barns, silos and fruit orchards. As the new families arrived, overcrowding in the public schools resulted. This, coupled with the increasing secularization of the public schools, prompted the creation of a church-related institution.

The parents feel that the public schools should be secular, the school trustees emphasize. But the parents also believe that academic education should have a Christian context and should supply the motives and philosophy for life as well as the techniques for living it. The educational philosophy of the school is "progressive, but not permissive," according to a brochure prepared by the school board. And, "the academic program is designed to be of special benefit to the child with more than average intelligence."

The school expects to be self-supporting, meeting its expenses out of tuitions, although last year this was not quite possible. With an enrollment of 63 children, operating costs were approximately $19,500. Financing came from tuitions of $300 for each child in the kindergarten, plus aid from the three churches. This year kindergarten tuition remains the same and tuition in the first grade is $425. A discount of $100 is allowed for the second child in a family.

"The first few years of a new school are always precarious," admitted one of the board members recently. "But with the zeal and hard work that people are devoting, and particularly with the assistance of the Community of the Holy Spirit, we feel that we have a good chance to build a fine institution." ■

C. Kilmer Myers Is Consecrated As Suffragan Bishop of Michigan

The Rev. C. Kilmer Myers, former Vicar of the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, was consecrated on Sept. 29 as Suffragan Bishop of Michigan.

The service was held in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Detroit. The Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish, preached the consecration sermon. The Rev. Canon Bernard C. Newman of Trinity Church was litanist. Also attending from this diocese were a number of clergy and other friends.

Bishop Myers

Bishop Myers, a native of Schuylerville, N.Y., was ordained to the priesthood in 1940. He was a Navy chaplain and also served churches in Buffalo, N.Y., and Newark, N.J., before becoming Vicar of the Lower East Side Mission of Trinity Parish in 1952. While there, he wrote his much-publicized book, "Light the Dark Streets." He was Vicar of Intercession Chapel from 1960 to Sept., 1963, when he was named Director of the Urban Training Center for Christian Mission in Chicago.

In his consecration sermon, Dr. Heuss said, "The dilemma of every Christian Bishop, from the beginning until now, is to know how to be a man of peace and at the same time to be a man of war." This is also "the central dilemma in which each member of the Church is caught," he added. He said there are "dragons" against which the Church must wage war today. They are, first, racial prejudice, and second, poverty, poor housing and inadequate education. Third, he said, is "the dragon of complacency about the Church's mission to the ever-increasing population of the American city."

Bishop Myers' consecrator was the Rt. Rev. John P. Craine of Indianapolis, President of the Fifth Province, who acted for the Presiding Bishop. Co-consecrators were the Rt. Rev. Richard S. Emrich, Diocesan, and the Rt. Rev. Archie H. Crowley, Suffragan Bishop of Michigan. The presenting bishops were the Rt. Rev. John E. Hines of Texas and the Rt. Rev. Paul Moore, Jr., of Washington.

Bishop Lichtenberger Accepts Post at ETS

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, who has resigned as Presiding Bishop because of ill health, has accepted an appointment as Professor of Pastoral Theology at the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, Mass. He will assume his new position late next month. The position is unsalaried.

Bishop Lichtenberger's resignation was received by the House of Bishops at General Convention "with deep regret." In a ceremony held before a joint session of both houses, Bishop Lichtenberger was presented a check for $32,000. The Rt. Rev. Nelson Burroughs, Bishop of Ohio, made the presentation, saying, "His name means 'light bearer' and so he has done." Bishop Burroughs also presented a bouquet of flowers and a $1,000 check to Mrs. Lichtenberger.

NOYE'S FLUDDE ON TV

Noye's Fludde, the musical production which was seen by some 10,000 people at St. George's Church last May, will now be given on television. The Fludde is a musical adaptation of a Chester Miracle Play about Noah's Ark. The music is by the contemporary British composer, Benjamin Britten. The taped production at St. George's will be seen over the nationwide CBS television network on Sunday, Dec. 27, at 10 a.m.

Alcoholism to Be Topic Of Clergy Conferences

Alcoholism will be the topic of Bishop Donegan's annual series of clergy conferences at Tuxedo Park this winter and spring. These conferences, each for a comparatively small group of clergymen, have been held since 1959 as a supplement to the larger conference held by the Bishop in the fall.

This year's series will be held on Jan. 13-14, Jan. 20-21, Feb 24-25 and March 31-April 1. Each conference begins with Evening Prayer on Wednesday and adjourns after luncheon on Thursday. ■

. . . in brief

■ THE EPISCOPAL Church now has 115 priests serving as military chaplains, according to the Rev. Robert J. Plumb, Executive Secretary of the Armed Forces Division of the Executive Council. It is the first time since denominational quotas were established during World War II that the Episcopal quotas have been filled.

■ CORNERSTONE laying ceremonies were held on Sunday, Nov. 15, at the Protestant Chapel at Kennedy International Airport. The Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving, Rector of St. James' Church, Manhattan, and President of The Protestant Council of the City of New York, officiated. Other participants included the Rev. Dan M. Potter, Executive Director of the Protestant Council, and Dallas B. Sherman, Chairman of the Council's Board of Directors. The building will be the first Protestant chapel on any air terminal. Constructed at a cost of $750,000, it is virtually completed and will be equipped for use early next year.

■ A NEW AGENCY entitled the Professional Personnel Reference Service has been established by the Division of Christian Ministries of the Episcopal Church's Executive Council. The service is designed to bring interested people and jobs together. A qualified, dedicated layman who wants to work for the Church often has difficulty in finding a job. At the same time, jobs at all levels often go begging for the lack of qualified applicants, an Executive Council spokesman explained. This applies to the clergy as well, he added. The service is under the direction of Dr. Reuben H. Gross, a man with both research experience and seminary training.

■ THE BIBLE is still the most translated book in the world, according to the American Bible Society. But books about communism run a close second. The statistics are based upon latest figures issued by UNESCO in its 15th volume of the Index Translationum.

To Replace Burned-out Church

Architect's model of proposed Church of the Crucifixion, 149th St. and Convent Ave. The plan envisages a contemporary style building of steel and concrete to replace the church which was virtually demolished by fire in March, 1963. According to the Rev. Chiron Forsyth, rector, the congregation is hoping to start at least a portion of the construction in the late spring or early summer. The architect is Costas Machlouzarides of Manhattan.

Fr. Forsyth said that the new church will be simple on the inside "but will meet all our liturgical needs." While the entrance to the burned-out building is on Convent Avenue, the new entrance will be on 149th Street, and the altar will be at the east end. The nave will not be extremely large, Fr. Forsyth said, but the architect has designed the building so that on special occasions the church can be opened into the existing parish house, and later, it is anticipated, a new one. The present parish house was so badly damaged that the final building plans will have to include a completely renovated or rebuilt structure, the rector said. No official fund drive has started as yet, but Fr. Forsyth said the parish hopes to raise the funds as the work proceeds.

Puerto Rico Consecrates Bishop

Puerto Rico's first native-born Episcopal bishop was consecrated in St. John's Cathedral, Santurce, on Nov. 30. Bishop Donegan and Bishop Boynton attended the service, at which the Very Rev. Francisco Reus Froylan, Dean of St. John's Cathedral for 10 years, became the Bishop Coadjutor. He will become the Bishop of Puerto Rico when the Rt. Rev. A. Ervine Swift leaves the island sometime in 1967.

The ceremony was the last consecration performed by the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger before his retirement as Presiding Bishop. The co-consecrators were Bishop Swift and Bishop Boynton, who formerly was the Bishop of Puerto Rico. The service was performed entirely in Spanish.

Until General Convention last October created a Ninth Province, Puerto Rico was a part of the Second Province, whose president is Bishop Donegan. On his return from the consecration, Bishop Donegan said, "Though Puerto Rico is no longer in the Second Province, it is my hope that there will be close, and perhaps closer, ties between the Diocese of New York and this Caribbean island." Manhattan and the Bronx have at least 200,000 more Puerto Rican residents than they did 10 years ago. ■

5 Denominations To Send Speakers For 'Church Week'

All Saints, Manhattan, will approach the subject of unity from a different point of view in a series of programs this month. Instead of talking about achieving unity, the participants will seek its source.

The series, from Monday through Friday, Jan. 18-22, is part of a comprehensive program called "Church Week." It includes a celebration of Holy Communion each morning and a daily Bible study as well as the evening lectures. The Rev. R. E. Terwilliger, assistant minister, is in charge.

All Saints, which is at 230 E. 60th St., held a "Church Week" last year, and well over 800 persons from both the church and the outside community attended. The topic was "Being the Church."

This year's topic is "Jesus Christ." Five clergymen, each from a different non-Anglican denomination, will describe what Jesus Christ means to him in the light of his particular Christian tradition. They are:

Jan. 18: A Roman Catholic, the Rev. John J. Quinn, Church of St. Thomas More, Manhattan.

Jan. 19: A Russian Orthodox, the Very Rev. Dr. Alexander Schmemann, Dean of St. Vladimir's Theological Seminary, Crestwood.

Jan. 20: A Methodist, the Rev. Dr. Carl Michalson, Professor of Systematic Theology at Drew University, Madison, N. J.

Jan. 21: A Lutheran, the Rev. Dr. Carl Fjellman, Dean of Upsala College, East Orange, N. J.

Jan. 22: A Presbyterian, the Rev. Dr. David H. C. Read, Minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, Manhattan.

All sessions begin at 8 p.m.

The program at All Saints will be held during the same week (Jan 18-25) that prayers for Christian unity are being said in countries around the world. This observance is held annually under the world-wide sponsorship of the World Council of Churches and in the United States by the National Council of Churches. ■

The Bishop's Message

The mails at Christmastide brought many greetings to the Bishop's House. I wish that all the cards could be acknowledged with a personal message. I cannot manage that, but I want you to know of my deep appreciation of each and every Christmas remembrance.

At the beginning of a New Year we are reminded of one of the inescapable facts of human life—its never ceasing change. Time, we say, stops for nobody, and as it goes on everything changes with it. Whether we consider our personal experience or look at the wider affairs of mankind, we see the same unceasing change. Is there anything that is permanent, reliable? Is there anything about which we can say: "This is immortal, eternal, unchangeable?"

The author of Hebrews gives us the answer, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever." The unknown writer was living in a time of confusion, uncertainty and chaos, but he believed that as he put his trust in the Lord he was held fast to the only source of strength and courage, and this confidence gave him hope in a bewildered world.

There is much to dismay us, to fill us with gloomy forbodings. Nevertheless assurance and inner serenity and strength sufficient for our needs can be ours. If we welcome the changeless Christ into our lives and respond wholeheartedly to the good tidings of the changeless love of the eternal God, serenity and courage will overcome anxieties and fears.

May our heavenly Father, who has been merciful to us in the year that has just ended, and has guided and upheld us through all the years of our lives, fashion in us those virtues which are acceptable to Him, that in all things we may please Him, and more faithfully serve Him, through Jesus Christ who is the same yesterday, today and forever.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

How Will MRI Operate Here? Committee Starts to Find Out

There was a slim, long table in a spacious, high-ceilinged room, and around it sat a group of distinguished men and women. The occasion could have been a board meeting of any notable American corporation, except that most members of this assemblage wore clerical collars and the portraits which looked down from the walls were obviously those of bishops.

Keen administrative skill, a kind of optimistic realism, piety, sophistication and scholarly achievement were among the qualities which these men and women brought to the meeting. They had come at the invitation of the Bishop of New York to discuss a proposal bearing the somewhat unwieldy title: Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ. Everyone around the long table knew that MRI has implications more revolutionary for the Episcopal Church than has many a billion-dollar investment proposal in the world of finance.

The group was the Diocesan Commission on MRI, and it had assembled for its first organizational meeting in Cathedral House. Bishop Donegan, as the chairman, was the initial speaker. He said:

What MRI Is Not

"I have heard that people are saying MRI is just another name for financial giving, but this is not so. It isn't just an ingenious way of raising money. It isn't just a swapping of funds. If it is, we ought to stop right now."

The Bishop continued, "It isn't just a one-shot thing, either. I am convinced that MRI is going to go on for a long time to come. Rather than thinking immediately about money, perhaps one of the first things we ought to consider in our plans is a beginning at the deeper level of ourselves—recognize a stronger call to prayer, undertake more Bible study . . ."

Quoting from the report of the General Convention Committee on MRI, Bishop Donegan noted that "... What we do with our money is significant primarily as a symbol of what we are doing with our lives." He said he, himself, as well as Bishop Boynton and Bishop Wetmore, will donate 5 per cent of their salaries to MRI over the next three years.

But the Bishop also quoted this passage from the same Committee report: "Renewal includes better training for the laity and better utilization of them in Christ's service; it includes a reorganization of the parish around things that are important to God and man . . . it includes a stronger life of prayer and sacraments, a greater understanding of what it means to be a Christian . . ."

Bishop Donegan has been named to the national Church's Commission on Mutual Responsibility, together with the Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity, Manhattan; and two laymen of the diocese, Judge Thurgood Marshall and Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel. The Commission consists of six bishops, six priests and 12 laymen. Several members of the Executive Council staff, including Bishop Bayne, will assist the Commission. The Rev. Howard A. Johnson will be a consultant.

Some parishes in this diocese have already asked to carry on "parish pairing" arrangements in the spirit of MRI, the Bishop reported. These are Christ Church, Bronxville, with St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan; Zion, Wappingers Falls, and Christ Church, Red Hook, with St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, Manhattan; St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining, with St. Ann's, Bronx; and St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, with St. Mary's, Manhattanville. The Bishop has appointed a committee on parish pairing, which will be in charge of setting up the whole diocesan program. Further the Diocese of New York will seriously investigate the possibility of adopting a "companion diocese."

There was a stir around the long table, and someone asked, "What's so new about MRI?"

The Bishop said, "Formerly the Church gave to places 'over there.' But MRI has two aspects—giving and RECEIVING. For example, the Church may have been giving money to a distant mission for years without realizing that this mission can teach us a great deal about holiness, dedication, sacrifice and other important values."

The Word Is 'Mutual'

Bishop Wetmore declared, "The key word is 'mutual,' not 'responsibility'." And Bishop Boynton said, "You practice MRI by substance, not by mere words."

There were many comments from Commission members at this point. The Rev. Frederick M. Morris of St. Thomas, Manhattan, said he believes that "a real feeling of relationship with another parish, a sense of personal interest and commitment" is extremely important. The Rev. Arthur Hargate of St. Matthew's, Bedford, also stressed the value of personal contact.

The Rev. Clifford Lauder of All Souls, Manhattan, and the Rev. Raymond T. Ferris of Christ Church, Bronxville, suggested that the Commission start out by determining what is already going on in the diocese. Dr. Ferris said that a group of laymen from Christ Church went off to the Conference Center at Tuxedo Park with a booklet about MRI, immersed themselves in the subject and tried to answer the question, "What does this mean for the people of Christ Church, Bronxville?"

The Rev. Canon John Heuss, rector of historic Trinity Parish, declared that MRI will lead to "a restructuring of the whole Anglican Communion, which at present has a very loose structure."

So far as our own diocesan situation is concerned, Dr. Heuss made these points:

1. That Bishop Donegan is completely right in his assertion that the emphasis at this early time should not be on money but upon renewal right here.

2. That when we do reach the point of talking about actual money, this subject should be interpreted in the widest possible way. "Unless we seriously examine the conditions of our own diocese in terms of present and future — population structure, urban sprawl, relationship of parishes with each other, we are missing the point of all this," said Dr. Heuss.

3. That we have to look toward the Anglican Communion overseas for a greater degree of fellowship, for a closer relationship, whatever that may mean in individual cases.

MRI, said Dr. Heuss, has all of these implications.

Attending the meeting, in addition to those previously mentioned, were Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy, the Rev. Bernard Hemsley, Rector of St. Andrew's, S. I.; the Rev. E. Perren Hayes, Rector of St. Stephen's, the Bronx; the Rev. Joseph Matthews, Rector of Grace Church, Woodstock; Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., ECW diocesan president; Mrs. William L. Gardner, member of the General Division of Women's Work, Executive Council; Mrs. Landes Lewitin, member, Triennial UTO Committee; John Murphy, ELNY diocesan chairman; and Edmund Beazley, Administrative Assistant to the Bishop.

Give Anglican Communion Stronger Structure?

A proposal by the Rev. Canon John Heuss that the Anglican Communion establish a stronger central government has received mixed reactions from 300 bishops who commented on it.

Dr. Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish and a member of New York's Diocesan Commission on MRI, made his proposal during two addresses in London last summer.

The proposal—actually a number of specific suggestions—aroused notice here and abroad, Dr. Heuss said. So much so that he sent copies of his two London addresses to all 400 bishops of the Anglican Communion. He asked for comments; and 300 accepted the invitation.

In essence, Dr. Heuss proposed that there be an International Council composed of the Archbishops, plus one priest and one layman from each of the 19 provinces. The Council, which would meet twice a year, would have a chief executive officer, who would have no other duties. For this post, he suggested the Archbishop of Canterbury. If he could not serve, Dr. Heuss proposed that the Archbishops elect one of themselves.

The Rector of Trinity, a former Director of Christian Education for the national church, also called for creation of an Anglican Department of Christian Education. Missionary efforts would also be centralized, under a single missionary center in London.

Dr. Heuss said that the 300 replies from bishops of the Anglican Communion broke down into three broad categories:

One-third were in general agreement with the plan. "They all think," Dr. Heuss said, "that we must have a stronger central government if we are to reach the goals of MRI."

Another third "doesn't appear to want a real Anglican Communion," Dr. Heuss said. "They seem worried about the effects such a union would have on their ecumenical relationships, especially with Protestant bodies."

The final third of the bishops, Dr. Heuss stated, gave replies that were "very discreet and that committed themselves to nothing." ■

Deprived Areas to Get 1965 Pledge

Episcopal Churchwomen at their Advent meeting in Synod Hall on Dec. 1 professed their unqualified commitment to the document, Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ (MRI).

By a unanimous vote, they designated their 1965 Christian Social Service Pledge to the advance of the Church's mission in deprived areas throughout this diocese.

No specific amount was mentioned. While this pledge has always exceeded $4,000, it was felt that members' recognition of the urgency of the present situation would assure a most generous response from the diocesan branches.

In designating their pledge, the Churchwomen stipulated that the funds are to be available for projects serving those in need (migrant workers, alcoholics and juvenile delinquents, for example), and that all requests for funds are to be approved by the Executive Board of ECW in consultation with the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations.

Requests for funds should be addressed to: ECW, Diocese of New York, Department of Christian Social Relations, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., New York, N.Y. 10025.

At this Advent meeting, Mrs. Milorad Nikolic, diocesan ECW Chairman of Christian Social Relations, described how the 1964 pledge has been used. Bishop Donegan received two-thirds for work in race relations, and one-third went to the Youth Consultation Service.

by Edith Stott
Diocesan Vice President, ECW

Mrs. Nikolic reported that Mrs. Elizabeth P. Anderson, Executive Director of YCS wrote: "I think you will be interested to know that this money ($1,000) was used for a crucial payroll adjustment, enabling the agency to give case work service to a greater number of adolescent high school girls, as well as girls in Dana House. Some of the high school girls had been on our waiting list for as long as five months."

John Lassoe, diocesan Director of Christian Social Relations, wrote Mrs. Nikolic: "It turned out to be particularly good that the pledge this year was designated for the Bishop's discretionary use in the area of race relations, for no one could have anticipated the summer riots—or

Fr. Bird Attends Alcohol Meeting

The Rev. Samuel B. Bird, Jr., Vicar of Church of the Resurrection, Hopewell Junction, was a consultant at a recent conference entitled "The Church and Alcohol Problems—What Lies Ahead? conducted by the North Conway Institute. The Institute, which has its headquarters in North Conway, N. H., is an interfaith association for education on alcoholism. Fr. Bird is chairman of the Committee on Alcoholism, diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations. The conference, held at the Bishop Donegan Conference Center, was attended by some 25 participants from all over the nation. The meeting was designed to lead up to a possible White House Conference on Alcoholism in 1966. ■

Dr. Heuss Cites City Needs

"The American city is the largest missionary opportunity—it is the most pressing problem—facing the Episcopal Church today," declared the Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Church, Manhattan, at the Advent United Thank Offering Ingathering of the diocesan ECW.

The service on Dec. 1 was part of a full day of activities.

At one time, only work overseas or in the western states was regarded as missionary work, Dr. Heuss told the ECW members. But today "the Episcopal Church is faced with a deepening emergency in cities like New York, Boston, Philadelphia . . . and others." The reason, said Dr. Heuss, is a swift and radical population change, a change from middle-income suburbs to industrial fringe areas, from white collar to blue collar, where for the most part, "middle-income, culturally privileged people" used to make up the bulk of our communicant strength but do not any longer.

"Does all this mean that Episcopal churches in these areas should close their doors because the old congregations have moved away?" he asked.

"It certainly does not! It means that the Episcopal Church in the inner city must open its doors to welcome our new neighbors, most of whom belong to no church. It means for clergy and lay officials, as well as for diocesan authorities, that an agonizing reappraisal is taking place. It means that one time self-supporting parishes will increasingly become diocesan missions. It means that the old habits of mind and ways of doing things are no longer valid. We are faced with a totally new urban missionary opportunity, for which there is little money yet available and for which the average clergyman has not been trained."

Dr. Heuss continued: "The speed with which all this happened has caught most of the large urban dioceses unprepared. New York is doing more about it at present than any diocese I know about. . .in spite of the fact that our peculiar geographical location has cost us dearly in leadership and in financial strength."

In the past four years some progress has been made, but "to many of us (its) pace (has been) falling behind the speed of urbanization." At General Convention $500,000 was appropriated for the development of urban pilot programs and other city projects. But "the question remains —will it again be the same old story? Are we doing too little too late? I believe we are. I believe that the National Council (now called the Executive Council) ought to be spending $5 million in the United States annually to help urban dioceses with their enormous problems. In ten years it will be too late to win the new unchurched city dwellers."

Returning to his text, ". . . He (Christ) beheld the city, and wept over it" (Luke 19:41), Dr. Heuss declared, "If He returned to any one of the great cities of the United States today—if He could see the rotting slums in Manhattan . . . if He could see the human misery of millions, as we who work in the city see it (and I am sure Christ does see it) — He would weep again. What is more, Christ would condemn His Church—just as He condemned the money-changers in the Temple—for our failure, for our blindness, and for our hardness of heart." ■

Prayer to Be Churchwomen's Link With MRI

by Margaret Anderson

Diocesan Chairman for Devotional Life, ECW

During these next years, when Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ (MRI) is becoming part of the life and sinew of our Church, Episcopal Churchwomen feel that they have a special responsibility—to undergird the movement with prayer. Bishop Allison of the Sudan, in commenting about MRI, has said: "Without prayer we cannot succeed, and with it we cannot fail." Prayer has been one of the most important concerns of the Episcopal Churchwomen in the past; in the future its importance will, if anything, increase.

As far as Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence is concerned, the concept of MRI is not new to Episcopal Churchwomen. For 75 years, they have been giving sacrificially for the mission of the Church, both at home and overseas, through their United Thank Offering. All these years, while the women in America have been filling their blue boxes and offering the prayer, "Accept from grateful hearts our United Thank Offering. . . and bless it to the coming of thy Kingdom," other women in the missionary districts have been filling their blue boxes and offering the same prayer. This year the Diocese of New York will be receiving as well as giving, because part of this total offering will come to us for work at St. Philip's Church, Manhattan.

Giving, receiving—and praying. There are a number of ways in which Episcopal Churchwomen have been carrying out their devotional program throughout the Church year.

- In each of the convocations, prayer groups meet regularly. These are groups of dedicated women who believe that prayer must come before effort, worship before work.
- Through the sponsorship of the Episcopal Churchwomen and the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral, more than 250 women gather at the Cathedral on four Mondays of each November for the annual School of Worship. There are also evening sessions, equally well attended, and another 150 women meet in the northern part of the diocese for a similar School of Worship. These lectures and services have given real impetus to both the intellectual and the devotional life of the women in our diocese.
- Each February a retreat is held at the House of the Redeemer, 7 E. 95th St., Manhattan. This year it will be from Feb. 9 to 11. The conductor will be the Rev. Martin Thornton of Chester, England, Visiting Professor of Ascetic Theology at General Theological Seminary. Women who take advantage of this yearly retreat benefit greatly from the two days of silence, meditation and prayer.
- The World Day of Prayer, observed each year on the first Friday in Lent by women on every continent, falls on March 5 this year. "What Does the Lord Require" will be the theme. Episcopal Churchwomen take part in this service in every part of the diocese, adding their prayers to millions of others.
- Annual quiet days are held by Episcopal Churchwomen in many parishes, and in some areas as a convocation-wide event. The day usually begins with Holy

The Rev. Joseph M. Elliott, St. Paul's, Bronx.

The Rev. Fred Coleman, St. George's, Flushing.

The Rev. R. Rhys Williams, Rector of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie, preached the sermon.

'Sister' Churches Exchange Clergy

St. Mary-le-Bow

Historic Trinity Church, Manhattan, has a "sister church," the famous St. Mary-le-Bow, London. During the past six months, these parishes have been exchanging clergy visits.

The two parishes are "sister churches" because in the charter granted to Trinity by King William III in 1697, St. Mary-le-Bow was named as the model which Trinity was to follow in various parish regulations.

St. Mary, built by Sir Christopher Wren after London's fire of 1666, is world famous chiefly because of its renowned "Bow bells." These are the bells which legend says called Dick Whittington to be "thrice Lord Mayor of London," and they are the bells within whose range every true Cockney is born. At the same time, St. Mary is an "inner city church", and this fact has strengthened the bond with Trinity, whose work in the city is widely known.

Last June, the Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity, was the preacher at reconsecration ceremonies held at St. Mary-le-Bow. The church, virtually destroyed during World War II, had undergone a long period of reconstruction.

About a month ago, the Rev. Joseph McCulloch, Rector of St. Mary, paid a return visit to Trinity and several of its chapels. He also preached at several Manhattan churches and at the Cathedral. ■

Forward Movement Issues New Devotional Booklet

The Forward Movement has begun publication of a new devotional booklet entitled "Far and Near." It is being issued in addition to the familiar daily devotional, "Forward Day by Day," and will appear bi-monthly. The current issue runs through Shrove Tuesday, March 2.

"Far and Near" is the continuation of a booklet called "Make His Name Glorious," which was started by the Diocese of California and then authorized as a church-wide enterprise at General Convention. It is a way of giving the Church's world-wide mission more focus and making it more vivid to the individual church member.

According to the Rev. James W. Kennedy, Director and Editor of Forward Movement Publications, the new booklet is directly connected with the purpose and program of Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence. There are day-by-day devotions, but there are also suggested daily prayers for each diocese of the Anglican Communion—the diocese for which the whole world-wide Church will be praying simultaneously. There is also a brief descriptive paragraph about each diocese. "Far and Near" may be obtained from Forward Movement Publications, 412 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, Ohio, at 20 cents a copy or $1 a year. ■

Prayer to Be . . .

Communion, followed by meditations, silence and prayer.

So in three ways—giving, receiving, praying—Episcopal Churchwomen are already working out the concept that will now become more sharply defined as Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence.

MRI will be one of the foremost concerns in the ECW prayer groups as time passes. It will receive special attention during this year's annual retreat at the House of the Redeemer. In view of the special emphasis which General Convention placed on MRI on behalf of the whole Church, the movement will unquestionably have a large place in the intercessions of Episcopal Churchwomen in every parish in the diocese.

Wishing to be of some concrete assistance to parish groups which will be centering their attention on MRI very soon, the diocesan Committee on Devotional Life has prepared a litany which may be used at the parish meetings. It includes a short service of dedication.

Free copies of this litany may be obtained from the following devotional life chairmen:

Dutchess: Mrs. Stuart Jenks, DeGarmo Hills Road, Wappingers Falls.

Hudson: Mrs. Paul E. Parker, West Park.

Ramapo: Mrs. Douglas M. Glasspool, 118 South Church St., Goshen.

Westchester: Mrs. G. Clayton Melling, 347 Prospect Ave., Mamaroneck.

Bronx: Mrs. Edna F. Onley, 3761 Olinville Ave., Bronx.

Manhattan: Mrs. Henri Barjou, 100 W. 57th St.

Richmond: Miss Mary Daley, 77 Bard Ave., S.I. ■

The Rev. J. Jack Sharkey, Rector of St. Paul's-on-the-Hill, Ossining, has a new interpretation of the letters MRI, which are becoming familiar to most people as the abbreviation for Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ.

Fr. Sharkey writes in his parish bulletin: "We like to think of MRI as letters to introduce the words, MY REAL INVOLVEMENT. That describes pretty well the idea in back of the whole thing."

St. Paul's is one of the parishes which began to practice MRI before it was officially defined. It has been working along with a "companion parish" in Haiti for some years. Soon it expects to set up a similar program with a Spanish-speaking parish in the Bronx.

Layman's School Announces Schedule for Second Year

"Excellent. Cogent and exciting," is the way Dr. Cyril Richardson, Dean of the Graduate School at Union Theological Seminary, described last year's Layman's School of Theology.

The School, organized by a group of lay men and women, will be held again this year on seven Tuesdays beginning Feb. 2, at 8 p.m. in Calvary Church, 21st St. and Park Avenue South, Manhattan.

The general theme will be "God in Search of Man." It will be a series on the Bible, and its purpose will be to make clear why the Bible is considered literature of compelling relevance and inexhaustible spiritual power. The speakers will include a Jewish theologian, a Greek Orthodox professor, and a Roman Catholic.

All of the speakers are currently teaching at seminaries and are distinguished in their fields. These are the lecturers and their topics:

Feb. 2: Dr. Abraham J. Heschel, Professor of Jewish Ethics and Mysticism, Jewish Theological Seminary of America. "Introduction to Biblical Thinking."

Feb. 9: Dr. Vesilin Kesich, Professor of New Testament, Patristics and Greek at St. Vladimir's Orthodox Theological Seminary. "Jesus and His Message."

Feb. 16: Dr. William D. Davies, Edward Robinson Professor of Biblical Theology, Union Theological Seminary. "Paul and Judaism."

Feb. 25: Dr. Boone Porter, Jr., Professor of Liturgics, General Theological Seminary. "The Bible as the Source of Our Worship."

March 2: Dr. John Macquarrie, Professor of Systematic Theology at Union Theological Seminary. "Some Problems in Interpretation."

March 9: Monsignor Myles M. Bourke, Dean of Dunwoodie Seminary of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, and Professor of New Testament and Professor of Scripture at Fordham University Graduate School. "Holy Scriptures and Liturgy."

March 16: Dr. James Muilenburg, Professor of Hebrew Exegesis and Old Testament, San Francisco Theological Seminary. "The Bible Today."

The Layman's School is supported by a number of Manhattan churches and is open to adults of all denominations. Registrations should be made in advance to Layman's School, Calvary Church, 61 Gramercy Park North, N.Y. 10010. The fee is $5 for the series or $1.25 for a single lecture. ■

St. Matthew's to Expand

A project is under way at St. Matthew's, Bedford, to lengthen the church building by 17 feet. This alteration will add 120 seats in the church and will provide five additional and much-needed Church School classrooms in the basement.

The Rev. Arthur W. Hargate, rector, said that the need for additional space at St. Matthew's was a problem considered by the vestry as far back as 1961. After a study of various alternatives, the vestry at first decided to try to establish a mission in Pound Ridge. But the expected support for this mission did not materialize. Crowding at St. Matthew's, both at church services and in the Sunday School classes, became increasingly serious.

Last June, Mott Schmidt, a New York City architect, who is also a member of the parish, presented plans for lengthening the church building. It was pointed out that St. Matthew's had, in fact, evolved through several stages of growth since its consecration in 1910. Within the memory of some present members, the church was enlarged from two bays to three bays. When the project is finished next fall, the capacity of the church will be increased from 250 to 370 people. All of the memorial plates and windows will be kept in their present position, and the lines and proportions of the building will actually be improved, the architect has pointed out.

The project is under the supervision of a building committee consisting of Thomas McCance, chairman; Leland S. Brown, Wilson P. Foss and Donald Percy. The E. M. Howell Co. of Long Island is the contractor. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

What does the word Epiphany mean?

It means the showing forth or manifestation of something or somebody. Specifically in Western Christian terms, it means the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles. The Gospel for the Feast makes this point through introducing the account of the visit of the Magi. It is a more ancient Feast than Christmas; it is known to have been celebrated in Alexandria before the year 220. Christmas was introduced by the West about a hundred years later. Originally the title used was Theophany rather than Epiphany. It concentrated on the showing forth of God, and, therefore, the Gospel emphasized the Baptism of Jesus rather than the Nativity.

It is generally assumed that the choice of January 6th was dictated by the time-honored celebration of the winter solstice — which was the Alexandrian calendar's date for it.

Our own Church's understanding of the Season is probably best illustrated by Christopher Wordsworth's great hymn, "Songs of thankfulness and praise, Jesus, Lord, to thee we raise..." (Number 53 in The Hymnal.)

Parishes and People

● Everybody has heard of Sunday School, but St. John's, New City, has something different. It's a Monday School.

According to the Rev. David W. Arnold, rector, it is an attempt "to equate the secular with the sacred" on the kindergarten level. It is not a released time program. It is an attempt to expand Episcopal children's kindergarten experience by providing some of the religious values that the public school cannot offer. Mrs. David Claxton is the teacher, and she has about 24 pupils. They study, work at crafts, play games, go to chapel, sing songs and tell stories. Those who attend public school in the morning go to the Monday School from 12:30 to 2; those in the afternoon session go to St. John's from 9 a.m. to 11:30.

The school was started by Mrs. James Hopewell, a member of St. John's, whose husband was Dean of Cuttington College, Liberia, for some years. Now he is director of the Theological Education Fund of the National Council of Churches.

● Mrs. John Mason Brown, a member of St. James', Manhattan, has succeeded Mrs. Frederic R. King as chairman of the Episcopal Mission Society's Bellevue Hospital Chaplaincy Committee. Mrs. King has been named honorary chairman. The Committee was formed in 1947 by the late Mrs. Frank L. Polk to help finance the Protestant chaplaincy program offered to 12,000 patients a year by five Episcopal Mission Society chaplains at the Bellevue Medical Center.

● Some 15 parishioners from Grace, Nyack, were among nearly 100 white residents of Rockland County who were invited to Negro homes one Sunday recently. The visits were arranged by the Rockland County Conference on Religion and Race, and the purpose was quite specifically to discuss race relations. The Rev. George Regas, Rector of Grace Church, called it a "bridge-building operation," an attempt to bridge the gap between white and Negro people. The program grew out of a proposal made at the Rockland County Conference on Religion and Race, an interdenominational effort in which Grace Church participated last April.

Generally, the white visitors from Grace Church reported they had "a rich experience which helped to bring about a broader understanding of race relations," Mr. Regas reported. Sipping tea and crunching cookies provided a friendly, informal atmosphere in which some rather deep-seated problems were frankly brought into the open. ■

● William Stringfellow, Manhattan attorney and active Episcopal layman, will lead a series of three seminars for adult leaders of youth next month. The seminars are being sponsored by the Brooklyn Division of the Protestant Council of the City of New York. The series, entitled "The Gospel We Communicate," will be held Feb. 10, 17 and 24 in the offices of the Brooklyn Division.

● That "tiger in your tank" of a certain well-known brand of gasoline is an Episcopal tiger! He is the brainchild of Robert G. Jones, a free lance commercial artist who has been a member of St. Barnabas, Irvington, for about eight years. His wife and four children also are members. Mr. Jones, who is fond of animals and has always liked to draw them, was among a number of artists to submit sketches when the "tiger in your tank" advertising campaign was getting under way. "The problem as I saw it was to create a tiger that was fierce but also somehow happy and loveable," Mr. Jones told The Bulletin. A glance at the accompanying sketch will show what a real smoothie Mr. Jones' tiger is.

● Miss Eunice Mattis, a member of St. Simeon's, Bronx, has received an award from the National Braille Club for transcribing reading matter into braille for use of the blind. Miss Mattis, a registered nurse, is a consultant in Public Health Social Work for the New York City Department of Health. She has transcribed some 6,400 pages of material, mostly for textbooks in English and Spanish. The award was in the form of a pin shaped like a book, with six simulated rubies corresponding to the six dots of the braille system on one side and the club's name on the other.

Miss Mattis says she became a braille transcriber after reading a newspaper article pointing up the need for volunteers. She took a night course at the Lighthouse for the Blind (the Jewish Guild for the Blind gives courses during the day) and was certified by the Library of Congress. Learning braille takes time, she said, but volunteers are much needed. ■

Canon Johnson Leaves Cathedral

Bishop Donegan has announced the resignation of the Rev. Canon Howard A. Johnson as Canon Theologian of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine.

Dr. Johnson has been the Canon Theologian since 1954. His resignation, which became effective Dec. 10, will enable him to devote full time to writing and research.

Before his appointment to the Cathedral, Dr. Johnson was Professor of Theology at the School of Theology of the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., and then was a Teaching Fellow at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, the central college of the Anglican Communion. In 1959 he began a two-year trip around the world to gather material for a book on the Anglican Communion. The book, "Global Odyssey," was published in 1963. He is the author or editor of several other books, and he has written numerous articles for theological journals. ■

St. Philip's Community Center

Proposed Community-Youth Center at St. Philip's, Manhattan. The project, to cost $1,100,000, has received a $75,000 grant from the nationwide United Thank Offering of the Episcopal Churchwomen. The congregation at St. Philip's has raised some $175,000, and other gifts have come in from foundations and individuals, according to the Rev. M. Moran Weston, Rector. The new center will be built on West 133rd St., approximately where the existing parish house now stands. The structure is part of a larger building program which envisions new quarters for the Church School and other parish activities, a new sacristy, a new entrance to the church on 134th St., and a resident tower of apartments for retired people. For some years, St. Philip's has offered a daily program of many activities in the existing parish house for some 500 children and young people. The program has professionally trained leadership and is guided by a non-sectarian, interracial board of directors.

■ GRACE CATHEDRAL, San Francisco, was consecrated in ceremonies attended by church dignitaries, government officials and civic leaders on Nov. 20. Bishop James A. Pike and the Very Rev. C. Julian Bartlett, Dean of the Cathedral, officiated. The Diocese of California describes its new structure as "the first major Anglican cathedral in the United States to reach completion." The cathedral was started about 50 years ago. Its completion program cost $3 million.

OBITUARIES

The Rev. Charles J. Buck, former rector, Holy Nativity, Bronx, on Nov. 5; the Rev. Philip M. Styles, rector, Trinity, New Rochelle, on Nov. 23.

---

A stunned parish at Trinity received the news of their rector's death. He had planned to retire on Dec. 31, and the parish was preparing a testimonial for him on Dec. 6. Mr. Styles, 62, had been rector for 25 years and was dean of the Protestant clergy in New Rochelle. He was the 15th rector of Trinity since the parish was founded in 1688. One of his major contributions to the community was the innovation 15 years ago of a noonday preaching service during Lent. The services, held daily, with clergymen from many denominations as preachers, were attended by more than 54,000 people over the years. Bishop Donegan officiated at the funeral service. Death was caused by a heart attack. ■

NEW AMERICAN PAYS $100 WEEKLY...

TO THE BULLETIN READERS WHO BELIEVE THAT DRINKING AND SMOKING ARE HARMFUL!

You do not drink or smoke...so why pay premiums for those who do?

Why pay the penalty for those who drink or smoke?

Every day you pick up the paper you read more evidence that drinking and smoking can shorten life. Because they are among America's leading health problems—leading to cancer, heart trouble, sinus trouble, liver trouble and many other diseases—they're a prime cause of the high premium rates most hospitalization plans charge. But why should you pay the price for those who drink or smoke? You no longer have to! Here's why.

Our rates are based on your superior health

The new American Temperance Hospitalization Plan is not offered to drinkers and smokers, because of the high rates they cause. We can bring you a whole new set of rates that are unbelievably low because they're based on your good health as a non-drinker and non-smoker. Also, your American Temperance premiums can never be raised because you grow older or have too many claims. Only a general rate adjustment up or down could affect your low rates! And only you can cancel your policy. We cannot.

HERE ARE YOUR AMERICAN TEMPERANCE PLAN BENEFITS

1) You receive $100 weekly—even for life

The very day you enter a hospital you begin to get $100 a week cash...as long as you are hospitalized, even for life! Good in any lawfully operated hospital in the world. Choose your own! We pay in addition to any other insurance you carry. And we pay direct to you in cash...tax free!

We send out our payments to you Air Mail Special so you have cash in hand fast. And there is no limit on the number of times you can collect.

2) We cover all sicknesses and accidents.

Your policy covers you for every conceivable kind of accident and sickness except pregnancy; any act of war or military service; pre-existing conditions; or hospitalization caused by use of liquor or narcotics. Everything else that could possibly happen to you is covered. You'll be protected as never before—at amazingly low rates!

3) Other benefits for loss within 90 days of accident

(as described in policy)

We pay $2,000 cash for accidental death. We pay $2,000 cash for loss of one hand, one foot, or sight of one eye. We pay $6,000 cash for loss of both eyes, both hands, or both feet.

We invite close comparison with any other plan.

There really is no other plan like ours. But compare our rates with others for similar coverage. Discover for yourself what you save. And remember, there is no limit on how long you stay in the hospital, no limit on age, no limit on the number of times you can collect!

Here's all you do.

Fill out the application at the right. Notice the amazingly low rates! Enclose it in an envelope and mail to American Temperance Associates, Box 131, Libertyville, Illinois. Upon approval, you will get your policy promptly by mail, and coverage begins at noon on the effective date of your policy. No salesman will call. Don't delay! Every day almost 50,000 people enter hospitals. Any day, one of them could be you. Protect yourself before it's too late!

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Read over your policy carefully. Ask your minister, lawyer and doctor to examine it. Be sure it provides exactly what we say it does. Then, if for any reason at all you are not 100% satisfied, just mail your policy back to us within 30 days and we will immediately refund your entire premium. No questions asked. You can gain thousands of dollars... you risk nothing.

TEMPERANCE PLAN EVEN FOR LIFE!

Here at last is a new kind of hospitalization plan for non-drinkers and non-smokers only! The rates are fantastically low because "poor risk" drinkers and smokers are excluded. And because your health is superior...there is absolutely no age limit, no physical examination, no waiting period. Only you can cancel your policy... and no salesman will ever call! Starting from the very first day you enter any hospital...

the Emergency Summer Youth Program developed by churches in Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant as a response to the tragic outbreaks. Thanks to the ECW, the Bishop was able to make an immediate contribution of $1,000, and I can tell you that this action persuaded the Diocese of Long Island to follow suit.

"Both dioceses then applied jointly to the Presiding Bishop's Special Appeal Fund for the Church's work in race relations for a matching grant, and within days, the $1,000 had grown to $4,000—a much-needed and much-appreciated response. The program, as you probably know, provided immediate, paid employment for some 600 out-of-school, out-of-work youth who would otherwise have been idle on the city's streets. All worked out of churches in the two communities, and were involved in a variety of projects. Two of our parishes—St. Mary's, Manhattanville, and St. Philip's — were among the many participating churches."

Concerning the Alice B. Palmer Memorial Fund of $1,000, Mrs. Nikolic reported that it will be used as "a foreign aid program at home, in continuation of the spirit of Alice Palmer." The money will be used as an emergency fund for foreign students, allocated by several members of the executive board. Requests for funds should be addressed as follows: ECW, Diocese of New York, The Alice B. Palmer Memorial Fund, Diocesan House, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., New York, N.Y. 10025.

The Advent meeting also included addresses by two members of St. Philip's, Manhattan, which is receiving a grant for its new community center from the national UTO fund. They were Miss Lillian M. Richards, Director of Social Service for the New York City Department of Hospitals, and social work consultant to the vestry at St. Philip's, and V. Benjamin Louard, Executive Director of the center. ■

Housing Kit Available

The Department of Christian Social Relations has prepared a kit entitled "Equal Opportunity in Housing," which is now available to individuals and church study groups. The kit includes a copy of "Crisis on Elm Street," the 24-page booklet published by the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church; a working paper on the Chappaqua, N.Y. Fair Housing Group; a reprint of an article entitled "The 'Quiet' Integration in the Suburbs;" a reprint from The Saturday Evening Post entitled "Confessions of a Block-Buster" and other material provided by the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing.

The kit may be had by sending your name and address and 75 cents to Mr. John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., Director of Christian Social Relations, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., New York, N.Y. 10025.

Incarnation Camp To Begin Work on Major Expansion

Incarnation Church Camp expects to begin work this spring on a major expansion program. When it is finished, the camp at Ivoryton, Conn., will have 42 new cabins, a new chapel, administration building, centralized kitchen and dining room, and additional playing fields. A $200,000 fund drive is now in progress.

The camp, which is situated on a mile-long lake in 600 acres of woodland and countryside, was founded 35 years ago as a camp for children in the neighborhood of the church.

Beginning in 1953, other churches began to join Incarnation in the sponsorship of this camp, until now the venture is the nearest thing to a diocesan-wide camp that exists here. Last summer there were 286 campers from 64 churches in the diocese, together with 20 Episcopalians from other dioceses and 75 youngsters from other states and denominations. The director since 1957 has been Andrew Katsanis, who holds a bachelor's degree from Hanover College, Ind., and a master's degree in religious education from Union Theological Seminary.

The churches now sponsoring Incarnation Camp are Incarnation, All Angels, Grace, St. James', Good Shepherd (formerly the Chapel of the Incarnation), St. Thomas and All Saints, all in Manhattan. The GFS Society for Girls and the Department of Christian Education, Diocese of New York, also are sponsors.

In 1963, a pilot camping program for men and women over 60 was launched. With 68 campers in 1963 and 86 campers in 1964, this program was considered so successful that a longer camping season for this age group is planned in 1965.

The key project for 1964 was Pioneer Village for boys and girls 14 and 15 years old. Also initiated on an experimental basis, the pilot sessions received an enthusiastic response. It is planned to make Pioneer Village a permanent part of the camping program.

Construction of the new facilities is expected to be completed for use in 1966. ■

EMS Sets up New Training Center

A new center of clinical pastoral training for clergy and seminarians has been established by the Episcopal Mission Society at Bird S. Coler Memorial Hospital and Home, Welfare Island.

According to the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, EMS director, who also directs the chaplaincy program, the new center is believed to be the first in the United States offering pastoral training in the highly specialized and increasingly important area of ministry to the elderly and chronically ill. The facilities at Coler, operated by the City of New York, are rapidly becoming one of the nation's leading centers for the study and treatment of geriatric problems.

The Rev. Edward G. Robinson, formerly Chaplain and Acting Supervisor of Clinical Pastoral Training at St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, Houston, Texas, has been appointed Chaplain-Supervisor for the new clinical pastoral training center here. ■

Peter Day to Address Westchester Clericus

Peter Day, Ecumenical Officer of the Executive Council (formerly National Council) will address the Westchester Clericus at Christ Church, Bronxville, on Feb. 1. The day will begin with Holy Communion at 10:30 a.m., followed by luncheon and the address. Mr. Day formerly was editor of The Living Church, a weekly church periodical.

The Clericus will hold a pre-Lenten quiet day at its meeting on March 1. The conductor will be the Rev. A.A. Packard, Order of the Holy Cross. According to the Rev. A.R. Willis, Rector of Grace Church, Hastings, President of the Clericus, clergy of neighboring convocations are invited to both events. Luncheon reservations must be made in advance. ■

Harold D. Mock Appointed Director Of Information and Development

The director of the newly-formed diocesan Department of Information and Development has been appointed by Bishop Donegan. The Council of the Diocese concurred in this action at a recent meeting.

The new director is Harold D. Mock, for the past two years New York City Development Director for Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Mr. Mock has had wide experience in both fund raising and public relations. He assumed his new position on January 15.

The Department of Information and Development was created at diocesan convention last May. At that time, the existing Department of Promotion was divided into two new departments—Information and Development, and Stewardship. With Eric Ley as director and the Rev. George Regas as chairman of the department, Stewardship began its separate existence last fall.

In his message to the convention, Bishop Donegan described as "serious" the financial needs facing this diocese if it is going to expand, or even maintain, its missionary program. "We have or can find the resources necessary, but only as we really apply ourselves to the task. Our first step should be to implement our new Department of Information and Development. Then . . . we can develop and foster new and imaginative plans for raising funds through other than the usual channels," said the Bishop.

Mr. Mock, the man who will direct this program, has had 11 years' experience in campaign direction and public relations. At Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, he was responsible for the Metropolitan New York area during a multi-million-dollar fund-raising program for a new Science Center at the Institute's headquarters in Troy, N. Y., as well as organizing and directing the Annual Fund program.

From 1956 to 1962, he was public relations and campaign director for Tamblyn & Brown, Inc., New York City public relations counsellors, where he was responsible for developing and organizing fund-raising campaigns. He also conducted surveys to determine the feasibility of successful fund-raising operations for clients. He directed campaigns for the National Cultural Center of America, Washington, D. C., and the United Engineering Center, New York City, both nation-wide programs. He also conducted campaigns for several metropolitan area hospitals, and for Elmira College.

For three years he was associated with Ketchum, Inc., Pittsburgh, Pa., a fund-raising organization, as associate director and publicity director.

Mr. Mock began his career as a reporter with the Brush-Moore Newspapers in Canton, Ohio. He served in the U. S. Army in Europe and Japan as personnel officer, adjutant and aide to the commandant. He is a member of the Church of the Resurrection, Manhattan, and resides at 250 East 73rd Street, Manhattan. ■

New Presiding Bishop Takes Office

Bishop Donegan, accompanied by Dean Butler and Clifford P. Morehouse, attended the installation of the Rt. Rev. John E. Hines as Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church on Jan. 27.

The impressive ceremonies were held in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, Washington, D.C. Participating in the service were the choirs of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine and St. Thomas Church.

Bishop Hines, who formerly was the Bishop of Texas, was elected at General Convention last October. He is the 22nd Presiding Bishop, succeeding the Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, who retired because of ill health. In a special election last Dec. 4, the Very Rev. J. Milton Richardson, Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, Houston, Texas, was elected the new Bishop of Texas. ■

The Bishop's Message

All the lay people of our Diocese may not have yet learned that the Anglican Congress and our General Convention unanimously adopted a new program, known as "Mutual Responsibility."

In essence "Mutual Responsibility" calls upon our Church to take the following steps:

To join —as we choose—in an immediate commitment for increased support in money and manpower, through existing or new channels, in co-operation with the other churches of our Communion. . . .

To undertake —a radical study of our own obedience to mission. We need to ask whether our procedures are appropriate to our world, and if not, how they should be changed. . . .

To seek —the way to receive as well as to give, asking what other churches and cultures may bring to our life, and to share our tasks and problems with others. . . .

To test —and evaluate every activity in our life by the test of mission and of service to others, in our following after Christ. . . .

To develop —every possible channel for communication with our companions in the Anglican Communion—indeed in the Church of Christ as a whole. . . .

The call of "Mutual Responsibility" is a call to a greater commitment to the mission of the Church in the world; and to a renewal and deepening of our own faith and hope and charity, "looking upon our giving as a God-given way of expressing our relationship to Him and to His people here at home as well as across the world."

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

The Story of the Church's First Permanent Religious Community

One hundred years ago on Feb. 2, five young women knelt before Bishop Horatio Potter at the altar of St. Michael's Church, Manhattan, and presented their lives to God as the Sisters of St. Mary.

In 1865, this was a daring act for those five women—and the bishop—because as yet religious orders were something new in the Episcopal Church. For 300 years after the dissolution of the monasteries by Henry VIII in England, there had been no such thing as a monastic community, either for men or women, in the Anglican Communion. In fact, until the early 1800's, the feeling against them was too strong to be overcome. Gradually, as the Oxford movement in England developed, the value of the religious life started to be recognized again, and in 1845 a religious community was established. It was followed by others, and the idea spread to America.

To the Diocese of New York, goes the credit of having founded the first permanent and officially constituted religious order in the Episcopal Church. And to Bishop Potter goes the credit for considerable courage and foresight because he was probably the first Anglican bishop since the 16th century to stand in a parish church and officially bring into existence a religious community. He chose the name of the Sisterhood of St. Mary himself, and he picked Feb. 2, the Feast of the Purification, as the day for the service of reception.

It was a bright, sunny day as a small group gathered for the historic service. When it was over, the Sisters entertained their friends at a simple luncheon, and then went straight back to their work. One of them was nursing a small boy with smallpox.

This year, Feb. 2 was mostly a day of quiet celebration for the Sisters, whose headquarters is in Peekskill. But on Saturday, Feb. 6, the Sisters, their friends and associates held their official observance, a sung Eucharist in St. Luke's Chapel of Trinity Parish. Plans called for Bishop Boynton to preside, the Rev. Paul C. Weed, Jr., Vicar of St. Luke's, to be the celebrant, and the Rev. Alfred Pederson, Superior of the Society of St. John the Evangelist, to deliver the sermon. Both St. Luke's and Trinity Parish figure prominently in the Community's early history. In St. Luke's sacristy, the Sisters convened their first chapter meeting in the presence of Dr. Isaac Tuttle, their first pastor. The second chaplain of the Community was Dr. Morgan Dix, Rector of Trinity from 1862 until his death in 1908.

After their anniversary celebration, the Sisters once again went straight back to their work, which is in schools, hospitals and retreat houses spread over a wide area.

The five Sisters who were professed on that long-ago day in St. Michael's Church were named Harriet, Jane, Sarah, Mary and Amelia. Little has been written about any but the first, Harriet Starr Cannon, who was elected the first Mother and is known as the Mother Foundress. She must have been an amazing woman with a firm, yet kindly character, keen administrative abilities and great spiritual endowments.

Born in Charleston, S.C., in 1823, she was orphaned at two, when her parents died of yellow fever, and sent to live with an aunt in Bridgeport, Conn. Apparently she was bright, cheerful and agreeable as a child, although sensitive and serious, too. She had one sister, two years older, whom she adored. When this sister died in 1855, Harriet became more than ever absorbed in a more spiritual than worldly sort of life.

She discovered that the Rev. Dr. William A. Muhlenberg (founder of St. Luke's Hospital) had started a religious community at the Church of the Holy Communion, Manhattan, and she decided to join it. Dr. Muhlenberg had organized these women to do nursing and parish work. He boldly called them "sisters" regardless of the strong prejudice against this word, and he sent them out, in an attire that clearly identified them, to work among the poor and sick.

But Dr. Muhlenberg did not believe in vows or rules or lifetime commitments; some of the Sisters, including Sister Harriet, who was a strong leader, did. After a while, the Sisters of the Holy Communion dispersed.

About this time, Bishop Potter began to take a hand in things. He suggested that Sister Harriet and her companions take charge of the House of Mercy, a shelter for "fallen women," which had been founded in 1854 by Mrs. William Richmond, wife of the rector of St. Michael's Church. (This is the same Mr. Richmond, who, with his assistant, the Rev. Thomas M. Peters, was responsible for the early work of the Episcopal Mission Society. See Bulletin, Jan., 1964.)

So successful were their efforts that when Mr. Peters opened another social agency called the Sheltering Arms in October, 1864, the Sisters were asked to oversee its operation, too. In the meantime, Bishop Potter had appointed a committee of five priests to consider the matter of Sisterhoods.

Points in Manhattan associated with the early history of the Community of St. Mary.

Bell tower and sanctuary end of St. Mary's Chapel on the convent grounds in Peekskill.

So far as service was concerned, the Sisters had their hands full. In a city where the rate of crime, drunkenness and disease was appalling, where the City Inspector reported 25,000 prostitutes, 18,000 persons living in cellars, and some 40,000 unclaimed children roaming the alleys and wharves, the efforts of a handful of dedicated young women must have assumed heroic proportions. Still, these Sisters were convinced that they had been called, not merely to do a work, but to live a life, with the work the expression of that life. They wanted a religious community of the kind that had evolved in the early days of Christianity. And this, on Feb. 2, 1865, is what they got.

Within 10 years, the Community of St. Mary was busy at three schools, two hospitals and an orphanage, as well as at the House of Mercy. They also worked at the Sheltering Arms and at St. Barnabas House for a while, but forces within the Church which opposed the concept of a Sisterhood prompted them to withdraw from these agencies.

In 1905, the Community was organized into two Provinces, each with its own convent, novitiate and branch houses. Each Province elects its own Mother Superior and representatives to the General Chapter, which is the central governing body. But all of the Sisters live under a common rule, are governed by a common constitution, wear the same habit and use the same forms of worship—the Monastic Diurnal translated from the Benedictine Office. There are approximately 90 Sisters in the Community.

Here are the institutions they operate:

EASTERN PROVINCE

St. Mary's-in-the-Field, Valhalla

This is the old House of Mercy with which the Sisters started their work. Originally on West 86th St., Manhattan, it moved early in the 1900's to a farm tract in Valhalla. St. Mary's provides three years of high school, with academic, commercial and vocational courses for girls who get into trouble of one kind or another.

St. Mary's School, Peekskill

This school is the result of two schools which were started by the Sisters and later consolidated. It is well known as an excellent preparatory school for girls.

St. Mary's Hospital for Children, Bayside, L.I.

This institution was founded in 1870 when there was little provision for sick children of the very poor. As the work grew, some of the ablest specialists in the medical profession became interested, and the hospital gradually came to rank as one of the best of its kind. In 1952, it moved from West 34th St. to a new building in Bayside, L.I.

GTS Gets Bishop Manning's Papers

A collection of personal papers belonging to the late Bishop Manning has been acquired by the library of General Theological Seminary. The Rt. Rev. William Thomas Manning was Bishop of New York from 1921 to 1946, a period of 25 years. But his active and often controversial involvement in public life extended for a period of nearly 50 years, according to the New York Times, which in a recent news article described him as a "fiery Episcopalian." He died in 1949.

The papers include about 15,000 separate items. There are the Bishop's diary, hundreds of handwritten notes, sermons, clippings, photographs, magazine articles and letters from most of the Roman Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders of the era. Politicians, from Presidents to ward-heelers, also were represented. His sermons, based on the belief that religion is involved in all of life, ranged from condemnations of heresy to corruption in government. They sometimes raised sharp comment. The collection was given by the Bishop's heirs, with the cooperation of the Rev. W. D. F. Hughes, a close friend and a former canon at the Cathedral. ∎

carry on a far-flung program

Tennessee at the request of the late Bishop Quintard, and served during the 1878 yellow fever epidemic in Memphis. In 1910, the Sisters opened a mission school three miles from the University of the South. It is now a boarding and day school for girls.

House of the Redeemer, Manhattan
Formerly a private mansion at 7 E. 95th St., Manhattan, it has been used as a retreat center for 15 years.

Mission of St. Mary the Virgin, Sagada, Philippine Islands
The Sisters have worked in the Philippines since 1917. They started a mission and later a school for native girls. A native Sisterhood was organized in 1934, working under the direction of the American community. Eventually it probably will become an independent group.

WESTERN PROVINCE

Kemper Hall, Kenosha, Wis.
Kemper Hall, originally called the "Kenosha Female Seminary," has been under the care of the Community of St. Mary since 1878. The school is one of the oldest Church-related schools in the Midwest, but it is known for its forward-looking methods. It accepts girls from the seventh grade through high school.

St. Mary's Home for Children, Chicago, Ill.
Started as an orphan home in the late 1890's with the purpose of providing as much of a home-like atmosphere as possible, contrasted with the usual institutional methods.

St. Raphael's House, Evergreen, Col.
Chiefly a retreat house, located in spectacular Rocky Mountain scenery.

DeKoven Foundation for Church Work, Racine, Wis.
Started in the 1930's as the summer camp of St. Mary's Home for Children, Chicago, and is now used all the year round for conferences and retreats, in addition to the camp.

Ascension Day School, Sierra Madre, California
The newest work to be started by the Community. The school, a parish program of the Church of the Ascension, accepts children from kindergarten through eighth grade.

Regarding the work of the Community during the past century, Mother Frideswide, the present Mother Superior General, said recently: "Our founding Sisters were pioneers. It sometimes seems as if we are no longer such, and it is some time since we took an obvious step forward. But perhaps we are being called upon to be pioneers in another way. The corporal works of mercy of which a woman is capable are now many, and those in which we made early steps have often been taken over by state agencies, and so ringed around with restrictions that they no longer seem suitable for Religious. All the more reason for us to pioneer in matters related to the spiritual works of mercy, for us to train our Sisters to give retreats as well as to run the House where the retreat is given. . . "

Next month The Bulletin will bring you an article about the Community's retreat center in Manhattan, the House of the Redeemer. ■

in brief . . .

■ NASHOTAH HOUSE, the Episcopal seminary in Nashotah, Wis., has begun construction of a new $300,000 dining hall. The new refectory is the first major building project to be undertaken in a $5 million development program started in 1960. Other parts of the expansion program will include enlargement of the chapel and a new wing for the library. Enrollment at Nashotah House has more than doubled in the past seven years.

■ A HIGH-RISE housing project for older people will be constructed by the Rochester Area Council of Churches. This major undertaking will cost $2 million and will contain some 200 units for persons in the low-middle income brackets. The Rev. Richard N. Hughes, Executive Secretary of the Council, reported that the site has not yet been chosen, but it is hoped that it will be built in one of Rochester's urban renewal areas with full racial integration. Financing will be through a 50-year Federal mortgage loan to be repaid from rentals. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Sometimes at Holy Communion I've felt like a cannibal when I thought about eating, even symbolically, someone's body and blood. It's a pretty outrageous thing to imagine. Yet this is our religion. What's the answer?

A small baby starts out in life totally dependent on somebody else's body and blood. And indeed, all life comes into being that way. And even after the baby is born and in the nursing stage, the child lives quite literally off of another human body. This really doesn't shock anybody. Indeed, in the long run it's shocking to avoid this kind of awareness.

It is true of all symbolism that one must find out what the symbol really means.

To the Hebrew, "blood" meant life, and "body" meant death, and it was in the reunion of body and blood that the resurrection was shown forth. To avoid the poetry of language, and indeed the very realistic symbolism of poetic language, is to end up without even getting near to the fundamental idea.

Were I to say to you "I give you my heart," in any realistic terms this becomes simply absurd. By the phrase, I did not mean I'm going to tear my chest open, and rip out a living object and hand it to you, like to the officiant in some ancient Mexican religion. Not at all. The poetry of it is perfectly clear. "Take my heart" assumes symbolically that the heart is the seat of emotion (which it isn't), and you understand perfectly well that my good will towards you, my affection for you, is manifested in this phrase.

Many Episcopalians never drink; many others drink occasionally. Still others drink a lot and regularly with no apparent damage to health, home or happiness. Tragically, however, there are some with very serious drinking problems, and many of these may be among the nation's 5 million alcoholics. How many there actually are in the Church is anybody's guess, but in a nationwide poll of Episcopal clergy three years ago, alcoholism emerged as the commonest single problem on which parishioners sought pastoral counsel. The Diocese of New York is apparently no exception to this pattern, according to a survey just completed by the Diocesan Committee on Alcoholism. The conclusions, which are presented here, are based on a surprisingly large response to a questionnaire mailed to all parochial clergy. According to the Rev. Samuel B. Bird, Jr., chairman of the 12-member committee, a response of less than 30% was anticipated. But 60% of the diocese's rectors, vicars and priests-in-charge replied. Early in October, Bishop Donegan announced that the four overnight clergy conferences in 1965 would be devoted to the subject of alcoholism. The Committee was asked to help with these meetings; the results of the survey are being used for this purpose.

SURVEY

An Analysis

by The Rev. Samuel B. Bird, Jr.
Chairman, Diocesan Committee on Alcoholism

Statistics are never conclusive and can only indicate either a trend in thinking or a possible area of further concern in any given problem. The recent questionnaire which was entitled "Drinking Problems in the Parish," and sent to all diocesan clergy, has supplied the Committee on Alcoholism with some interesting statistics and indicated that this is indeed a major area of concern to the parish priest.

It is clear that problem drinkers are found in every parish, and that age, sex or social status have little to do with who is or who is not an alcoholic. A very small percentage of clergy reported that they knew of no problem drinkers in their congregation, but it would be safe to say, I think, that this may be because they do not recognize some of the many forms which this disease can take. The alcoholic usually will never admit that drinking is his problem but will come to his priest with another problem, in reality nothing but a screen for the suffering caused by his drinking.

The age range of problem drinkers indicates that there is indeed a large area of concern. It is not unrealistic to see the problem as being a very real one to be faced by the teenager. This is corroborated by news stories like the ones from Darien or Port Chester. The whole area of teenage drinking needs special attention.

At the other end of the scale is the elderly drinker. It is a well known fact that the older the problem drinker gets, the harder it is to help him. The aged drinker, then, is in need of another type of ministry and care.

For the most part the alcoholic reaches his most trying time at the peak of his ability. It is here that the most can be done for him. It is here that the Church can minister to the individual and help him see that he is valuable as a person and that he can become a useful and accepted member of society. This is what the alcoholic seeks more than anything else.

Women are no different from men in this area. They want the same thing: to be accepted as persons. They can drink more easily away from the public eye because they can withdraw into

Parishes and People

● When she returns to her missionary assignment in Liberia later this year, Sister Mary Michael of the Order of St. Helena, Newburgh, will be an expert on what to do if her car pfizzes out in the African wilderness. For the past couple of months, Gerard Kelly, service manager for a nearby sales agency, has been teaching Sister Mary Michael all about carburetors, fuel pumps, generators, pistons and spark plugs. "I can change a tire in five minutes flat," the Sister reports. In return for the lessons, Sister Mary Michael has been able to share a rare accomplishment with her tutor: the ability to say "automobile" in three primitive Liberian languages—Bande, Kisi and Loma.

● The day before the new parish house at Church of the Transfiguration, Manhattan, (The Little Church Around the Corner) was dedicated, a Sister from the Roman Catholic Convent of St. Mary Reparatrix across the street, visited the Rev. Orin A. Griesmyer. She had brought a desk pad adorned with a wide leather margin, hand-tooled by the Sisters. With the gift was a letter. It read—

"Reverend dear Father:

The Sisters here are in retreat, but that will not prevent them from sharing in the joy that will be yours tomorrow. We are so happy that we had a little share in helping the work along. This gift comes with our best wishes to all our friends who—to us—belong to 'Our Little Church Across the Street'!

Sincerely in Christ,
Mary of O.L. of Sorrows and the Sisters of Mary Reparatrix"

The "little share" was the Sisters' permission for Transfiguration to rehearse in the crypt of St. Leo's Church, adjoining the convent, and to place its grand piano there after the old parish house was torn down.

● The Rev. George F. Regas, Rector of Grace, Nyack, has been named "Citizen of the Year" by the Civic Association of the Nyacks. He is being honored at a dinner in Nyack early this month. A spokesman for the Civic Association said that Mr. Regas was selected "for contributions to the community which reached far beyond his own parish."

The rector was instrumental in creating the Rockland County Conference on Religion and Race, a project dedicated to furthering better racial relations in Rockland County. He also organized a world affairs program and the Operation Understanding Forum. The latter was designed to aid understanding of the ecumenical movement.

● The vestry at Christ Church, Bronxville, has established a memorial fund for theological scholarships. It will provide scholarship aid for deserving students in seminaries in the Episcopal Church in the United States as well as in other branches of the Anglican Communion and will be a general memorial to members of Christ Church who have died. The rector, the Rev. Raymond T. Ferris, said that the new fund will not restrict the disposition of funds given as memorials in the future, but often parishioners have wished to make an offering in memory of a loved one, and have wondered what to choose as a suitable memorial. "Now, funds given as a thank offering for a life can help make another life more useful for God's purposes," the rector pointed out. ■

Meet Julia Sibley, First Woman Chaplain

"The chaplain is here to see you," said the nurse, fluffing the patient's pillow.

"Oh, that's nice," came the reply, followed by an expression of great astonishment.

The chaplain was a woman.

Miss Julia Sibley, a slim, attractive parishioner at St. Thomas Church, Manhattan, is a pioneer in an experiment that may open the doors to a new career for women. She is the nation's first professional woman in chaplaincy work, and as such, she is paving the way for what could provide a useful outlet for thousands of other women.

Her work is part of an experiment being conducted by 11 churches of six denominations (including the Episcopal Church) at four midtown hospitals. It is the outgrowth of a unique cooperative ministry which began in 1952. At that time, the New York Hospital asked the East Midtown Ministers Association, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York and the New York Board of Rabbis to help establish a regular chaplaincy service. Subsequently, this ministry was expanded to include Lenox Hill, James Ewing and Memorial Hospitals. The Rev. Hugh McCandless of Epiphany Church is the founder of the East Midtown Ministers Association, and as a result the Episcopal Church has taken a prominent part in the development of hospital chaplaincy work on Manhattan's upper East Side.

At about the time the program was getting under way, Miss Sibley was working in Washington as confidential secretary to Eric Johnston, the late movie "czar." Somehow or other, she was prompted to enroll at Union Theological Seminary. As an Episcopalian, she knew that she could not be ordained, but she nevertheless spent three years studying for her master's degree in theology.

This was an abrupt switch for a popular young woman whose father, Professor Frederick H. Sibley, was head of the School of Engineering at the University of Nevada, and whose godmother is Marjorie Merriweather Post (the Post Toasties heiress.)

During the summers, Miss Sibley worked as a volunteer in hospitals and exhibited such talent as a counselor and comforter of the sick that after her graduation from Union, the Rev. Cornelius Trowbridge, Head Chaplain at St. Luke's Hospital, proposed that the Episcopal Church hire her for chaplaincy work.

A woman chaplain? Who had ever heard of a chaplain who was not a minister? But why not? The questions flew back and forth. Four months later, through the efforts of Dr. Frederick M. Morris, Rector of St. Thomas, Miss Sibley became the first unordained woman to serve as a professional chaplaincy assistant.

Wearing regular street clothes and a chaplain's pin, she calls regularly at all four hospitals several times a week. She baptizes babies, counsels families, prays with them if asked to do so, and attends the dying.

Miss Sibley hopes that through this embryo experiment, churches will be inspired to pool funds for hiring hospital chaplains. She also envisions short seminars conducted by clergy and chaplains in their home communities to train housewives in theology and psychology.

These volunteers, she believes, could, like nurses' aids, assist the regular hospital staff—in this case the chaplains—in comforting hospitalized patients, and letting them know that the Church really cares about them. ■

Council Sets Up Race Funds

For the second year, the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church has set up a fund for race relations, and has announced that it will try to raise $100,000 for this purpose during 1965.

Clergymen and other churchmen who find themselves in local situations demanding emergency measures will be eligible to receive aid from this fund.

However, in setting up the fund, the Council stipulated that priests participating in projects which receive aid must obtain the approval of the bishop whose jurisdiction is concerned.

During 1964, more than $80,000 was contributed by individuals for the support of race-related projects across the country, the Council has reported. The largest single allocation, $40,000 went to the Commission on Religion and Race of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A.

The Church of St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, received $2,000 for the employment of a summer program worker. The Diocese of New York received $1,000 for its program in race relations. And the Emergency Summer Youth Program, started by Harlem and Bedford-Stuyvesant churches in response to summer rioting, received $2,000. Other grants were made to dioceses and churches throughout the nation. ■ the home. Thus it seems reasonable that the larger the parish the less likely the woman drinker would be "found out." In the small town or village, it is much harder to hide because everyone's life is everyone's business.

As we have said, it is dubious whether the alcoholic in serious trouble will seek counseling. One third of our clergy report that they have counseled or attempted to counsel five or more alcoholics in the past year. How many came to these priests of their own volition and how many came because a spouse or friend first came to the priest? We are told that another 50% of the clergy have worked with at least one alcoholic in the past year. This is fine, but is this really all the alcoholics who need the Church's help? We come back to the question of how to recognize the alcoholic.

Alcoholics Anonymous holds meetings in at least 31 parishes and this is one reason why so many of the clergy have been to meetings. It is rather surprising that there are not more Episcopal churches which hold meetings in their parish halls.

There are many churches which would welcome AA but there seem not to be enough groups to go around. In addition to AA, most of the responding clergy have used other available community resources and this is good to know because it shows that there is recognition of the fact that AA is not always the answer for every alcoholic.

It also seems safe to say that the majority of clergy are not simply using AA as a "dumping ground" for the suffering human being which is the alcoholic.

Most gratifying indeed is the fact that 90% of the clergy have got beyond the point of seeing alcoholism as simply a moral problem or a "lack of will power". This shows that progress has indeed been made in the last 25 years in convincing people of the disease concept.

It also shows the committee that it can now proceed directly into the whole area of counseling aids. The committee can now serve the clergy by giving facts which will be helpful in the redeeming process which is so essential for the person who is lost and unloved by himself and the world, and who, most of all, has to know that there are those who still love him and want him. ■

Bishop Bayne Named First Vice President Of Executive Council

The Rt. Rev. Stephen F. Bayne, Jr., who recently became Director of the Overseas Department of the Executive Council, has been named first vice president of the Council.

Bishop Bayne's predecessor, Bishop John B. Bentley, had held the office of first vice president before his retirement last Nov. 1.

The Executive Council, formerly known as National Council, is the body which carries out the administrative functions of the national church between General Conventions. These occur every three years.

Charles F. Bound of St. Mark's Church, Mount Kisco, who was elected to serve on the Executive Council at the 1964 General Convention in St. Louis, has been assigned to two committees. They are Finance and Christian Social Relations. ■

The Burning of the Greens

Flames leap skyward as residents of Bedford gather at St. Matthew's Church to watch their old Christmas trees and greens burn in a spectacular bonfire. Each year St. Matthew's sets aside a Sunday afternoon just before Epiphany for a special service called the Burning of the Greens. The ceremony is for both parishioners and members of the community who bring their greens to a level field near the church the day before. At the time of the ceremony, they gather in the driveway in front of the church where the rector, the Rev. Arthur W. Hargate, presides for the reading of a lesson and the singing of a hymn. The Bedford Volunteer Fire Department supervises the big fire which follows. Then young and old troop to the parish house for coffee and hot chocolate. Charles H. Simmons was this year's chairman. Photo by William Osmun

If you have a problem, and I suggest that you "use my brain" in the matter, you really can't, but this doesn't mean that the phrase makes no sense.

The real danger about hypersensitivity in language, is that hypersensitive language ends up by saying exactly nothing. All poetry is expressive because it conjures up an association which makes sense of an idea—indeed, it is generally the only thing which makes sense of an idea.

For example, we are sufficiently aware nowadays that heaven is not "up" and that hell is not "down", and that God is not "out there." This is nothing new; we've known this for quite some time. If, however, I were to turn in the middle of a liturgical service and say, "Lower your hearts," and you were to reply, "We lower them unto the Lord," the whole thing would become simply ridiculous.

The poetry of association and imagination conveys more than any strict interpretation of language ever can. In poetic terms, I, in common with all the rest of mankind, live off somebody else's body and blood all the time. I was born that way into this world. I live on other men's sweat; I live by other people's brains; I exist by other people's hearts; in the most real sense, I reap other people's efforts. I live off other people's work, and any language which makes it implicitly clear is language far too valuable to lose because of a superficial squeamishness.

It must be remembered that even the worst possible sense in which cannibalism is implied was often in its own way a religious matter. The cannibal in most instances did not eat his enemy in order to subdue his enemy, or because he particularly liked the food; he ate it because of a religious reason, the necessity of obtaining another's strength. If this is true even on the lowest level, somehow I think we can be trusted to move on up to another level. ■

The Archbishop Visits New York

The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Michael Ramsey, center, and Mrs. Ramsey are shown chatting with Bishop Donegan in the Bishop's House during their recent unofficial visit to New York. The Archbishop and his wife spent two days as Bishop Donegan's guests before leaving for San Francisco. From there, their itinerary included stops in Honolulu, the Fiji Islands, New Zealand, Australia and Singapore to visit Anglican churches. There were no official functions during their New York stay.

Council Lists Plays, Pageants

A directory of seasonal resources for Lent, Easter and Whitsuntide is available from the Department of Christian Education, Executive Council. The listing includes data about plays, pageants, services and choral readings for these three seasons, information about where to obtain them and suggestions about the type of groups for which they might be appropriate.

The list can be obtained from Miss Phyllis Towner, Department of Christian Education, Episcopal Church Center, 815 Second Ave., New York, N. Y. 10017. ■

Clergy Wives Attend Service at Cathedral

Clergy wives from many communities throughout the diocese were the guests of the Clergy Wives of Manhattan on March 8 when a Lenten service and meditation was held at the Cathedral. Bishop Donegan conducted the service. A luncheon in Cathedral House followed.

The committee which planned the event consisted of Mrs. Charles F. Boynton, Mrs. Peter Chase, Mrs. Richard Gary, Mrs. Benjamin Minifie, Mrs. Clarke Oler and Mrs. Lawrence Rose. ■

THE COVER—Design adapted from this year's motif for the Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief (One Great Hour of Sharing), the united appeal which is conducted through Church World Service and annually finances emergency and continuing relief services around the world. This year, most churches will observe this interdenominational appeal on Sunday, March 28.

National MRI Head To Address Women At Thank Offering

Bishop Thomas H. Wright, Chairman of the national church's Committee on Mutual Responsibility, will address the Episcopal Churchwomen of the Diocese of New York on Saturday, May 15, at their United Thank Offering Ingathering.

Women from all over the diocese are invited to the all-day program which starts at 10:30 a.m. with the Thank Offering service in the Cathedral. Luncheon will be held in Synod House undercroft. Election of officers and their installation by Bishop Donegan will take place during the afternoon.

Bishop Wright, who is the Bishop of East Carolina, was named Chairman of the Committee on Mutual Responsibility by Bishop Lichtenberger following the Anglican Congress of 1963.

"We are especially pleased that Bishop Wright is visiting us at this time because the women of the Church are now focusing their concerns and responsibilities on the significance of MRI in all their commitments, both as individuals and as a group," commented Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., ECW President. ■

The Bishop's Message

Once again Lent comes to us with its gracious call and opportunity to offer these forty days to the glory of God and to the strengthening, cleansing and renewing of our lives. This season ought to be welcomed for it looks forward to, and prepares us for, Easter—the most glorious feast of the Christian Year.

Although the Church does not give us minute rules for the observance of Lent, the Book of Common Prayer, under the heading "A Table of Fasts," does make it clear that Ash Wednesday and Good Friday are to be observed as Fast Days and that during the Forty Days of Lent there is required of us "such a measure of abstinence as is more especially suited to extraordinary acts and exercises of devotion." But the manner in which this shall be carried out is left to the judgment and conscience of each individual.

The Church does not hedge us about with prohibitions and prescriptions as to our lives and conduct, but holds up clearly before us the great principles of the Christian life, and leaves us to apply them under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. We are trusted so to use the Lenten season that it will make our religion more real to us and a greater power in our lives.

Lent can be spent in such a way that it only increases our self-satisfaction. We give up a few things and attend a few extra services, and then are pleased with ourselves because we have been more pious than our neighbors. This is not a true Lent.

A true Lent is a time for taking spiritual inventory, for honest spiritual examination, for self-searching penitence; a time for realigning our wills with the purpose of God for our lives; a time for seeking from God pardon, strength and peace, that we may be true to our Christian calling, and a blessing to others. It is a time for spiritual study, meditation, prayer and some kind of special personal service to others, in the name of Christ our Lord.

While Lent is inescapably personal, yet it is also a corporate act of the Church. Millions of faithful Christians all over the nation, all over the world, will keep forty days with Christ and with us. As individual Christians we are strengthened by the devotion and discipline of our corporate witness to our faith in Christ.

Our great need today is the renewing and strengthening of our faith in Christ. It is this to which Lent calls us in prayer, in worship and in sacrament. Let it be our prayer this Lent that we may be more faithful and, that by our active witness, fellowship, and service in the Church and in the world, we may help to build Christ's Kingdom here on earth.

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

Diocesan Missionary Quota Payments

Total contributions by parishes and missions toward the 1964 Missionary Quota amounted to $1,111,638, an increase of $63,392 (6 per cent) over 1963.

The total requirement for both Executive (formerly National) Council and diocesan needs was $1,396,174. Receipts fell short of this amount by $284,536 (20 per cent). Again, because of the deficit it was necessary to curtail important programs at both the national and diocesan level.

Each of the past few years several congregations overpaid their minimal quotas. This compensates in part for congregations which either do not meet quota, or, as in the case of 4 congregations in 1964, fail to make any payment against their quota. 31 congregations overpaid their quotas in 1964 compared with 33 in 1963 and 43 in 1962. ■

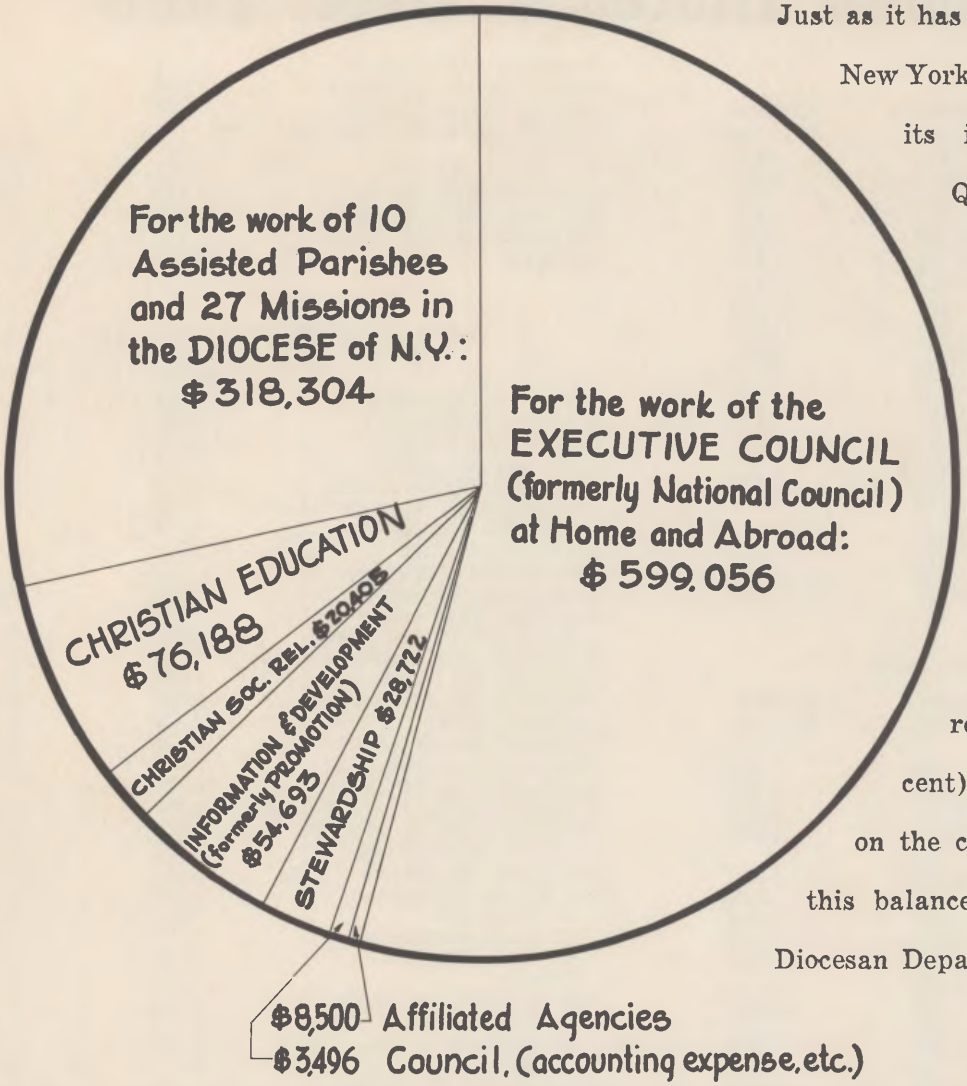
Diocese Practices Dollar-For-Dollar Giving!

More than half of $1,109,364 given to "others"



Just as it has since 1919, the Diocese of New York again gave more than half its income from Missionary Quota payments to the National Church for its program at home and overseas. Out of a total of $1,109,364 spent in 1964, $599,056 (54 per cent) went for work beyond the confines of the Diocese. The remaining $510,308 (46 per cent) was distributed as shown on the chart. The largest part of this balance ($318,304) went to the Diocesan Department of Missions.

Need Books in Liberia? Ask the CPC

By Ellen L. Morehouse

Diocesan Director of the Church Periodical Club, ECW

The Church Periodical Club is not a club! It is part of the women's work of the Church—the only agency that supplies books and magazines to workers and institutions that need these essential tools throughout the world.

In this diocese, all seven convocations have CPC programs. A large part of this work consists of discovering the needs of the institutions, chaplains and missions, and supplying the printed materials which they require. And they do request an endless list of things: Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymnals, books, magazines, tracts, records, games and cards. Some of the convocations have undertaken projects outside their borders, such as aid to libraries or bishops in missionary districts at home and overseas.

The diocesan Church Periodical Club, supported by many parishes, has been able to make a real contribution in many areas this year.

Within the diocese, it continued its program of helping seminarians by giving each postulant and candidate for Holy Orders $20 worth of books of his choosing. These are basically textbooks, but they also form the nucleus of the priest's future library. This year there were 39 postulants and candidates for Holy Orders. Also, publications of all kinds were given to chaplains of the Episcopal Mission Society.

Outside the diocese, the CPC sent printed materials to many areas. One active inner-city mission which is ministering to a crucial area asked for 144 Bibles. In the Southwest, a lay worker in a remote village needed some books. With a family of five to support, he is studying for the ministry at night, and he simply couldn't afford them. He wrote the CPC, "You just can't realize what it means to have the promise of the whole list at no cost to me—and new books, too! I just don't have words to express my thanks."

Many books were sent to libraries in the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica and Korea.

Church Club Holds Annual Dinner

Bishop Donegan and Edward Everett Watts, Jr., President of the Church Club of New York, at the club's 78th annual dinner held at the Hotel Plaza on Jan. 25. Bishop Donegan devoted his entire address to commentaries about Winston Churchill, who had just died. "The death of Winston Churchill marks the passing of an era," said the Bishop. "Not only will our English language be the poorer but also the ordinary citizen's faith in himself and the rightness of the things he believes will seem less certain." The Hon. Leonard P. Moore, Circuit Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals, was the second speaker. Bishop Wetmore gave the invocation. Nearly 500 persons attended the dinner.

36 Attend ELNY Conference

Ways in which to strengthen men's commitment as Christians in general and Episcopalians in particular were explored at a diocesan-wide officers' conference of the Episcopal Laymen of New York. The conference, the first one of its kind, was held at the Bishop Donegan Episcopal Conference Center in Tuxedo Park.

The Episcopal Laymen of New York (ELNY) is a movement created by Bishop Donegan in 1961.

Assembled were 25 laymen from all seven convocations, each holding an elective or appointive position in the ELNY structure, and 11 clergy advisers. Taking as their backdrop the recent emphasis on Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ, the men attempted to pinpoint ways of achieving greater commitment. Two needs which emerged are the creation of an aggressive evangelism program and an improvement in adult education both with relation to the problems of the world around us and the way in which these, in turn, relate to the Church.

During the conference, which began on a Friday evening and ended on Saturday, the Rev. George F. Regas, Rector of Grace Church, Nyack, and a member of the Diocesan Board of ELNY, delivered a keynote address on the subject of personal commitment. There were also several "role-plays" designed to dramatize the relationship between an ELNY representative and his rector. These and the discussions which followed were under the supervision of the Rev. Raymond Cunningham, Rector of Grace Church, Millbrook, also a Diocesan Board member.

Recommendations for certain structural changes in the ELNY program were suggested to the Diocesan Board, which will review these and act upon them at a meeting on March 15. ■

Mission Series

St. Luke's Church, Beacon, and Trinity, Fishkill, will hold a jointly-sponsored mission during Holy Week. All of the mission services will be held at Trinity on April 12, 13 and 14 at 8 p.m. The speakers, in order of their appearance, will be the Rev. Raymond Cunningham of Grace, Millbrook; the Rev. Rhys Williams of Christ Church, Poughkeepsie and the Rev. Reamer Kline, President of Bard College. This is the fourth year for a joint program of this kind. ■

GOOD GRIEF!
NOW IT'S
The Gospel According to PEANUTS.

By Robert L. Short

Foreword by Nathan A. Scott, Jr.

As wonderfully imaginative parables of our times, the Peanuts cartoons hold many surprising lessons. Robert L. Short interprets the comic strip's prophetic meaning from a theological perspective and highlights his remarks with selected cartoons. The result: a unique handbook of the Christian faith, illustrated with Peanuts.

Church School teachers crowd around Miss Irene Henderson, Associate Director of the diocesan Department of Christian Education, seated at right; and Miss Marianna Hane, Field Worker from Windham House, at left, during the registration period for demonstration classes sponsored by the department at St. George's Church.

With Church School teachers quietly sitting in the background as observers, this group of junior high school students goes through a typical Sunday morning lesson session with David Weaver of St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, as their teacher.

Bibles in the center of the table will be opened in a moment by these fourth-graders from St. George's Church School. Their teacher is Miss Ostrid V. Donovan of St. Clement's, Mount Vernon. Weekdays she teaches at Grace Church School, Manhattan.

Am I teaching my Church School class as well as possible? How can I make the lessons more interesting? What do I do about the shy children who won't participate? Or the noisy ones who distract everyone else?

These are some of the questions nearly 100 Church School and released time teachers brought to five demonstration classes sponsored by the diocesan Department of Christian Education recently. The classes were held on a Saturday morning at St. George's Parish House, 207 E. 16th St. They were planned and directed by Miss Irene Henderson, Associate Director of the Department, with the assistance of Miss Marianna Hane, Field Worker from Windham House for the Department of Christian Education. The teachers, who included a gratifying number of men, came from 22 Bronx and Manhattan churches.

After registration and an orientation session conducted by the Rev. Miller Cragon, Director of Christian Education, each teacher joined a small group geared to the age level of the children he or she teaches. A teacher and a consultant had been assigned to each of these groups. They worked as a team before the actual class lesson in order to give the observing teachers the background they needed before the class began.

Then the teacher, with material adapted from the curriculum normally used on Sundays, went ahead with the actual lesson. The observers, sitting inconspicuously around the room, quietly made notes.

When the class had ended, 45 minutes were devoted to a thorough discussion of what had taken place. After lunch, the visiting teachers, with the consultants, discussed the principles of lesson planning and worked out a hypothetical lesson plan for a subsequent session based on the sessions they had just attended.

"I discovered that teaching four to six-year-olds, or rather, trying to make them understand a few Christian principles really can be more fun than I thought," commented one teacher as the sessions ended.

"I discovered that my teaching problems are not peculiar to me," said another. "Simple lessons require much thought and preparation in order to be effective, and even the most simple thought can become very complex when you analyse it in depth," remarked a third. A few teachers said they thought they were trying to cover too much in a short time.

Teachers for the demonstration classes were Alice Hill of St. George's, Kindergarten; Marilyn Weekley, All Saints, Manhattan, Grade 2; Ostrid V. Donovan, St. Clement's, Mount Vernon, Grade 4; Mrs. Edlin Williams, St. Andrew's, Bronx, Grade 6; and Alex Viola, St. Thomas, Manhattan, and David Weaver, St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, Junior High.

The consultants were, for the Kindergarten, Deborah L. Vaill, Editor of Preschool Materials, Department of Christian Education, Executive Council; Grade 2, Olive Chilton, Assistant, Christian Education, Trinity, Manhattan; Grade 4, Joan Warner, Director of Christian Education, St. Mary's, Manhattanville; Grade 6, the Rev. Wray MacKay, Vicar, St. Andrew's, Bronx; and Junior High, the Rev. Thomas D. Byrne, Assistant Minister, St. Thomas, Manhattan.

The churches represented were All Souls, Grace, Heavenly Rest, Holyrood, Intercession, Good Shepherd, Trinity, St. Andrew's, St. Augustine's Chapel and St. Christopher's Chapel, both Trinity Parish; St. Bartholomew's, St. George's, St. Mark's-in-the Bouwerie, St. Mary's, Manhattanville; St. Michael's, St. Philip's and St. Thomas, all Manhattan. Also, St. Ann's, St. David's, St. Luke's, St. Margaret's, and St. Paul's, all Bronx.

The Rev. Miller Cragon pointed out that this was the third year for these demonstration classes. "They are part of a long-term process of teacher training which the Department of Christian Education is carrying out in a number of ways," he said. Earlier this year, for instance, Fr. Cragon and Miss Henderson met on four successive Saturdays with clergy and Church School superintendents from all over the diocese to provide guidance on the operation of Church Schools. There was a series of training sessions in the Newburgh area. And three sessions—at St. Michael's, Manhattan, St. Mark's, Mount Kisco and at the Conference Center—were designed to help teachers use this year's Mission Study material. ■

the unorthodox Bishop

Long before the concepts of inner-city mission and ecumenism were familiar, the colorful and courageous Bishop Paddock made them goals of his own ministry. From his open war on prostitution and corruption in New York City (with Jacob Riis, Lincoln Steffens and others), he moved on to the sparsely settled frontier of Eastern Oregon. The story of Robert Lewis Paddock's crusade, often in conflict with the "Establishment," is told against the turbulent and challenging social background of the first part of the century.

Two-alarm Fire Ravages St. Stephen's

Parishioners of St. Stephen's, S.I., have already set in motion plans to rebuild their 78-year-old church which was destroyed in a two-alarm fire on Feb. 5.

Flames burst through the roof of the building, located on Amboy Rd. near Main St., Tottenville, shortly before 8:30 a.m. Hampered by 12-degree temperature, firemen from nine hose companies battled the stubborn blaze for nearly two hours.

Witnesses said the fire "just burst through" the structure, and within ten minutes the entire frame building was aflame. The fire was reported by Miss Kathleen Boyd, a Tottenville High School senior, who said, "You could see the flames inside the building and up towards the roof." An inspection by fire marshals later indicated that the fire was probably caused by defective electric wiring.

Although the rectory was damaged by smoke and some of the windows were broken by the heat, the Rev. Richard A. Strong, the rector, said that it is still habitable.

Soon after the fire was discovered, the rector and his wife were forced by the thick, choking smoke to flee the rectory, which is connected to the church by an enclosed breezeway.

Church vestments, religious articles and the cross on the altar all were destroyed. The building had recently been renovated, parishioners doing much of the work themselves.

Charred interior of St. Stephen's, Tottenville, S.I., is surveyed by the Rev. Richard A. Strong, the rector, as firemen work away at the smoking beams in the chancel of this 78-year-old frame building. Photograph courtesy of Staten Island Advance.

The smoking rafters had scarcely cooled when, on the evening of the fire, the vestry held an emergency meeting to decide what could be done. It voted to replace the structure as soon as possible, and named William L. Olsen, the senior warden, chairman of a committee to work on the plans. Serving with him are Frank Prusack, Jr., Carl Rossel and Wilmer P. Uhler.

The church had been covered by insurance. However, realizing that additional money will be needed, a fund-raising committee also was formed. Both the congregation and the community at large are being asked to help with the costly operation of building a new church. Mr. Olsen also is fund committee chairman, with George H. Brennan, and Mrs. Clark Mullin as cochairmen. There are 12 other members.

The fire at St. Stephen's had been the second to occur in Staten Island within nine days. On Jan. 28, flames had destroyed St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church in Travis.

St. Stephen's was organized in 1872. The cornerstone for the present building was laid in 1887, and since that time the congregation has acquired additional property, built a rectory, and spent considerable time and money maintaining and improving its plant. ■

Chaplains Need Names of Those In Armed Forces

Do you know the names and addresses of any Episcopalians on active duty in the armed forces overseas?

Episcopal chaplains, especially in Korea and Vietnam, are greatly in need of this information because there is no practical way for the government to keep the chaplains informed about the whereabouts of persons belonging to their denomination. Armed forces personnel are constantly on the move, and unless they are hospitalized or have a personal problem, the chaplain does not know where they are.

The names and current military or naval addresses should be sent to Canon Peter Chase, Diocesan Armed Forces Chairman, Cathedral Heights, New York, N.Y. 10025. He will send them to the appropriate chaplains. ■

Dr. Boone Porter to Lecture

In association with the New York Liturgical Conference, the Layman's School of Theology is sponsoring an address by the Rev. H. Boone Porter, Jr., Professor of Liturgics at General Theological Seminary.

Dr. Porter will speak at the Church of the Incarnation, 35th St. and Madison Ave., on Sunday, April 25, at 4:30 p.m. His topic will be "Liturgical Renewal in the Church Today."

The Layman's School was organized last year by a group of lay men and women. It held a seven-week series of study sessions in religion during February and March. Prompted by an encouraging display of interest in this type of program, the School offered another series this year. It is now being held every Tuesday, through March 16, at 8 p.m., at Calvary Church, 21st St. and Park Ave.

Another event in conjunction with the Liturgical Conference is a special performance of T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" on April 28 at 8:15 p.m. in St. Luke's Chapel, Grove and Hudson Sts. Students of St. Luke's School will take part. ■

N.Y. Liturgical Conference Offers Something for All

The word "liturgy" has a much broader meaning in the Church today than the average churchgoer imagines. Evidence of this will emerge at the New York Liturgical Conference to be held April 26, 27 and 28 at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The conference, national in scope, will be the fourth to be held in the Episcopal Church since 1958. Like recent liturgical conferences of other denominations, it will encourage the attendance of all Christians. Some 2,000 laity and clergy are expected to be present, including a substantial number from this diocese.

During these three days, "liturgy" will not only be used in the usual sense of "the form for a ritual or service." It will also carry a broader meaning of "public work." In particular, it will mean "the public work of all church people, all of the time, all of their lives." The conference will have a great deal to do with the relationship between the Church's work on Sunday and the individual's work on Monday through Saturday.

There are three sponsors: The Associated Parishes, Inc. (a group of clergy who some 10 years ago organized themselves to explore the interaction of "liturgy" and "life,") the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, and Trinity Parish, Manhattan.

The program for the three days will include services, addresses by prominent speakers, informal discussion sessions, and exhibits of contemporary art, music, architecture, crafts and literature.

Open to All

The sponsors are emphasizing that this conference is not just for clergy, but for everybody who is interested in the future of the Church. They have pointed out that the ideas "from all of the services, all of the sessions, and all of the exhibits are for all of the clergy and all of the people in all of the parishes."

Key Speakers

Among the key speakers will be Bishop Stockwood of Southwark, (London) England, whose dynamic approach in his diocese has done a great deal to break down false distinctions between the Sunday churchman and his daily work. Some of the questions he will attempt to answer are "Why do we go to church? What is the relationship between the Table in church and the table in the stockbroker's dining hall or the labor union canteen? Bishop Stockwood will speak three times. At the banquet on Monday, April 26, his topic will be "The Ministry of All the People to All the People." At the morning session on Tuesday, April 27, he will speak on "The Worker Priest, the Industrial Chaplain, and the House Church." On Wednesday, April 28, he will preach at the Cathedral on "All of the Time, All of Our Lives."

The Rt. Rev. Paul Moore, Suffragan Bishop of Washington, will speak on the Liturgy as the pattern and power for social action. His topic will be "The Holy Spirit and the Secular World." The Rt. Rev. Jonathan Sherman, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island, will consider the role of the Episcopacy in liturgical worship. His topic will be "The Responsibilities of Bishops in a Changing Society."

Representing the laity will be Dr. Margaret Mead, noted anthropologist and author, who is an Episcopalian; and John Mannion, Executive Secretary of the Roman Catholic Liturgical Conference. The Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral; the Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity; Bishop Frederick W. Putnam of Oklahoma and the Rev. Nickolas Kouletsis, President of The Associated Parishes, Inc. will speak during the opening session.

Discussion Groups

On April 28, during the afternoon, special interest groups in art, music, architecture and drama will be led, respectively by Mrs. Doris Bartels of the Contemporary Christian Art Center, Manhattan; the Rev. Stephen S. Garmey, Rector of St. Martha's, Bronx; Laurence King, the British architect responsible for the reconstruction of historic St. Mary-le-Bow; and the Rev. Sidney Lanier, Rector of St. Clement's, Manhattan.

Special Services

There will be several services during the conference. On Monday, Evening Prayer will be said in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf at 4 p.m. On Tuesday, at 7:15 a.m., there will be Morning Prayer followed by a celebration of the Holy Communion around a free-standing portable altar in the grand ballroom. Evensong will be sung at St. Bartholomew's on Tuesday at 8. On Wednesday, there will be a pre-Communion address by Canon West at the Cathedral at 9:30 a.m., followed by Morning Prayer and Holy Communion with Bishop Donegan as celebrant. Bishop Stockwood will preach.

Conference Cost

The registration fee for the conference is $35. It includes admission to all sessions, the opening banquet, a luncheon and a brunch. Those interested in registering should write to: The New York Liturgical Conference, 74 Trinity Place, New York, NY 10006.

Bishop Boynton and Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., president of the diocesan Episcopal Churchwomen, are cochairman of a committee obtaining funds to enable seminarians to attend. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

Our faith teaches us that we have free will, but we live in a state of life "under which it shall please God to call us," as the Catechism expresses it. If God is going to put us into a certain place whether we will or not, how can we be said to have free will?

If anyone believes in such a thing as vocation, then one believes that God calls people to states of life, to jobs in the world. This means that one man's vocation is the ministry, that another man's vocation is medicine, that one woman's vocation is teaching, that another's vocation is that of being a wife and mother. These are, quite literally, to be taken as vocations. These are the calls of God.

The real point is, do you respond to the call of God? God calls you to this state of life. Are you going to take it on, or are you not? It doesn't take much, but it takes all you've got. Your free will shows up in just this one single thing: will you, or will you not, respond to the call of God?

Men Hear Congressman Dow

More than 100 men and boys from Episcopal churches in Orange County attended the seventh annual Washington's Birthday Corporate Communion and breakfast at the Church of the Holy Innocents, Highland Falls, on Feb. 22.

Congressman John G. Dow, the only Episcopalian Democrat from the State of New York to serve in Congress, was the breakfast speaker. At the service, Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy was the celebrant, assisted by the Rev. Colley W. Bell, Rector of St. John's, Cornwall, and Dean of the Hudson Convocation; and Major Porter H. Brooks, Post Chaplain at West Point Military Academy. The Rev. Wendell B. Tamburro is Rector of Holy Innocents.

Attending were town and village officials, local Protestant and Roman Catholic clergy, convocation and diocesan clergy, members of the Episcopal Laymen of New York, some of whom served as ushers; doctors on the staff of Cornwall Hospital, and many civic leaders from the Town of Highlands. ■

Choir College Names Wyton To New Post

Alec Wyton, Organist and Master of Choristers at the Cathedral, has been appointed head of the organ department of Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N. J., where he has been teaching. He succeeds Dr. Alexander McCurdy who will retire in June after 25 years on the faculty.

Mr. Wyton will assume his new position in addition to his duties at the Cathedral. He will be responsible for a 12-member department, he will teach classes, and he will give private instruction.

A native of England, Mr. Wyton is well known as an organist, choirmaster and composer. He is a member of the Episcopal Church's Joint Commission on Church Music, and is national president of the American Guild of Organists. He holds a master's degree from Oxford University, England, and is a Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music, the Royal College of Organists and the Royal Canadian College of Organists. ■

Fr. Garfield Is Instituted At St. Mary

The Rev. Donald L. Garfield was instituted as the seventh rector of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, 139 W. 46th St., Manhattan, on Monday, Feb. 1 at 8 p.m. Bishop Boynton officiated at the institution and preached the sermon.

Fr. Garfield, who succeeds the late Rev. Grieg Taber, had been the rector of St. Peter's Church, Springfield, Mass., since 1960. A native of Boston, he was graduated from Harvard University and General Theological Seminary. He conducted his first service at St. Mary's following the institution ceremony. ■

Send in Certification Request

Women church workers in this diocese, who have not already done so, are asked to file their Request for Certification as soon as possible.

Canon 53, passed at the General Convention last fall, provides the opportunity for the following women to apply to their Bishop for certification: Those who are communicants of the Episcopal Church; who are salaried, professional Church workers employed in Christian Education (this has been interpreted to include teachers in parish day schools), college or social work; and who fulfill certain educational qualifications.

Bishop Donegan has requested that women in this diocese fill out their Requests for Certification and send them to Miss Irene Henderson, Diocesan Department of Christian Education, 1047 Amsterdam Ave., New York, N. Y. 10025. Copies of the certification form are available from Miss Henderson.

Parishes and People

● What about assertions like: "There is no God." "Jesus is irrelevant." "I can be just as good without going to church." "Death is the end, anyway"? One of the best-known missioners in the Anglican Communion, Bishop Ian W. A. Shevill of North Queensland, Australia, dealt with these and other thoughts during a week-long mission at Grace Church, Middletown. Total attendance for the entire mission was nearly 2,000, the Rev. Joseph P. Matthews, Rector of Grace Church, reports.

Each evening a tableau illustrating the particular ideas to be discussed during that session was performed by a group of parishioners. The services included hymns written by Geoffrey Beaumont, composer of the popular "Jazz Mass." A combination of drums, trombones, piano and organ provided the accompaniment. Bishop Shevill included his mission as part of a month-long visit to the United States. Other stops were made in Indiana, Illinois, Texas and California.

● A series of six Wednesday evening programs devoted to Christianity as it relates to various stages in life were held recently at Holyrood, Manhattan. Each session included a prepared talk by a person specializing in the theme for the evening. This was followed by a discussion session at which a three-member panel focused attention on particularly significant points.

Each topic began with "Christianity and . . ." They were "Christianity and the Young Man," ". . . the Young Lady," ". . . Marriage," ". . . the Single Man," ". . . the Single Woman," and ". . . the Aged." School officials, clergymen, a welfare official, representatives from the Executive Council, and other special consultants were among the 18 guests who either presented talks or were panel members.

● Mrs. Virginia G. Gray is the new Director of Christian Education at St. John's, Larchmont, the Rev. Kenneth E. Mackenzie, rector, has announced. Mrs. Gray, who comes from St. Clement's Church, Berkeley, Calif., is the successor to Miss Maryhelen Ellis who held the position for seven and a half years. Miss Ellis was married in February to the Rev. William J. Clague, Rector of All Saints, S.I. During her years in Larchmont, "she was largely responsible for the sustaining of St. John's Church School and made a most significant contribution to the general life of the parish during an important period," said Mr. Mackenzie.

● The new console for the organ at St. Mary's, Tuxedo Park, has been installed, and workmen are busily completing the thousands of electrical connections which must be made before the instrument will be ready for use. New chimes also are being installed. The rector, the Rev. Fenimore E. Cooper estimates that the work will be finished by about the first Sunday in April. ■

Thomas Rodd Is EMS Treasurer

Thomas Rodd, a senior vice president of Morgan Guaranty Trust Company and a member of St. Mark's, Mount Kisco, has been elected Treasurer of the Episcopal Mission Society. According to the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Society, Mr. Rodd will succeed William H. Deatly who has moved to Los Angeles, Calif.

Mr. Rodd is also Treasurer of the Episcopal Church Foundation. He is a graduate of St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and Yale University.

Mr. Deatly, who had served since 1954, was honored by Bishop Donegan, President of the Mission Society, at a meeting of the Board of Managers last fall. He was presented a hand-embossed scroll. ■

'Noye's Fludde' To Be Seen in May

St. George's Church, Manhattan, will present Noye's Fludde (Noah's Flood) again this year. This fanciful interpretation of the Old Testament story of the flood is based on one of the Chester series of medieval miracle plays and set to music by the contemporary English composer, Benjamin Britten. It was seen by capacity audiences last spring, and received such high critical acclaim that it was televised and shown by CBS-TV last Dec. 27.

Now there will be five more performances at the church: Thursday, May 13, at 8 p.m.; Friday, May 14, at 8; Saturday, May 15, at 5:30 and 8; and Sunday, May 16, at 5:30.

Marie Powers, who rose to fame in Menotti's opera, The Medium, again will portray Noye's wife, and Norman Riggins again will be Noye. Miss Powers is returning from France especially for the production. Children of the parish and neighborhood who took part in the 1964 presentation are being invited to return. The company of 200 will be conducted by Charles N. Henderson. Richard Flusser will be stage director.

There will be no admission charge for Noye's Fludde, but cards of admission must be obtained in advance by writing to St. George's Church, 207 East 16th St., New York 10003. ■ more than 1,000 books, by title and author, from a Peace Corps worker (the son of a priest) on behalf of the school in which he is teaching. CPC collected the books, used ones but in excellent condition, in a small, northern Westchester town. Both the public library and a local newspaper aided in the search for these books, and they were transported by private station wagon to Washington. There, the Smithsonian Institution packed and shipped them to Nigeria at no cost. So now a school halfway around the world that had no library has a large and well-rounded one.

Books . . .

These, then, are some of the things CPC has done during the past year. When your church, together with all the others in the diocese, observes Church Periodical Sunday on May 2, we hope the CPC prayer which begins "Bless O Lord, we pray thee, the Church Periodical Club, that it may be an instrument of service in thy hands. . ."—will mean just a little more to you than it did before.

BIBLES NEEDED

Have you any Bibles, King James Version, which are gathering dust on your bookshelf? Episcopal chaplains at Bellevue Hospital have asked the Church Periodical Club to help them collect quite a number because the chaplains give the Bibles to patients to own. The Bibles should be addressed to Mrs. Edward Morrison, CPC Secretary, Church of the Heavenly Rest, and either mailed or delivered to the parish house, 2 East 90th St., New York, N.Y.

Church Music — Hootenanny Style

Students of General Theological Seminary are shown here providing special music for a service held at St. Clement's, Manhattan. Dr. H. Boone Porter, Jr., Professor of Liturgics at GTS, celebrated the Eucharist and explained the liturgical variations being used. The music, written by seminarians, is in the style of the Hootenanny and is performed with a harpsichord, banjo and guitar. It has been recorded in an album called "Rejoice", one of which was presented to President Johnson recently.

Day School Purchases New Building

Church of the Heavenly Rest Day School has announced plans to expand both its physical plant and the number of grades which it teaches.

The school has purchased a five-story brick building formerly owned by the Trent School at 1 East 92nd St. It will move its upper classes into these premises at the beginning of the fall term, according to Mrs. R. Brodie Taylor, the principal.

The Day School, chartered in 1930, accepts children from age three through the fourth grade. Eventually the plan is to offer instruction through the sixth grade, Mrs. Taylor said. She added that the new facilities will increase the enrollment capacity by 100.

At present, there are 200 children and 30 teachers using the classrooms at 2 East 90th St., adjacent to the church. In the fall, the pre-school children, first and second graders will remain in this building, while the third and fourth graders will move to the new facilities. This structure is in excellent condition, Mrs. Taylor said, inasmuch as the Trent School completely renovated it for school purposes about five years ago. Registrations for the fall term are being completed now. ■

May Fellowship Day Observances Set for May 7

May Fellowship Day, Friday, May 7, will offer an opportunity for Episcopal Churchwomen to join with women of other denominations in considering the theme, "People, Poverty, Plenty."

This observance is sponsored annually by the United Church Women, a division of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. Interdenominational programs will be held in many communities throughout the diocese.

The United Church Women is asking concerted action "in support of public and private measures, on local, state and national levels, directed toward the elimination of poverty from this otherwise affluent society."

Miss Eleanor French, Director of Christian Social Relations for the United Church Women, said: "We have learned from last year's topic, 'Assignment: Race', that discrimination is a major cause of the persistence of poverty in its most severe form. We know through experience the kinship between the two evils of prejudice and economic injustice. In continuing our emphasis on ending all forms of discrimination . . . we shall also participate in the assault on poverty." ■

Rev. Walter Dennis Named Canon at Cathedral Church

Bishop Donegan has announced the appointment of the Rev. Walter Decoster Dennis, Jr. as a Canon Residentiary of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine.

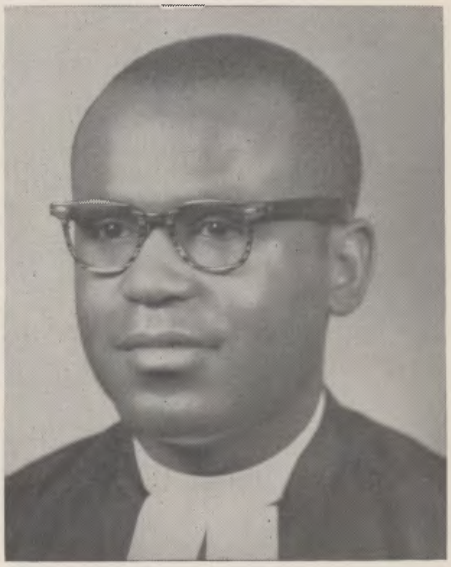
He will fill a vacancy on the Chapter caused by the resignation of Canon Howard A. Johnson earlier this year.

Canon Dennis was appointed by the Trustees of the Cathedral upon the nomination of the Bishop. The action makes him a member of the Chapter, the body which, with the Dean, is responsible for the program of the Cathedral.

Canon Dennis was ordained Deacon in June, 1956, and Priest in June, 1958. He was Assistant Minister at the Cathedral from 1956 to 1960, at which time he went to his present post as Vicar of St. Cyprian's Church, Hampton, Va.

Born in Washington, D.C., 32 years ago, Canon Dennis received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Virginia State College in 1952. He earned a Master of Arts degree at New York University in 1953 and a degree of Bachelor of Sacred Theology at General Theological Seminary in 1956.

He is a member of the College Work Commission and of the Board of Directors of the Episcopal Society for Cultural and Racial Unity. Since 1961 he has been a lecturer at Hampton Institute, Va., on American and Constitutional History. At St. Cyprian's, he has been responsible for the establishment of the first interracial team ministry south of Washington, D. C.



Canon Dennis

Canon Dennis will assume his responsibilities at the Cathedral this summer. ■

CSR Workshop to Be Held

A Christian Social Relations workshop for clergy and Episcopal Churchwomen in Westchester will be held at St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, on Wednesday, April 28. The program, offering talks and discussion sessions on two entirely different topics, will last from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The morning session will deal with "A Woman's Fulfillment." The speaker will be the Rev. Clinton Kew, Director of Special Services at the American Foundation of Religion and Psychiatry, and the founder and president of the Foundation for Better Living, a non-profit mental health and educational service.

Devotions will be held at noon, followed by luncheon. At 1:30 a discussion session will be held on the afternoon topic which is "Teenage Narcotic Addiction." At 2, Dr. James F. X. O'Rourke, an ophthalmologist who is also a Yonkers city councilman, will speak on the subject. He will suggest possible solutions and highlight the place of the public schools and the churches in the problem.

The Rev. Gordon Drescher, Rector of Good Shepherd, Granite Springs, and Dean of the Westchester Convocation, will welcome those attending the program. It is being sponsored by the Dean and Executive Committee of the Convocation and the ECW, and is being planned especially for clergy, ECW officers and CSR chairmen although all interested persons may attend. $1.25 includes luncheon.

The Bishop's Easter Message

The Lord is Risen! This was the announcement which changed frightened, dejected men into fearless followers of their Lord. It was the resurrection of Jesus which banished the hesitancies and reservations of the apostles and brought them to complete commitment to their Master and to absolute trust in God.

Terrible doubt possessed them after the stark tragedy of the Passion and Good Friday, but from the moment they realized that the Father had raised their Master from the dead their loyalty never faltered. The One they greatly loved was alive and present with them in power. They could never lose heart again or doubt the promises of God. Henceforth, they knew but one thing: Christ was risen from the dead. Without any reservation they were now committed to the cause of Christ and gave themselves wholly to the propagation of the gospel.

The dynamic of Christianity is the good news of a Lord, risen! If our loyalty to Christ and our trust in the promises of God are wavering, it is because we are not gripped by the resurrection. Only when we can say, without any hesitation or reservation, "Christ is Risen!" "God hath raised Him from the dead!" does our Christian discipleship cease to be lukewarm and become a transforming, empowering experience.

The victory of Christ on Easter Day fully converted the apostles. God grant that our heart will respond to the message of Easter, that the Feast of Feasts will be for us a time of rededication to our Risen Lord and Redeemer.

With my affectionate wishes to all the people of our Diocese for a glorious and joyous Easter, I am

Faithfully your Bishop,

Horace W.B. Donegan

New Appointment

The Rev. W. Ernest Jackson of Toronto, Canada, has been appointed Deputy Executive officer of the Anglican Communion. The announcement was made by the Rt. Rev. Ralph S. Dean, Anglican Executive Officer. Dr. ackson had a major role in planning the 1963 Anglican Congress.

In his new assignment, Dr. Jackson will share Bishop Dean's responsibilities: the coordination and extension of missionary strategy and development of a liaison between the 18 independent churches of the Anglican Communion. ■

Judge Marshall to Speak At ELNY Meeting June 12

Judge Thurgood Marshall, the man who successfully argued the school desegregation case before the Supreme Court while he was counsel for the NAACP, will be the keynote speaker at this year's Diocesan Conference of the Episcopal Laymen of New York (ELNY).

The event will be held on June 12 at St. Peter's School, Peekskill, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. All clergymen and laity in the diocese are invited. Reservations, at $3 (including lunch) can be made by writing to Episcopal Laymen of New York, c/o the Suffragan Bishops' Office, Cathedral Heights, New York, N.Y. 10025. John Murphy, chairman of the Diocesan Board of ELNY, will preside.

Judge Marshall served the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its allied organization, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, for a total of 25 years. He became an assistant special counsel for the NAACP in 1936, was named a special counsel two years later, and in 1940 became counsel also for the Defense Fund. President Kennedy appointed him as a Federal Judge, Court of Appeals, Second Judicial District, in 1961. Judge Marshall is a communicant of St. Philip's, Manhattan. He has been a delegate to diocesan convention for a number of years, and was a delegate to the General Convention last fall.

At a recent meeting of the Executive Board, the Episcopal Laymen of New York unanimously passed a resolution urging the enactment of civil rights legislation. Noting "the flagrant abuses to the moral and constitutional rights of citizens and the continuing threat to personal safety in Selma, Ala., and various other parts of this nation," ELNY declared itself "in support of the Bishops and other clergy. . ." in calling upon the President and Congress to enact legislation "that effectively implements each citizen's constitutional right to vote, and that strengthens the legal right of citizens to express their views, individually and collectively, in a peaceful and orderly manner."

Copies of the resolution were sent to the President, the Attorney General and Senators Javits and Kennedy. The Executive Board also asks all ELNY members to write their congressmen. ■

CONVENTION SCHEDULED FOR MAY 11

Delegates representing 206 parishes and missions and approximately 90,000 communicants will convene in Synod Hall on May 11 when the diocesan Convention holds its 185th annual all-day session. The Convention is the legislative body of the diocese.

Following Holy Communion in the Cathedral at 8:15 and breakfast in the undercroft of Synod House, the major event of the morning will be the Bishop's Address on the State of the Church in the Diocese. As is customary, the Bishop will also give a summary of his official acts during the year.

The business session will include consideration of further revisions in Section 1, Canon X, which was altered last year to speed up balloting. An amendment to the Rules of Order, giving women greater opportunity for service on committees and commissions, passed last year but requiring two consecutive approvals, is expected to be voted.

The Convention is composed of three lay delegates from each parish and one from each mission. All clergy canonically resident for six months are eligible to vote.

New developments in MRI will be discussed and two important committees appointed by the Bishop at last year's Convention will make their reports. The Rev. William Reisman, Rector of St. Philip's, Garrison, is chairman of the Commission on Funeral Practices. It is expected to make specific recommendations for action and education to combat un-Christian practices surrounding the burial of the dead, and to report on the feasibility of funeral societies that might be sponsored by a parish or group of parishes.

The other ad hoc committee reporting will be one which has studied ways in which the diocese may cooperate more effectively with the Legislative Commission of the New York State Council of Churches, at the same time preserving its own identity of opinion. Chairman of this group is the Rev. Benjamin Minifie, Rector of Grace Church, Manhattan.

Several amendments to the Constitution proposed at General Convention (1964) and scheduled for final action in 1967 must be presented to the diocesan Convention. These include the addition of a Preamble stating that The Protestant Episcopal Church may also be designated as The Episcopal Church.

Other additions provide for a special election within three months in the event of the death, disablement or resignation of a Presiding Bishop, the ceding of territory from one diocese to another by mutual agreement, and the election of a Bishop Coadjutor as Bishop, Coadjutor, or Suffragan in another diocese provided he has served five years as Coadjutor in his present diocese. ■

GFS Girls Make Unusual Gifts for Council in Tokyo

When delegates of the GFS Society for Girls assemble in Tokyo, Japan, for the the Sixth World Council later this month, many of them will be using something unique made by GFS branches in the Diocese of New York.

Two hundred paper tote-bags with decorative fabric handles were made and sent to Tokyo by 12 of these branches. The bags carry the GFS insignia on the front, together with the message, "Greetings from the Diocese of New York." The insignias were made by Miss Osce McCreery of Manhattan.

The tote-bags are among gifts of all kinds being sent to the World Council by GFS members throughout the country. Delegates from all over the world, including three from the United States, will attend the Council. ■

Two Summer Camps

As summer camping grows in popularity from year to year, facilities in this diocese for both young and old continue to expand. Although a number of churches sponsor camps, the two largest and most all-inclusive programs are operated by a church agency—the Episcopal Mission Society, and by a group of churches—Incarnation Camp.

This year, both are on the verge of expansion—the EMS Creche Camp by actual construction, and Incarnation's Lodge for Older Adults by the addition of a new sponsor and a more ecumenical outlook.

New Sponsor at Adult Camp

The Presbyterian Church has joined in the sponsorship of the camp program for older adults operated by Incarnation Camp. This program, the Vacation Lodge for Older Adults, is the first Episcopal Church-sponsored program of its kind in the country, and is serving as a pilot project for other dioceses. It begins its fourth season in June.

Announcement of affiliation with the Presbyterian Church was made by Andrew Katsanis, Director of Incarnation Camp, who said the cooperative venture "is another expression of the growing ecumenical spirit in Protestantism today." The Presbyterian Church's association will be through the Presbyterian Senior Services of the Presbytery of New York.

The Senior Services is involved in many aspects of group work including educational studies, travelling lectures, arts and crafts, community service programs and recreation. It attempts to help ministers meet the ever increasing needs of the over-60 age group, and it also does casework counseling. Presbyterians throughout New York City will be invited to take advantage of Incarnation Camp's vacation opportunity for people over sixty.

"The decision to affiliate was made with the conviction that it would be far better for the two church denominations to work together in this new interest of the Church's work, rather than to have two separate programs at this time," Mr. Katsanis said. He added, "This cooperative venture could lead to other areas of cooperation in this work with other people."

The Vacation Lodge for Older Adults is one of three camping units sponsored by nine Episcopal churches, the GFS Society for Girls and the Diocese of New York at Ivoryton, Conn., some 100 miles from New York. The Lodge is situated on a 600-acre tract which includes a private lake. ■

Offering Given To St. Stephen's

An offering of $318 received at the 25th annual George Washington's Birthday Corporate Communion and breakfast held at St. Simon's Church, S. I., has been given to St. Stephen's Church, Tottenville, to help rebuild its charred structure. St. Stephen's was virtually destroyed by fire early in February.

Men and boys from 10 Staten Island churches attended the breakfast. All those who attended received a King James version of the Bible. The event was sponsored by St. Simon's Church, but held at St. John's because of its larger capacity. Bishop Boynton was the speaker. ■

Creche Moves to Elko Lake

The Episcopal Mission Society is consolidating its summer camping program in what is described as one of the most important moves in this agency's 134-year history.

A brand new Edgewater Creche Camp is being constructed on the 900-acre Elko Lake Camp tract at Parksville, Sullivan County, N.Y. Previously Edgewater Creche Camp-Rethmore Home for boys and girls six to eight years old was located in Englewood, N.J. But, according to the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Director of the Society, creeping urbanization and the deterioration of the old buildings made it seem wise to move. The boards of directors of the Mission Society and the Edgewater Creche-Rethmore Home voted to sell the Englewood property and build a new camp at Elko Lake.

Now there will be three camps on this tract: the new one; Elko Lake Camp, for boys and girls from 9 to 14; and Elko Pioneer Camp, for boys and girls, 14 and 15 years old. All are open to children in the Diocese of New York without regard to race, creed or financial status. For those whose parents are unable to pay tuition, full or partial scholarships are available from the Society.

Construction of the new camp, which began last fall, is scheduled to be finished by early summer in time for the initial 84 children to enjoy the first of four two-week camping periods. The facilities will consist of six cabins for campers, two unit houses for staff and a modern infirmary. A remodeled barn will house the chapel, kitchen, dining hall, laundry, recreation hall, arts and crafts room, staff lounge and a nature room. Creche campers will use the existing outdoor recreational facilities of the Elko Lake Camps, including the 54-acre lake.

Eventual plans call for ultimate expansion to house 174 children in each camping period. Also, winterized facilities are contemplated to provide for a longer over-all camping program and for accomodations for camp seminars during the winter.

July 20 has been set up as the dedication date for the new camp, and all persons in the diocese are invited to attend. ■

Bishop on TV

Bishop Donegan will make his first appearance on television on Sunday, April 11 at 9:30 a.m. He will be featured in an interview by Prof. Ormond Drake, Director of Town Hall. The program is entitled "The Way to Go" and will be seen on CBS Channel 2. ■

NEW AMERICAN TEMPERANCE PLAN

even for life to Non-drinkers and Non-Smokers!

At last—a new kind of hospitalization plan for you thousands who realize drinking and smoking are harmful. Rates are fantastically low because "poor risk" drinkers and smokers are excluded. Since your health is superior there is no age limit, no physical examination, no waiting period. Only you can cancel your policy. No salesman will ever call. Starting the first day you enter any hospital, you will be paid $14.28 a day.

You do not smoke or drink—so why pay premiums for those who do?

Every day in your newspaper you see more evidence that drinking and smoking shorten life. They're now one of America's leading health problems—a prime cause of the high premium rates most hospitalization policies charge.

Our rates are based on your superior health,

as a non-drinker and non-smoker. The new American Temperance Hospitalization Plan can offer you unbelievably low rates because we do not accept drinkers and smokers, who cause high rates. Also, your premiums can never be raised because you grow older or have too many claims. Only a general rate adjustment up or down could affect your low rates. And only you can cancel your policy. We cannot.

READ YOUR AMERICAN TEMPERANCE PLAN BENEFITS

1. You receive $100 cash weekly—TAX FREE—even for life,

from the first day you enter a hospital. Good in any hospital in the world. We pay in addition to any other insurance you carry. We send you our payments Air Mail Special Delivery so you have cash on hand fast. No limit on number of times you collect.

2. We cover all accidents and sicknesses,

except pregnancy, any act of war or military service, pre-existing accidents or sickness, hospitalization caused by use of liquor or narcotics. On everything else you're fully protected—at amazingly low rates!

3. Other benefits for loss within 90 days of accident

(as described in policy). We pay $2000 cash for accidental death. Or $2000 cash for loss of one hand, one foot, or sight of one eye. Or $6000 cash for loss of both eyes, both hands, or both feet.

We invite close comparison with any other plan.

Actually, no other is like ours. But compare rates. See what you save.

IMPORTANT: Check table below and include your first premium with application.

LOOK AT THESE AMERICAN TEMPERANCE LOW RATES

| | Pay Monthly | Pay Yearly |
|---|---|---|
| Each child 18 and under pays | $2.80 | $28 |
| Each adult 19-64 pays | $3.80 | $38 |
| Each adult 65-100 pays | $5.90 | $59 |

SAVE TWO MONTHS PREMIUM BY PAYING YEARLY!

DO THIS TODAY!

Fill out application below and mail right away. Upon approval, your policy will be promptly mailed. Coverage begins at noon on effective date of your policy. Don't delay. Every day almost 50,000 people enter hospitals. So get your protection now.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Read over your policy carefully. Ask your minister, lawyer and doctor to examine it. Be sure it provides exactly what we say it does. Then, if for any reason at all you are not 100% satisfied, just mail your policy back to us within 30 days and we will immediately refund your entire premium. No questions asked. You can gain thousands of dollars...you risk nothing.

All Saints, S.I., Looks to the Future

After seven lean years, the people of All Saints, Staten Island, hope that, like the ancient tribes of Israel, they may now look forward to at least seven good years.

Since 1958, this congregation has been without a permanent place to worship and has relied on luck and friends to provide temporary churches. On Feb. 21, when the first service was held in a brand new church building on Victory Boulevard, the general mood was definitely one of rejoicing. The Rev. William J. Clague, priest-in-charge, preached the sermon. Attending were staff members from the diocesan Department of Missions, which had assisted with the project.

All Saints was 75 years old last year. For nearly two-thirds of its existence, it was housed in the old floating Church of Our Saviour, which had been the Seaman's Church in New York Harbor for 60 years. First this building was moored at Mariners Harbor, on the northwest shore of Staten Island, and then it was brought aground and placed on a permanent foundation. The day before Christmas, 1958, this building was destroyed by fire.

After a study to determine the most strategic location for a new All Saints, the diocesan Department of Missions purchased the Victory Boulevard property, some three miles inland and southeast of Mariners Harbor. Construction of the new church started a year ago. It cost approximately $120,000.

The church is contemporary in design, although it has the traditional peaked roof and gothic influence. The interior, which is quite simple, gives the feeling of light and brightness. A feature which attracted considerable attention at the first service is the use of bits of colored glass embedded both in the cross which stands upon the free-standing altar and in the white cylinders which form the lighting fixtures. These cylinders are hung at varying levels and when lit, the bits of glass blaze like jewels.

The structure is not yet complete in every detail, and work such as landscaping and certain interior finishing remains to be done. But for general purposes, the congregation of All Saints now has a permanent home.

Bishop Donegan will dedicate the building at a service on May 9 at 4 p.m. ■

MOVING?

It is not necessary to notify us if you plan to move, but PLEASE BE SURE TO NOTIFY YOUR PARISH. Your parish will make the correction and then send the new address to us. This helps assure agreement between the parish lists and ours. If you change parishes, see your new or old rector about a Letter of Transfer.

(The above applies only to persons who receive The Bulletin because they contribute to a parish in the Diocese of New York. Paid subscribers should send changes directly to us.)

St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's to Start Building

Construction is expected to begin May 1 on the new St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School. The building will be a seven-story contemporary structure located between Broadway and Riverside Drive on a plot running from 114th to 115th Street. Moore and Hutchins of New York City are the architects.

The school was founded in 1950 by the Sisters of the Community of the Holy Spirit for boys and girls from nursery-school age through twelfth grade. This year's enrollment is 500.

At present, the lower-school classrooms are in three brownstone houses at 619-623 West 113th Street, and the upper school is in a converted residence at Riverside Drive and 107th Street. According to Mother Ruth, Principal and Mother Superior, the Riverside Drive building probably will be sold, and the houses on 113th Street will be made suitable for the City Convent of the teaching Sisters on the faculty.

When the new structure opens in Sept., 1966, the enrollment will be 725. In addition to the classrooms, there will be a chapel, auditorium, gymnasium, library, cafeteria and large areas for art and music. The entire building will be air conditioned.

The project, which is expected to cost a little over $4 million, is being financed through a fund drive as well as with the assistance of Columbia University, the Chase Manhattan Bank and Remedco Corporation. Bishop Donegan is Chairman of the Board of Trustees of St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School. ■

CSR Takes 9-Point Action

New York State legislative concerns were the major items of business at the February meeting of the diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations. By unanimous vote in each instance, the Department:

- Gave top priority to the campaign for abolition of the death penalty. (Bishop Donegan has also reiterated the diocese's firm opposition to capital punishment by writing recently to Gov. Rockefeller and to each legislator from the area.)
- Opposed proposals to legalize off-track, pari-mutuel betting on the grounds that the proposals "would create more problems than they purport to resolve."
- Opposed various proposals that would restrict the authority of school districts to assign pupils to schools other than the nearest one.
- Supported the removal of restrictions on the sale of contraceptive devices by repeal of Section 1142 of the Penal Code.
- Supported establishment of a governmental commission to study the New York State divorce laws.
- Supported a proposal that courts be authorized to grant selected, short-term prisoners the privilege of leaving jail during the day for work, study or medical treatment.
- Supported, in principle, a limited liberalization of the state's law governing abortion. No specific bill was discussed or endorsed.
- Reaffirmed support of a stronger Code of Ethics for state legislators.
- Supported, in principle, a proposal that convictions for participation in non-violent demonstrations not be used to deny New York State residents certain posts and privileges, (that is, admission to the Bar, various licenses, etc.) ■

Cathedral Board Names Dr. Kirk

Dr. Grayson Kirk, President of Columbia University, has been elected to the Board of Trustees of the Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine.

Dr. Kirk was nominated by Bishop Donegan, President of the Cathedral Board of Trustees. The proposal was seconded by the Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral.

The Cathedral Board is composed of the Bishop and Dean serving by virtue of their office, eight clergymen and fourteen laymen from the Diocese of New York.

The Board action was in part a recognition of the close relationship between Columbia University and the Cathedral and of their joint concerns in many related fields. ■

CSR Commissions Prepare To Report at Convention

Three commissions formed within the Department of Christian Social Relations as the result of action at the 1964 diocesan convention are preparing reports for the 1965 convention on May 11.

The commissions, their membership, and their responsibilities are as follows:

Commission on Funeral Practices

Composed of the Rev. William Reisman, St. Philip's, Garrison, chairman; the Rev. Messrs. David Edman, Christ the King, Stone Ridge; George M. Davis, Trinity, New Rochelle; and James Gusweller, St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan. Also, Ralph M. Morehead, St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, and Arthur Scharfenberg, Epiphany, Manhattan, both funeral directors; Miss Marie E. Eichelberger, St. Peter's, Manhattan, a social worker; and Joseph Dunham, Intercession, Manhattan, a businessman.

This group has been working on specific recommendations for action and education to combat un-Christian practices surrounding the burial of the dead, and it has been exploring the desirability and feasibility of funeral societies that might be sponsored by a parish, a group of parishes or the diocese itself. It has also been considering the plight of the indigent who face burial without adequate resources.

Commission on Narcotics Addiction

Composed of the Rev. Robert T. Jenks, St. Peter's, Manhattan, chairman; the Rev. Messrs. David Wayne, St. Edmunds, Bronx; Stephen J. Chinlund, East Harlem Protestant Parish; Dudley deC. Cobham, St. Clement's, Mount Vernon; and A. Eric Snyder, Episcopal Mission Society. Also, Dr. John Goss, Trinity, Manhattan, a psychiatrist; Frank Patton, Jr., St. Mary's, Manhattanville, attorney; Miss Eleanor Mills, Epiphany, Manhattan, public health nurse; Walter Bacon, St. Bartholomew's, Manhattan, business executive: and Robert Potter, Holy Trinity, Manhattan, attorney. Robert M. Webb, Director of the Division on Group Work and Youth Services, Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies, is a consultant.

The commission will deliver at least an interim report at the convention. Functions of the commission include gathering information on narcotics addiction from a variety of

Timely Series in Larchmont

"The Church Where I Am" is the title of a series of four monthly programs being sponsored by St. John's, Larchmont, for members of the parish and community. The series has been planned by the church's Christian Education Committee. According to the Rev. Kenneth E. Mackenzie, rector, the purpose is to provide opportunities for informal but authoritatively structured discussions "about important areas of life and the issues of our time as they relate to churchmen in Larchmont."

Two of the sessions have taken place. Two others will be held in April and May. These are:

April 20, at 8:15 p.m., "Your Church and the World Today," with William Stringfellow as the speaker. Mr. Stringfellow, a prominent Episcopal layman, is the author of several books dealing with the layman and his faith. He is an attorney with offices in Manhattan and he has been active in the World Council of Churches.

May 20, at 8:15 p.m., "Your Church and Public Affairs," with Dr. Anna Arnold Hedgeman, as the speaker. Dr. Hedgeman is Coordinator of Special Events for the Commission on Religion and Race, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A. Dr. Hedgeman is a Negro administrator who has worked for more than 40 years to obtain political and job equality for members of her race.

In February, Dr. Gerald J. Taylor, psychiatrist, who is the psychiatric consultant to Trinity Parish and to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, discussed "Are Parents Really Guilty?" In March, Dr. Lee H. Bristol, Jr., President of Westminister Choir College, Princeton, N. J., spoke on "Your Faith and Your Job." ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West
Canon Sacrist of the Cathedral Church

I've heard Holy Communion also called the Holy Eucharist, the Mass, the Blessed Sacrament, the Lord's Supper and the Holy Mysteries. Which title is really correct?

Not to sound absurdly broad-minded in the whole matter, and without the intention of being silly, all these titles are correct. The 1549 title was "The Supper of the Lord and the Holy Communion, commonly called the Mass." In 1552, it was changed to "The Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper or Holy Communion." The Articles of Instruction refer to it as the Blessed Sacrament. The First Exhortation refers to it as the Holy Mysteries, and the Office of Institution refers to it as the Holy Eucharist.

Each of these titles represents some rather specific historic or devotional aspect of a service which, in its fullness is rather more than any one title can encompass. In some ways, as the Prayer Book Commission suggests, the Holy Mysteries, which is not as yet used apart from the Long Exhortation, is the most encompassing word.

We don't go to this service just to make our communions. We go to be involved in the life of the Church. We go to give our thanks. We go to offer ourselves. And it is in response to all these preceding things that we come into communion with God and with each other. The term, the Lord's Supper, is historic in its emphasis; it is not just the meal of a mystery religion. It is a meal which had its inception at a specific time and specific place and is a continuation of the Resurrection experience of the Church.

Spring Convocation Meetings Set

The theme for the Spring Convocation meetings this year is Mutual Responsibility, Bishop Donegan has announced. Except for Manhattan, all meetings will be held on Tuesday, May 4.

Manhattan held its meeting on Sunday, April 4, at St. Thomas Church. The Presiding Bishop, the Rt. Rev. John E. Hines, was the speaker.

Other convocations which have announced their place of meeting so far are: Dutchess, at Zion, Wappingers Falls, Evensong, 6 p.m., dinner, 6:30 and program on MRI, 7:30. Ramapo, at St. Paul's, Spring Valley, 7:30 p.m. Richmond at St. Alban's Church, 8:15 p.m. ■

It also has been asked to develop recommendations for church rehabilitation programs that might be launched in the future.

Commission on Legislative Activity

Composed of the Rev. Benjamin Minifie, Grace, Manhattan, chairman; the Rev. Messrs. J. Norman Hall, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains; Benson B. Fisher, St. Stephen's, Pearl River; and Charles H. Graf, St. John's, Manhattan. Also Godfrey R. de Castro, Crucifixion; Arthur A. Atha, St. Mark's; Andrew Oliver, Trinity; and Jerome L. Wilson, Epiphany, all Manhattan.

The commission was set up to study present and possible relationships of the diocese to the work of the Legislative Commission of the New York State Council of Churches. It will report to convention its recommendations of ways in which diocesan participation in the Legislative Commission may be made most effective, ways in which the identity of opinion of this diocese may be preserved where there is disagreement with Commission recommendations, and ways in which diocesan opinion on specific legislative issues may best be formulated and registered between conventions. As part of the CSR Commission's program, John Lassoe, diocesan director, has gone to Albany each Tuesday during the legislative session to sit with the State Council's Legislative Commission and review pending legislation. ■

Woman's Council Plans Benefits

The Woman's Council of the Episcopal Mission Society has scheduled five spring benefits to aid the Society's Elko Lake Camps, and is planning two others in late June. The five scheduled events and those in charge of tickets are as follows:

Westchester: Fifth annual Crystal Ball, at "Brookside," home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Glenn Mook, Friday, April 30. $25 a couple or $15 single tickets; clergy, $20 a couple, $10 single. Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherfurd, 32 Buttonhook Rd., Chappaqua.

Manhattan: As the fourth annual spring benefit, a performance of the Cinerama film, "The Greatest Story Ever Told," Wednesday, May 5. $10 for loge seats, $7.50, orchestra. Mrs. Donald K. Stevenson, 16 Park Ave., or Mrs. Rudolf F. Mattesich, 310 East 70th St.

Bronx: Fifth annual dinner-dance, Friday, May 7, Mayer's Parkway Restaurant. $5.50. Mrs. Andrew Bernero, 2950 Bainbridge Ave.

Richmond: Third annual luncheon and bridge, simultaneously at St. Alban's Church and Christ Church, Wednesday, May 26. $1.50. Mrs. George C. Hartmann, 20 Fairway Ave., S.I., or Mrs. Russell Macdonald, 215 Tompkins Ave., S.I.

Ramapo: Spring dinner-dance at The Tuxedo Club, Tuxedo, Friday, June 4. Price to be announced. Mrs. Donald G. Geddes, III, "Sharing Knowe," Goshen, or Mrs. George R. Regas, 130 First Ave., Nyack.

Each of the above is being arranged by a convocation committee. The Dutchess and Hudson Committees each will sponsor a theater benefit. The Dutchess event will be held in late June at the Hyde Park Playhouse, and the Hudson performance will be presented in July at the Woodstock Playhouse, Woodstock. Mrs. E. Matthew Netter is chairman for Dutchess, and Mrs. H. Edgar Timmerman, Hudson. ■

New Rochelle Series Honors Philip Styles

This year's noonday Lenten services at Trinity, New Rochelle, are being held in memory of the Rev. Philip M. Styles, Rector of Trinity for 25 years before his unexpected death last Dec. 6. Mr. Styles started these 20-minute lunch-hour services 15 years ago, chiefly for office workers, merchants and others in the business district near Trinity. The series, which includes the particpation of 32 ministers of various denominations, is believed to be the only one of its kind outside of Manhattan. ■

Clergy in Selma

For the opening of the great march from Selma to Montgomery, Ala., the best summary of participation by Episcopalians across the country, including the Presiding Bishop, was in the March 29 issue of Newsweek, which mentions Episcopalians 13 times in a three page article.

At the request of Bishop Donegan, the Very Rev. John V. Butler, Dean of the Cathedral, flew to Selma for the opening of the march on March 21. Dean Butler then returned to assist the Protestant Council in arrangements for Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish clergy and lay people who wished to fly to Montgomery for the end of the march.

Two planes were chartered by the Protestant Council for dawn flights on March 25. Among the volunteers on those planes were 18 students from General Theological Seminary who rose a bit early for a special 4 a.m. Eucharist. Forty-seven other seminarians also were there, although they could just as well have waited for the regular 7 o'clock Communion.

Other Episcopalians on the two planes ranged from a vice president of B.B.D. & O. to housewives and from canons to curates. The Executive Council, Bishop Donegan and various parishes made funds available to those who could not pay the $90 round-trip fare themselves. ■

■ ST. MARY'S Church, Ardmore, Pa., plans to build a 10-story, 200-unit apartment for senior citizens. It will cost $2.5 million, financed by a 50-year government mortgage. The parish reports that 170 widows are already listed as prospective occupants.

■ A ROUND-THE-CLOCK church center, designed to minister to luxury apartment dwellers, harried office workers, tourists and even to urban derelicts, will play a prominent role in the riverfront redevelopment of St. Louis, Mo. The center, sponsored by five Protestant denominations and the Episcopal Diocese of Missouri, is part of a huge apartment, shopping and hotel complex designed for completion in 1966.

■ "HIRE TEENAGERS? Of course you can!" says the New York State Council of Churches, recommending a folder prepared by the New York State Department of Labor in Albany. A number of individual churches of various denominations are conducting "jobs for teens" programs, according to the State Council. Initial reports show improvement in schoolwork and a decline in discipline problems, the Council adds. The title of the Labor Department folder is "Hire Teenagers?"

■ CHURCH WORLD SERVICE, the interdenominational agency charged with distributing U.S. government surplus foods to needy countries overseas, recently marked its tenth anniversary. In the past ten years, CWS has shipped foodstuffs weighing 2½ billion pounds and valued at $250 million to some 50 countries. ■

THE BULLETIN May, 1965 Diocese of New York

Chairman Appointed For New Department

Brooke Alexander, Assistant to the Publisher of Fortune Magazine, has been appointed Chairman of the Diocesan Department of Information and Development.

Mr. Alexander had previously served as a member of the Department of Promotion and was a member of the Council of the Diocese for two years. Currently he is a Deputy to Provincial Synod and a member of the Division of College Work.

A vestryman at Heavenly Rest Church, Manhattan, Mr. Alexander is Chairman of the Trustee Development Committee of Mount Holyoke College and a former trustee of the Retreat House of the Redeemer.

Mr. Alexander attended Kent School and is a graduate of Princeton University. He and his wife, the former Elizabeth Wise Burnett, have two children and reside at 65 East 96th St., Manhattan.

Canon Newman Takes New Post At Trinity

The vestry of historic Trinity Church, Broadway at Wall St., has unanimously elected the Rev. Canon Bernard C. Newman to the new post of Assistant to the Rector.

Canon Newman, nominated by the rector, the Rev. Canon John Heuss, has been Vicar of Trinity Church since 1948. He will assume his new position on June 15. According to church officials, this position will involve assisting Dr. Heuss "with the heavy and ever-increasing pastoral responsibilities and with some of the administrative details of this great urban parish whose Mother Church and six chapels minister to congregations from the Lower East Side to the upper West Side, in Greenwich Village and on Governors Island."

Before going to Trinity, Canon Newman was Rector for 10 years of St. Peter's Church, Uniontown, Pa. There he was active in labor relations and problems arising from juvenile delinquency and homes broken by war service. In recognition, he was made an Honorary Canon of Pittsburgh Cathedral in 1946. He received an honorary Doctor of Sacred Theology from General Seminary in 1955.

Annual Children's Cathedral Service

Children from all over the diocese will gather at the Cathedral on Saturday, May 22, for the 55th annual Presentation Service.

This is the annual service at which the children's missionary offerings for the past year are brought to the Cathedral. Some 2,500 vested choir members and clergy are expected to assemble in the Cathedral crypt shortly before 2 p.m. Then with parish banners flying, they will march past the Choir School and pass in review before Bishop Donegan and the Suffragan bishops. Also attending the festive event will be Church School students, their teachers, parents and friends, and members of the GFS Society for Girls.

About the Cover

The Rt. Rev. Mervyn Stockwood, Lord Bishop of Southwark, England, celebrates Holy Communion with 12 con-celebrants around a free-standing portable altar set up in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. The new vestments were designed by the Rev. Canon Edward N. West. Concelebrants, from left to right, are the Reverend Messrs. J. C. Michael Allen, M. Moran Weston, Benjamin Minifie, Clifford S. Lauder, Thomas L. Brown, R. Rhys Williams, The Bishop, Leopold Damrosh, Hugh D. McCandless, Lemuel J. Winterbottom, Frederick M. Morris, Donald L. Garfield, and Leslie J. A. Lang. # First Report From Narcotics Study

Aware of the growing concern among Churchpeople, the Diocesan Commission on Narcotics Addiction has issued a preliminary statement of some of the convictions that its members bring to their assignment.

The statement, adopted April 22 as the commission's first report to the Diocese, is printed here in full:

"Narcotic addiction is an illness of the total personality. There are emotional, spiritual and physical dimensions to this illness, and each must be dealt with in its treatment.

"Narcotic addiction is also a symptom of an illness in total society, and the social dimensions of addiction cannot be ignored if treatment is to succeed.

"However low the rate of cures may have been in the past, it is nonetheless true that narcotic addiction is an illness that can be cured. Even in neighborhoods of high incidence of addiction, addicts have been helped to achieve a new health of the total personality and re-integration into non-addict society. The numbers may be small, but the fact of successful rehabilitation is the salient point.

"Since addiction is an illness and since cure is possible, the addict must be seen as a person in need of treatment, not simply as a criminal. It follows that legislation and institutional policy must be directed primarily toward rehabilitation rather than punishment. And this calls clearly for a marked increase in governmental and private support of comprehensive rehabilitation programs, particularly those of an experimental nature."

The Bishop's Message

Christianity is always something given; it comes from Christ him self through the Church into which the believer is incorporated. The symbol, the witness and the instrument of that giveness of the Christian faith is the ministry of the word and sacraments. Wherever there is a group of Christian people and among them a minister commissioned to break the bread and to preach the word of God there is the Church, and there is the Lord's presence in the midst of them.

But it is not the clergy who are the Church. It is the laity in the proper meaning of that word "the congregation of Christ's flock", the laos, or the people of God, of which priest and parishioners alike are members. The great need today in almost every parish is the rediscovery of that truth and the spiritual responsibility which it lays upon every member in his own vocation and ministry. We who meet for worship on Sunday are not a collection of individuals who happen to be in the same building. We are the Church in that place. And the Church is not to be a private club, or a coterie of religiously minded persons; it is there to reveal what has been entrusted to it and to represent the Lord to its community. The vitality of each congregation is the key to the spiritual renewal of our Communion, and our nation.

Faithfully your Bishop,

M.R.I. Is Theme At All Convocations Presiding Bishop Speaks in Manhattan

Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence was the theme at all Convocations this year. Bishop Donegan spoke at Richmond, Bishop Wetmore at Ramapo, Dean Butler at Bronx, Archdeacon McEvoy at Hudson, the Rev. Raymond Ferris at Westchester, and the Rev. Arthur Hargate at Dutchess.

For one of his first official visits in the Diocese since becoming Presiding Bishop last November, Bishop Hines attended the Manhattan Convocation on April 4 at St. Thomas' Church. Thirty-nine clergymen were in the procession at Evensong and more than a thousand worshippers, including 284 wardens and vestrymen, made up the congregation.

"Gentlemen, I do not ask for your week-ends"

(Excerpts from the Presiding Bishop's sermon at the Manhattan Convocation)

I have been — nearly 90 days — the Presiding Bishop of this Church and charged by you in General Convention with huge responsibilities in adminisration. I can tell you that any man — even as "simple-minded" and "provincial" as I am — spending 90 days in close proximity to the program for Mission and Education and Social Action which is your National Church, would recognize that we are tackling a job, in the name of Jesus Christ, which no responsible business corporation in this country would think of tackling without the spending of millions and millions of dollars. And in contrast, your Church can only afford to spend "pennies"! . . . .

The truth of the matter is that the situation is so critical in the nature and character and life of the Church today that no "money-raising" scheme can save her from failure before her Lord! The Church needs money — desperately. BUT what we need more, MUCH more, is something no money can buy. That's the first thing about M.R.I. If you have to interpret it only in terms of money, forget it! It's too late for that! . . . .

Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence calls for the deep recognition on the part of Christians that we belong to each other in Christ. It is the acknowledgement that Christians need each other and are responsible for all men—even as is Christ!

A few years ago in the Diocese of Texas we built a church immediately adjacent to the campus of Prairie View University, one of the largest state-supported Negro colleges in the world. It was then and still is the only church building near the campus. The day of its dedication a Negro woman came to the priest-in-charge and said: "Thank God for this church! Six months ago I had to bury my husband from a funeral home ten miles away. Thank God for this church, for this church makes of this settlement a community!" Tell me, can you say that in all honesty of your own parish church? This is part of what M.R.I. is asking.

Most of you are vestrymen. I honor you for it! And you have been honored by your peers. But you know as well as anybody that the "average" vestryman (if any be average) looks upon his job as a kind of "caretaker" for the House of God. He hopes to turn his responsibility over to his successor undiminished. This is a minimal response to a grave responsibility.

In the parable of the talents, can you guess which of the "servants" most resembled some vestrymen? The one talent man! Not that vestrymen as a rule are limited in their abilities or gifts. Actually, in the Episcopal Church, most vestrymen are like yourselves: extremely able, well-educated, remarkably gifted people. But too often they act like the "one-talented" man who so feared losing what talent he had been given that he hid it in the ground so that, when the good man of the house returned, he would see that the man had "conserved" what he had been given.

Well, to be fearful of being without even one talent can be a real fear. But it cannot compare with the disaster of doing nothing with that which God has given us.

You are a vestryman. M.R.I. is saying to you: Go into your rector's office tomorrow and say to him, "Rector, you and I belong to this church! What is this church really doing to justify occupying this square block of ground, on this corner of God's world . . . What is this church doing to justify using symbols which we rather proudly display: A Cross, a Book . . . a Broken Wafer and poured Red Wine consecrated by the example of a God-Man, who said, "This is my Body, my blood, broken and shed for the sins of the world. Do this in remembrance of me."

Come into my office—815 Second Ave., and say, "Bishop, you and I are paying six million dollars for this building on this corner! What about it—in the light of Bethlehem and Calvary?"

In Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence, we are being called upon to evaluate every activity of our life—as called people of God—by the test of mission and service to others! In short, we must struggle with and find an answer to the questions "What does it mean to be a Christian in the world today?"

Talking to some Swiss and Frenchmen in 1912, Lenin said, "Gentlemen, I do not ask for your week-ends. I ask for your lives!"

The architects of M.R.I. are not asking for your charity. They are asking for your total commitment. As did our Lord Jesus Christ! In the light of our priceless privilege, He is entitled to it.

Dr. Oxholm Retires

"Prophet and engineer in the Household of Faith"

Thus spoke the trustees of Hobart and William Smith in conferring an honorary Doctor of Laws on Theodore Oxholm. The honor came in 1959, eighteen years after Bishop Manning asked him to leave his apple farm up the Hudson and come to the Diocese for a "half-time" job.

He came just one week before Pearl Harbor and was soon working time-and-a-half as Assistant Treasurer. By the end of the war, he had the Diocese's $150,000 debt paid off and has kept things in the black ever since, despite a rise from $237,000 to well over $1 million in annual diocesan commitments and contributions to the work of the National Church.

In 1946 he became deeply concerned about the lack of new church construction during the war years. The result was the "Cornerstone Campaign", which raised enough to finish several churches that had been started prior to 1941.

Following his election as Treasurer of the Diocese in 1953, Dr. Oxholm and Bishop Donegan became increasingly interested in providing churches for the hundreds of thousands involved in migration to vast new housing projects in the city and in mushrooming suburban communities. The result was "The 175th Anniversary Fund" of the Diocese, which resulted in contributions of $2,500,000 for the construction and the rebuilding of urban churches and the establishment of a Revolving Fund for building in suburban and rural areas.

Dr. Oxholm's responsibilities went far beyond the duties of a treasurer. His primary interest was in forwarding and promoting the work of the Church in this Diocese. He gave unstintingly of his time and counsel in the reorganization of the Diocesan structure advocated by Bishop Donegan in 1950. This resulted in the present Bishop and Executive Council type of Diocesan Administration. He also served as treasurer of the Synod of the Second Province for nine years, as vice-president and director of the American Church Building Fund Commission for five years, as treasurer of the Church Mission for Deaf Mutes for ten years, and as treasurer of the Bell Home Corporation for girls since 1954. Elected a deputy to General Convention in 1955, 1958 and 1961, he served as a member of the Committee on Budget and Program in each of those years.

Dr. Oxholm and his wife, the former Mary McAllister Hall, are not interested in retiring to Florida. They expect to stay in their pre-Revolutionary stone house in West Park, N. Y., and raise apples on their hundred acres. Next year they will be celebrating their 40th wedding anniversary, with the help of two daughters, a son, and six grandchildren.

John L. Gibbons Named Treasurer

John L. Gibbons, Executive Vice President and Chairman of the Trust Committee of Chemical Bank of New York Trust Company, has been named Treasurer of the Diocese of New York by the Standing Committee.

A graduate of the Graduate School of Banking, Rutgers University, Mr. Gibbons has been with the Chemical Bank for thirty-six years. He is a director of City Investing Company, Chock Full O' Nuts, North American Life Assurance, Avnet, Inc., and the Angostura-Wupperman Corporation.

Mr. Gibbons' philanthropic activities include the Epilepsy Association of America, which he serves as director and president, the president's advisory council of Pace College, trustee of Emergency Shelter, Inc., and secretary of Federal Hall Memorial Associates, Inc. He is a member of the Economic Club of New York, the Marco Polo Club, and the Book, Sky and Tuxedo Clubs.

Mr. Gibbons and his wife, the former Margaret A. Francis, live in New City where they are communicants of St. John's Church. He has served that church as vestryman and warden and was recently elected a vestryman of Trinity Church, Manhattan.

Mrs. Howard Weale Elected to Three-Year Term By ECW

The diocesan Episcopal Churchwomen elected Mrs. Howard W. Weale of Grace Church, Middletown, to a three year term as president at the annual meeting on May 15 in Synod Hall.

Mrs. Weale succeeds Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr. of Ascension, Manhattan, who served as president for the past three years.

The elections were part of a day long schedule of activities which began at 10:30 in the Cathedral, where the Spring Ingathering of the United Thank Offering was held. Bishop Donegan was celebrant at Holy Communion, and the preacher was the

Dr. Krumm Instituted As Rector of Ascension

At the 11 A.M. service on May 9, the Rev. John M. Krumm was instituted as the ninth Rector of the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, by Bishop Donegan, who preached the sermon.

A native of South Bend, Indiana, Dr. Krumm received his B. D. degree from Virginia Theological Seminary in 1938 and earned a Ph. D. in church history from Yale in 1948.

The early years of his ministry were spent at churches in Connecticut and California. He was Dean and Rector of St. Paul's Cathedral, Los Angeles, from 1948 to 1952.

Dr. Krumm goes to Ascension after 13 years as Chaplain of Columbia University. During this period he wrote several books, including the widely known Why I Am An Episcopalian, published by Nelson and Sons in 1957.

Dr. Krumm served as a deputy to General Convention in 1949, 1952, and 1964. He is a former member of the Diocesan Council and the Department of Christian Social Relations and currently serves as a member of the Department of Christian Education.

MRI Conference: New Definitions

After the conference Bishop Donegan relaxes with the Rev. Arthur Hargate (left), Rector of St. Matthew's, Bedford, Charles Bound of St. Mark's, Mt. Kisko, Mrs. W. Stanley Edger, Jr., retiring president of E.C.W., and the Rev. Raymond Ferris, Rector of Christ Church, Bronxville.

"We are called together not for mutual comfort, but to obey the Living God," Bishop Donegan told members of the M.R.I. Commission at a two-day meeting at the Conference Center in Tuxedo Park last month.

Referring to the world-wide Anglican Congress of 1963, the Bishop said, "We could not escape the realization of the so great poverty in some places and the so great riches in others, and our consciences have not ceased to trouble us ever since." He indicated that he intends to devote a major part of his address to the Diocesan Convention this spring to M.R.I. and issue a Pastoral Letter on the subject before summer.

The Rt. Rev. Stephen F. Bayne, Director of the Overseas Department of the Executive Council, lead the conference for 24 members of the commission and 14 invited clergy and lay guests. Bishop Bayne said quite frankly that "our Church is one that greatly needs a new vision of greatness," and that there is "an urgent need for the Diocese of New York to give the lead to the Church."

The lively discussions brought out the fact that M.R.I. must be an attitude of mind and heart on the part of all Churchpeople, even more than a formal program. "There is missionary work to be done; there are lives to be claimed," said the Rev. Albert Buchanan, Dean of the Manhattan Convocation, in speaking of the many half-filled churches in the inner sections of cities all over the country. Bishop Bayne agreed, and cited the unhappy fact that 65% of the Episcopal churche in the U. S. have fewer than 150 members.

The lectures and discussions, the late evening Office of Compline, and the early morning Holy Communion celebrated by Bishop Donegan seemed to bring forth a new understanding of what the words Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ really mean, and it is possible to say now that we are probably "at the end of the beginning."

Some of M.R.I. will cost money, some of it is free for the seizing of the opportunities that lie all around us. For example, in the Diocese of Olympia, twenty devoted Church families transferred their membership for one year from the parishes they loved in order to give leadership in parishes that were struggling to survive.

Contrast this gift of self, if you will, with the gift of money made by a certain parish which insisted on raising funds to bring the wife and children of an exchange priest to this country for six months, in defiance of the wishes of an English bishop and regulations governing the whole exchange program.

The good people in that parish had come to know and love the stranger in their midst. But the spirit of M.R.I. asks that we acknowledge our kinship and responsibility to those we do not know.

Ruth Weber Takes New Position

Miss Ruth Weber, managing editor of this magazine for the past four years, has resigned to become the editor of The Church Woman, a monthly magazine which has a nationwide circulation of 35,000.

The magazine is published by the United Church Women, a department in the Division of Christian Unity, National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. The division is directed by a prominent Episcopal churchwoman, Mrs. Cynthia (Mrs. Theodore) Wedel.

Miss Weber came to the Diocese after 15 years as a reporter for daily newspapers in Westchester County and Binghamton, N.Y. For a considerable portion of that time she was school and religion editor for The Daily Argus, Mount Vernon.

Less than a year and a half after Miss Weber became managing editor, The Bulletin was judged the best diocesan magazine in the nation by a panel of experts selected by The Episcopalian, the church's national monthly magazine. The award was made by the Presiding Bishop at a meeting of the House of Bishops in October, 1962.

Miss Weber is a communicant of the Church of the Ascension, Mount Vernon, where she serves as a member of the Vestry, the choir and the Episcopal Churchwomen. Her new headquarters will be at 475 Riverside Drive.

The 1965 Litu

IN OPENING THE 1965 LITURGICAL CONFERENCE, Bishop Donegan said he had ordered, in accordance with action of the House of Bishops and Resolution of Lambeth Conference, that "any and all Baptized Christians who, in response to the prompting of the Holy Spirit, are minded at these services to receive the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ shall be most welcome so to do."

No doubt many of the observers at this international gathering were so moved, for there was splendor and magnificence without apology in the two celebrations of the Holy Communion for more than 1,000 priests and laymen attending the meetings at the Waldorf-Astoria from April 26 to 28. As the Rev. Boone H. Porter, Jr., Professor of Liturgics at General Seminary and Conference Chairman, put it: "In such a conference we make a very deliberate, conscious, and conspicuous effort to perform the Holy Eucharist in such a way that there can be no doubt as to our purpose of offering our work to God, through Christ, to be blessed and perfected by His life-giving spirit."

However, despite the great beauty of the two services, one in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf (see cover) and one in the Cathedral, and despite the dictionary definition of Liturgy, the theme expressed by speaker after speaker was the crucial need for Christians to go forth from the Eucharist and bear witness. As the Lord Bishop of Southwark (near London) said in a major address, "Words without action can reduce love to a sham. God will judge us not by the accuracy of our ritual, but by the impact we make on our world after the Eucharist is over."

The three-day conference was sponsored by the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Trinity Parish, and the Associated Parishes, Inc., a national organization headquartered in Madison, Wisconsin. The Rev. Nicholas Kouletsis, President of Associated Parishes, spoke on "The Urban Priest in Today's World" and strongly emphasized that the Church "cannot remain passive . . . but must begin to be militant for Christ's sake and for His people in the world . . . We must be prepared to participate, responsively with others, in creating new forms and new expressions that will give new meaning to men's lives."

The Rt. Rev. Paul Moore, Jr., Suffragan Bishop of Washington, described the march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama, as a liturgical act which "called forth the love starved, passion starved Christians to a place where the songs and the action were of freedom and love . . . It was as though the whole Book of Common Prayer had been fashioned precisely for this moment in history."

For the scientist's point of view, the conference heard from Dr. Margaret Mead, an anthropologist of world-wide reputation and a Churchwoman. She said that one of the major purposes of an elaborate and beautiful ritual is "to lift people above the moment of dullness and give them back the feeling they once had—at a time when they don't have it."

Speaking for the many clerical and lay Roman Catholic observers at the conference, John Mannion, executive secretary of the Roman Catholic Church's liturgical organization, said in a major address: "Like teenagers, we are experiencing the unfamiliar thrill of holding hands for the first time. Perhaps, after our adolescent infatuation and awkwardness, we can look forward to a maturing love and a union of our two bodies in the one flesh of our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ."

At Evensong in St. Bartholomew's Church, the Rt. Rev. Jonathon Sherman, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island, spoke on the responsibilities of bishops: "Chief missionary and evangelist, militant in defense of the Faith, but pastoral rather than autocratic in dealing with his flock."

The conference schedule was a heavy one; most of the spare time was devoted to special interest groups lead by experts in the fields of art, architecture, music, drama, films and TV.

At the final meeting the Rev. Edward N. West, Canon Sacrist at the Cathedral, summed up what it all means. The Liturgical Movement is obviously concerned with far more than ceremony. It is concerned about those who, sometimes without even knowing it, "pray as Christians and live as heathens." And he predicted that "through its cold blooded insistence on exactly what goes into the Offertory, the Liturgical Movement is going to make a terrifying impact on the educational, professional, and business world."

A Retreat Group For A.A. Members

by The Rev. H. Gordon Macdonald
Rector, Saint Mark's, Yonkers

Editor's Note: This month marks the seventh anniversary of the St. Martin's Retreat Group, which meets each spring and fall at the Bishop Donegan Conference Center. The group is restricted to men who are members of Alcoholics Anoymous. Women members of A.A. from the Diocese of New York who would be interested in making retreats are invited to get in touch with the Department of Christian Social Relations of the Diocese, or with the author.

One October Sunday in 1949 a man left the chapel at Holy Cross Monastery, West Park, N.Y., and made his way to a small garden overlooking the Hudson River. It was after the noon meal and his retreat was over. Another made his way to the same spot and the two introduced themselves. After some idle talk about the view, one of the men suddenly said, "I had a special reason for making this retreat. I am an alcoholic." To his amazement the other man answered that he, too, was a member of A.A. Thus began a lasting friendship which has continued down through the years.

This was a beginning, although neither man realized it at the time. Each continued to make individual retreats at Holy Cross alone. But the next year they discovered that a priest who was living and working at the monastery, although not a member of the Order of the Holy Cross, was also a member of A.A. From this time on whenever one or more members of A.A. made retreats at Holy Cross, Father "D" was there, too.

By 1952, efforts of the pioneers to spread the idea of a retreat group for members of A.A. who were not Roman Catholics had begun to take hold. More and more men were becoming interested and it was felt that the group had begun to take on an identity. Five men made a retreat at Seabury House in June of 1951. The memorable thing about this occasion was that Bishop Sherrill, then the Presiding Bishop, discovered that they were at Seabury House and instantly decided to be the celebrant at Holy Communion.

In December of 1952, ten men were present at Holy Cross, and so it went. The Fathers at Holy Cross were most hospitable and understanding but because of the very nature of a monastery, Holy Cross was not the ideal place. For example, there was concern over possible lack of accommodations as the group grew. In addition the group wished to hold an A.A. meeting at the conclusion of their retreats.

A large house at Red Hook was considered by the group, but Bishop Donegan came to their aid, saying that there was no need for them to purchase such a place in view of the Diocese's newly acquired conference center. So, in May of 1958, their first retreat was held at Tuxedo Park and the name of Saint Martin's Retreat Group was officially adopted. The group had done considerable research looking for an alcoholic saint, but could not find one who "qualified", although many of them had interesting pasts. However, when it was discovered that Saint Martin of Tours had, in the 13th century, been adopted as the patron saint of the wine industry, it was felt that this gave him some degree of kinship with the group. The eleventh step of the A.A. program is the basis for the retreats. "We sought through prayer and meditation to improve our conscious contact with God as we understood Him, praying only for a knowledge of His will for us and the power to carry it out."

Princeton Conference Will Meet June 25th To Discuss Ecumenism

The 1965 Princeton Conference, which meets June 25 to 29 under the sponsorship of the Dioceses of New York, New Jersey, and Newark, will discuss "The Ecumenical Revolution."

(It is especially interesting and timely in view of the progress made last month by the Consultation of Church Union, an organization representing six denominations with combined membership of 22 million. The official delegations, chaired this year by the Rt. Rev. Robert F. Gibson, Jr., Bishop of Virginia, issued a report which marked a milestone in the four year deliberations. The report stated: "We agree that in a united church, this gift of the historic episcopate will be accepted and honored.")

Keynoter for the conference will be the Rev. Robert E. Terwilliger, Ph.D., Associate Rector of All Saints, Manhattan, and a distinguished faculty of six will lead the meetings and workshops. The cost for resident students is $36, or $6 for others attending one or more sessions. Further information is available from the Rev. Miller Cragon, Director of Christian Education for the Diocese of New York.

Youth Conferences Scheduled at Bard

"The Meaning of Christian Life in a Non-Christian World" is the theme for the 1965 Youth Conference sponsored by the diocesan Department of Christian Education. The complete facilities of the college—Chapel, dormitories, dining room, swimming pool, gym, dispensary and athletic fields—will be available to the four groups, which are as follows:

Conference I for Grades 7 & 8, August 1-6.

Conference II for Grade 9, August 8-13.

Conference III for Grade 10, August 15-20.

Conference IV for Grades 11, 12 and those graduating this June, August 22-27.

The cost is $30 per person. Further information and registration forms may be obtained from the Rev. Richard J. Kirk, Department of Christian Education.

14th Century Icon on Exhibit at St. James

Continuing an eight year tradition, St. James' Church, Manhattan, presented another notable exhibition of great art from May 9 through 23.

Over 200 icons in the Russian and Greek Orthodox tradition were on view in the parish house daily from one to six p.m. They ranged in age and price from 14th century Byzantine at $24,000 to works by contemporary French icon painters at a modest $35.

Believed to be the largest collection of icons ever assembled in the U.S., the exhibit grew out of conversations between the Rev. Canon William Chase, assistant minister at St. James, and Princess Irene Romanoff, who now works as secretary of the American Episcopal Cathedral in Paris.

Beneficiary of the exhibit and sale was the Russian Orthodox Cathedral in Paris and its impoverished seminary.

GFS Sponsors Pilot Training Program

The GFS Society for Girls, through its Summer Opportunities Committee, undertakes a new pilot program this summer for girls sixteen and seventeen years of age. The program will enable girls to obtain experience as workers in vacation church schools, doing tutorial and remedial work with younger children and helping with recreational work and field trips. It will also enable the GFS to do research in the kinds of projects that teenagers are capable of doing and the amount and kind of supervision they require.

Eight girls have been chosen, and they will be assigned to the Church of St. Matthew and St. Timothy, Manhattan, from June 28 to July 30. This church was selected because of its well-organized program into which the GFS girls could fit, and because of the desire of the rector, the Rev. James A. Gusweller, to follow up this summer program with the formation of a GFS branch.

The girls are Susan Trett and Priscilla Jackson of New York City, Mary E. Gordon, Sharon Reid and Marsha Ellis of Long Island, Mollie Douglas of North Carolina, Carol Edmonds of Illinois and Terry Stephenson of California. They will live at Windham House and will be supervised, both at work and at other times, by Mrs. Edmund J. Beazley, Diocesan GFS Chairman of Leadership Training and Miss Betty Beazley.

After 100 Years St. Thomas Chapel Becomes All Saints

All Saints Church, Manhattan, which has been working toward parish status for more than four years, has achieved its goal. The church, at 230 East 60th St., was formerly known as St. Thomas Chapel. It had relied on the support and leadership of St. Thomas Church, Fifth Avenue and 53rd St., for more than 100 years.

Actually, the parish work of St. Thomas included people on the East Side of Manhattan as early as 1824, although there was no permanent place of worship. In 1858, space was acquired in a building at Prince and Thompson Streets. Later the chapel moved to East 59th St. A far-sighted vestry authorized the building of the present All Saints in 1872.

Its movement toward independence reached a milestone on Easter Sunday, 1963, when the name was changed from St. Thomas Chapel to All Saints Church. The Rev. R. DeWitt Mallary, Jr., was serving as the vicar.

Recently, having reached the point where it is self-supporting, All Saints was legally empowered to elect a vestry. This body consists of G. Edward Stamm and Richard E. Quaintance, wardens, and John Blough, Maxwell Dunn, Samuel Fordham, Arthur Maycock, Hugh Mackey, Peter Conway, William B. Van Nortwick, Charles German, Fred Schultz, Stoddard Platt, Richard Schumacher and Charles Jujawa, vestrymen. They, in turn have called Fr. Mallary to be the first rector. ■

"People Who Need People"

By Carolyn R. Falk, Diocesan Chairman of Supply, ECW

A young mother-to-be who cannot afford to buy the things her baby will need. . .A hospital patient for whom a bed jacket would be a morale builder as well as a necessity. . . Men, women and children at a mission in Liberia who need clothes and household supplies. . . A woman released from a penal institution who needs clothing for herself and her child until she is reestablished in the community. . .

These are some of the people receiving garments bearing the label: Supply Department, Episcopal Churchwomen, Diocese of New York. The label means that women somewhere in this diocese have been busy working as the Church.

The trouble is, though, that in recent years the number of Supply groups has been slowly diminishing. At one time, virtually every church had a sewing group, but this is not true any more. Perhaps it is because so many women work. Perhaps it is because group projects of this kind are not as popular among younger women as they were a generation ago. But whatever the reason, handmade articles such as layettes, sweaters, pajamas, socks and robes are in short supply these days. We are greatly in need of more people who are willing to sew, knit or crochet.

The diocesan Supply Department, operating from the Supply Room in the basement of Diocesan House, acts as the clearing house for all of the requests which come in from approximately 45 social agencies, hospitals, other institutions, and 40 mission churches and assisted parishes in the New York area. It also receives assignments for domestic and overseas missions and worldwide organizations such as Church World Service from our Associate Secretary of Supply, General Division of Women's Work, Executive Council. Requests can be filled in one of three ways:

- With garments made by Churchwomen in parish workrooms or at home.
- With articles bought wholesale by the Supply Department's buyer of ready-made materials.
- With cash sent to the institution for the local purchases of goods. (This often avoids costly shipping charges.)

The diocesan supply chairman determines how each request is to be filled, and then gives the assignments to the seven convocation supply chairmen. They, in turn, relay them to the parish groups. The finished articles are shipped directly from the parish to the institution requesting them.

In filling last year's requests, parish groups made garments, household items and cuddly toys valued at $20,946. They furnished funds for the wholesale purchase of ready-made items valued at $11,524. And they donated $2,645 to the special gift fund which provides an annual gift of clothing for Indian catechists, Christmas gift checks to a small number of clergy widows, and cash sent to institutions in lieu of goods. Approximately 41 per cent of these gifts went to 26 mission schools and hospitals in Africa, Hong Kong, Liberia, etc., and 69 per cent was sent to missions and other organizations within the diocese. Approximately 5,300 pounds of used clothing was provided.

While these figures are interesting, it is nevertheless true that contributions from the individual parishes have decreased in many cases from 30 to 50 per cent. Last year, cash donations to the Supply Department's funds were inadequate to meet the needs of agencies depending upon this assistance. In many instances, these decreases caused a real hardship. The assignments from the General Division of Women's Work for missions outside the diocese were only partially accepted. All large requests from diocesan institutions were cut in half.

When you consider this in terms of people, the situation becomes sharply realistic. Suppose there was no clothing for a new-born infant; no warm bed jacket for an elderly patient; no sweaters, or socks or games for a deserving child; no household or office furniture or camp equipment for an expanding social agency or new community center. Without the work of the Supply Department, these articles would not reach the people who need them. ■

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West

What is the difference between a rector, a vicar, and a curate?

In America, a rector is the ecclesiastical head of an independent parish. A vicar is the chief ecclesiastical officer of a mission, or a chapel, or an assisted parish. In each case the body of which the vicar is in charge is subordinate to some other.

So, for example, the great parish of Trinity has a rector, and each chapel of Trinity Parish has its own vicar. In a diocese, the bishop is the rector of all the missions, and each of their immediate ecclesiastical superiors is the bishop's vicar for the chapel or mission involved. A curate is, in America, an assistant minister. Indeed, in America, in strict Canon Law there is no such title as curate. It's just a most convenient, and, therefore, popular, appellation.

Poverty In Strange Places

Editor's note: We are indebted to a Roman Catholic — Fr. Daniel Berrigan, S. J.—for the deeply moving expression of humility which follows.

Although we do not subscribe to every last sentence, we print excerpts here because the great Anglican Congress of 1963 urged us to be "A Listening Church", and to seek truth wherever it may be found.

I am a member of a deprived and ever impoverished church, a church which is too poor in virtue to become poor in fact, too unsure and unconvinced to preach the gospel with clarity and vision, childishly attached to the bric-a-brac of honors, the double talk of diplomacy, the degrading favors of the rich, the idolatry of structures, the price of place.

I am a member of a deprived nation. I speak here of a moral poverty of the most frightful and pervasive kind. It is a poverty which clings with the grasp of death itself, to material well-being. It clings to its static goods, and fears mightily the winds of revolution. It clings to its family goods in denial of the claims of spirit and community. It clings to its white supremacy, in the face of black excellence, black need, black beauty. It puts off needful revolution, though it was born in revolution, and can only hope to exist if the revolution continues.

I offer you as an image of my nation, not the hate-filled faces of Mississippi, but the faces of Brooklyn and Manhattan in the recent school picketing, and the dignity of the black faces that in our northern cities are creating and protecting the moral revolution.

I am finally a member of a deprived race. Our white poverty is measured by the yardstick of our obsessions, of our fears, of finally the choices we make and the choices we put off and the choices we refuse. I will not merely say that I am shamed by wearing the same skin of Ross Barnett or Thurmond or Bull Connor. It demands no great moral sense to express one's horror of such men. But I am shamed at being invited to sit the same fence as the thousands of whites who north and south watch the passing show. I am shamed by the Northern whites, who hold the line in neighborhood and schools and jobs, and do nothing. I am shamed because the cold war is a white man's game, and I am invited and even forced in a thousand unsavory ways, to play the game. I am shamed because two world wars were fought and led and won and lost by white men. I am shamed because the first nuclear bomb was executed and exploded by my race against another, in violation of all canons of mercy or justice.

Indeed, the cataloging of one's poverty is not a pleasant task. It has about it the unpleasantness and even the pain of a surgical operation; the nausea and weakness, the traumatic loss of one's foothold.

But to stand in poverty, before God, and before one another, has one altogether unique advantage and reward. It is the reward which a sense of reality always brings with it. When one knows he is poor, not in the abstract, but in the flesh and mind, in the soul, in his capacities, in his society, in his church, he knows something extremely precious. He has touched things as they are. But the rewards are not merely intellectual. They are human and Christian.

Indeed, in the constant thought of the Bible, the poor man is man himself. As one veers away from the truth of his poverty, he turns aside from God, from his brother, from himself. He becomes alienated, a man obsessed by illusion, unable to think or act or love, a man of false power and fearful weakness. And on the contrary, when one is faithful to the truth of his poverty, the needle's eye bursts apart, the narrow way widens, the truth of existence opens up. One becomes fit for the community, a meeting ground for the hope of man, worthy of experiencing Christ.

Let me conclude these reflections on a note of optimism and joy, which I deeply feel and would like to share. We who are men and women of biblical truth are also called to be men of truth in the world. We are summoned to understand that the God who speaks in the Bible also speaks in His world, that the world is in fact a kind of continuing word of God, speaking to us from community and from creation.

In the Bible God has revealed Himself in the poor man Christ, the One who "being rich, became poor for our sake," the One who "came not to be served, but to serve." And the world, for those who can listen, speaks of the same Christ. Christ the poor man is present within the world; He is present most luminously and surely in the poor of the world. Which means, if our reflections of tonight have any validity, that He is present in us, who are poor, and who confess our deprivation and need.

Nor is this all. For if God has chosen to reveal His poverty in Christ, He has also revealed the riches of His providence. God has become poor in the impoverishment which He underwent when He gave Himself. And His providence continues, ironically, both under the sign of poverty and the sign of enrichment. To give is to receive. To refuse to give is to be condemned and deprived: to isolation, to inertia, to acedia, to despair.

So the Christian stands in a very special position before the world. Any man with reasonable good will can witness the call which the world exerts on his conscience and his energies, to give, to contribute, to relieve pain, to bring hope. Many good men in fact hear the voice of the world and respond admirably. But the Christian alone can hear all the resonances of the call, can recognize the one who, under every cry for succor is announcing His name. Hearing the voice of man, the Christian knows the true measure of the need and can respond at depth; He knows that the cry for bread is also the cry for truth; that the cry for healing is also the cry for spiritual wholeness; that the cry for human dignity is also a cry for redemption. ■

75th Year for Mt. Vernon Church

Ascension Day will have a special significance for the Church of the Ascension, Mount Vernon, this year. On that festival, which falls on May 27, the church will celebrate its 75th anniversary with a commemorative service. Bishop Donegan will preach and confirm the anniversary year's confirmation class. Later he will be the guest of honor at a reception in the parish hall.

Although this service is its most important event, the church has been celebrating the diamond jubilee in a number of ways since last fall. These have included a Lenten preaching service in which clergy from Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran and Roman Catholic churches in Mount Vernon have participated. Also, Ascension was host for the community-wide observance of World Fellowship Day on May 2. Later, the Rt. Rev. William Appleton Lawrence, retired Bishop of Western Massachusetts, paid an anniversary visit. He is a long-time friend of the rector, the Rev. Clarence S. Cleasby, Jr.

Next fall, the church will round out the year with a 75th Anniversary Fair. As a permanent record of its celebration, Ascension has published a Historical Journal featuring a full-length history of the parish with pictures of present-day organizations and many photos of the early days. ■

Personnel Reference Service Now Available

The Executive Council has set up a clearing house for the exchange of information about professional employees and professional employment in the Episcopal Church and in church-related institutions and organizations. This center is not an employment agency as such, but it will match the formal specifications of employers and employees and initiate communication between the two parties.

The service is called the Professional Personnel Reference Service, and it is operating as part of the Division of Christian Ministries, under the direction of Dr. Reuben H. Gross. Dr. Gross, a layman with seminary training, previously taught on several university campuses, directed a research study for the Carnegie Institution for the Advancement of Teaching, and worked on the staff of Dr. James B. Conant, noted educator and author.

The Professional Personnel Reference Service so far lists 73 types of positions ranging from such specifically church jobs as Director of Christian Education to such general positions as medical technologist or producer of programs for radio, television, films, or the stage. Bishops have been asked to register the names of men and women in their dioceses or missionary districts who are employed full time on church staffs, in seminaries, schools and colleges, and in other church-associated organizations. Executives in Church bodies who are responsible for the employment of professional people are being urged to use the facilities of the Reference Service when an opening occurs.

Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Wright, Bishop of East Carolina and chairman of the national church's Committee on Mutual Responsibility.

Following election of officers and luncheon in Synod House undercroft, Bishop Donegan addressed the ECW and installed the new officers.

The United Thank Offering was the second to be made in the new Triennium, and the results by Convocation are compared with the Advent, 1964 offering in the chart on page 6.

In her report, Mrs. J. Mortimer Rutherford, retiring Chairman and Treasurer of UTO, noted that 16 Thank Offerings were given as memorials. They were in memory of Katherine Curran, Mrs. Clarence J. Deyo, Pembroke Hand Donegan, Edith Payne Jisk, Edith Harper, Mrs. William Jones, Mrs. Herbert Mason, Mrs. Charles Middleton, Mabel Sale Molleson, Alice G. Palmer, Grace Hubbard Paulding, Carol W. Rede, Julia Stien, Mrs. Walter F. Shorter, Bertha Taiano and Francis Witte.

Mrs. Rutherford also noted that the Advent, 1964, Ingathering exceeded the first Ingathering of the previous Triennium by almost $700.

One new parish is participating in the UTO—St. Thomas, New Windsor.

Says Many People are Living on Accumulated Religious Capital

"If it were not for organized religion, the Christian faith would have died out many years ago," Dr. Clifford P. Morehouse, President of the House of Deputies, declared recently on the radio program, Viewpoint.

Viewpoint is heard every Sunday at 6:45 a.m. over station WOR. It is produced by the Division of Radio, Television and Audio-Visuals of the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church.

Dr. Morehouse, who is President of Morehouse-Barlow Co., religious book publishers and supply house, admitted that "organized religion is a term that is rather frightening because it seems to set up a great bureaucracy." But, he said, "This is not what the Church is intended to be or what at its best it is. Rather, it is the strand that carries on the faith from the earliest days to the present time. The Church is a family and all of us are members of it by virtue of baptism . . ."

Asked if he believes people have a reservoir of religious strength, Dr. Morehouse said, "They do, indeed, but a lot of them are living on what you might call accumulated capital—religion that other people have built up and that they are just using. They always expect the Church to be there, you know, when they need it—if they want to be married, if they want to be buried—but a great many people don't realize that it won't be there unless they support it in the meantime. ■

Moral & Social Issues Concern of 185th Convention

The continuing concern of the Diocese with urgent moral and social problems was strongly emphasized at the 185th Convention, held in Synod Hall on May 11. Among the many issues which received forthright and outspoken attention were the role of the Church in fighting alcoholism, its stand on the New York State laws concerning divorce and birth control information, New York City's long out-dated Women's House of Detention, various civil rights issues and many others.

The Bishop's address reflected this growing concern with the Church's duties on both religious and social levels, with particular emphasis on the values of Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ (MRI). The business of the convention also included reports from departments of the Diocesan Council, the election of members of Diocesan boards and delegations and adoption of the budget, in addition to searching and frequently lively discussions preceding the adoption or rejection of resolutions.

Among the first acts of the Convention was the admission of All Saints Church, Manhattan, formerly St. Thomas Chapel, into union with the Convention. The retirement of Dr. Theodor Oxholm as Treasurer was regretfully announced by Bishop Donegan, who presented him with a camera and a check from the clergy and other friends "as a token of our appreciation and deep affection."

Among the resolutions acted upon in the morning session, those which engendered the most discussion were resolutions dealing with the placement of Diocesan and parish funds in corporations and with contractors committed to "equal opportunity" practices, and the resolution on birth control. Questions as to the financial investment practicability of the "equal opportunity" resolutions were raised by Mr. Charles F. Bound, St. Mark's, Mt. Kisco, but were answered by the Rev. M. Moran Weston of St. Philip's, Manhattan, who pointed out that the purpose of the resolution was more important than its presumptive difficulties, which should not be construed as something to prevent the Diocese from taking action but rather to expand the purpose of the Church. In this he was supported by Dr. Charles R. Lawrence, St. Paul's, Spring Valley who explained that the resolution asks only that more effort be made to find employers and companies who are making active efforts toward fair employment practices and is in no sense an attempt to control investments or contracts. He emphasized that the Roman Catholic Church is a leader in this field and that many corporations and their executives welcome the moral support of even resolutions such as this. He also noted that other Episcopal Dioceses had already passed equally strong resolutions. After further discussion the resolution was passed.

Before the passage of the birth control resolution, Dr. Weston spoke warmly to remind the Convention that there is a distinction between planned parenthood and what he considered a negative concept, birth control. He also objected to the singling out of welfare recipients as those who particularly need such guidance. The Rev. Eric Snyder of the Episcopal Mission Society's Services to Families and Youth thereupon pointed out that the New York State law as it stands tends to deprive the welfare recipient alone of the right to such information, despite the recommendation of the New York State Welfare Board, and urged that the Convention support the proposed change in the present law.

Resolutions from the floor were then accepted, various reports were submitted, and the Convention adjourned for lunch while the Committee on Canons considered the new resolutions.

The first order of business in the afternoon session was the presentation of the report of the Committee on Diocesan Finances, given by Mr. Leland S. Brown. The budget was divided into two principal sections, funds which are supported by assessment, and the Diocesan share of the support of the work of the Executive Council of the National Church, along with monies for various departments of the Council. The first section, supported by assessment, was divided into three parts:

|---|---|
| For support of the Episcopate | $106,148 |
| Diocesan Expense Fund | 140,845 |
| Department of Missions | 91,600 |
| | $338,593 |

The Rev. R. DeWitt Mallary, Jr., newly instituted Rector, All Saints, Manhattan, addresses the delegates.

J. Taylor Foster, Vestryman, Trinity Parish, the Rev. Leslie J. A. Lang, D. D., S.T.D. Vicar, Intercession Chapel, and Dr. Frederick E. Hasler, Vestryman, Trinity Parish, relax during luncheon recess.

Mr. Brown pointed out that the first two items are almost the same as last year, and that the third item has been exactly the same for the past four years. The second portion of the budget was divided into two sections:

|---|---|
| Support of the Work of the Executive Council of the National Church | $789,183 |
| Missionary Quotas | 643,639 |
| | $1,432,622 |

The total budget resulting was $1,771,215, and was recommended for adoption by the Committee on Diocesan Finances. It was approved by the Convention.

The consideration of Resolutions was thereupon resumed with the recommendation of the Committee on Canons that the resolution providing for an alternative to the required reading of Pastoral Letters not be adopted. Mr. John Pierson of St. Thomas', Manhattan, expressed the view that the letters "do not interpret life to our generation." In rebuttal, the Rev. Robert E. Terwilliger of All Saints, Manhattan, while amusingly criticizing the style of the letters, was joined by the Rev. Donald Wiesner of St. Luke's, Katonah, in recommending retention of this custom. The Rev. Mr. Wiesner also pointed out that the resolution merely advocated an alternative method of presenting the letters and stressed their value as a bulwark against totalitarian eventualities. The recommendation of the Committee that the resolution not be adopted was voted by the Convention.

A resolution urging that the Congress of the United States adopt a strong and effective voting rights measure, including among its provisions the elimination of the poll tax in state and local elections was the next consideration. The Rev. Dr. Frederick M. Morris, St. Thomas', Manhattan, offered an amendment to eliminate the last phrase, and the Rev. J. Norman Hall, St. Bartholomew's, White Plains, submitted his objections on the grounds that the resolution was a moral, not a legal stand, and that the Congress of the United States was seriously debating the pros and cons, which are highly technical. The amendment was then defeated and the resolution carried.

A resolution in four parts pertaining to the Women's House of Detention in New York City was presented by the Rev. Dr. Leland B. Henry, St. Mary's, Scarborough. The Committee on Canons recommended passage of all four parts, but Number 2, commending the Department of Correction and the Commissioner was strongly opposed by the Rev. Donald C. Hagan, St. Edward the Martyr, Manhattan, Dr. Weston of St. Philip's, and the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Graf, of St. John's in the Village. Speakers in behalf of the resolution were the Director of the Episcopal Mission Society, the Rev. Ralph Bonacker, Dr. Henry and the Rev. Clarke K. Oler of the Church of the Holy Trinity, Manhattan. After a lengthy discussion, part 2 was defeated, with the acceptance of the other three, calling for replacement of the Women's House of Detention, the study of the practicability of releasing responsible persons without bail, and the sending of these resolutions to city officials.

Further discussion was prompted by a resolution presented by the Rev. John A. Bell, Incarnation, Manhattan, calling upon the President of the United States to inaugurate a moratorium in the United States' bombing of Communist North Viet-Nam. Adoption of the resolution was recommended by the Committee, although not unanimously. The Rev. Dr. John A. Krumm, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Manhattan, suggested that the resolution be referred to the Rev. Robert Pollard, All Saints, Valley Cottage, chairman of the newly established Committee on World Affairs, since the greatest minds in the country are seriously divided on the subject. Dr. Krumm's motion was seconded by the Rev. Mr. Bell.

The passage of various other resolutions, described on page 4, followed. The Rev. Ralph Bonacker, delivered the Report of the Episcopal Mission Society, Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr. presented the Report of the Episcopal Churchwomen, and Mr. Carlos Munoz read the Report of the Episcopal Laymen of New York; these reports are summarized on page 6. A hymn and the benediction then closed the Convention.

Resolution that the Diocese of New York approve and endorse a preamble to the Constitution of the Church. Referred to the Committee on Canons.

Excerpts from the Bishop's Address

In his address to the 185th Convention as Diocesan—he will celebrate his fifteenth anniversary in October—The Bishop strongly emphasized the importance of Mutual Responsibility and Interdependence in the Body of Christ (MRI) to the Church in the world of today. He also stressed the work of the Church in relation to such other social questions as alcoholism, civil rights, the abolition of the death penalty in New York State (since signed into law by the Governor), and the value of education in the Church schools of the Diocese.

Noting that the General Convention last year had accepted the call of MRI, The Bishop continued, "There are many signs today of a stirring of the Holy Spirit in churches, as, for example, the approaches to unity, the Liturgical Renewal, and the deep self-examination which is going on in every church in Christendom. In this new world openly secular the church stands at the beginning of a new period of mission.

"The division is no longer between high church and low church, between Catholic and Protestant, but between belief and disbelief in a personal God manifest in Jesus Christ. If the church is unwilling to examine its life, its structure, and be content to maintain the status quo, then a disinterested world will remain in untroubled disbelief.

"Those who have eyes to see can plainly discern the Holy Spirit moving amid the whole people of God, no part of the Christian church remains undistrubed. A new understanding is being borne in upon us that the church is not the clergy, a clerical society; neither is it exclusively the laity; it is the laos, the whole people of God called together not for mutual comfort and consolation, but to obey the living God."

The Bishop noted that the call is to obedience rather than mere agreement, and warned that "this obedience is painful and costly. . .a call to struggle to catch the vision of God's moving in the world and in the society He has made." He added that "while Mutual Responsibility is concerned with the life of the world and the Christian community beyond its Diocesan border, it begins at home. The real problem is faced only when it is faced locally and with specific objects in view."

The Bishop then called for the pairing of parishes as the first move toward realization of Mutual Responsibility, the pairing to be based on one of three criteria: similarity, dissimilarity or a common concern. Under the first heading of similarity, he said he could conceive of an active city church in Harlem being paired off with an active city church in Poughkeepsie, or a parish in Staten Island, most of whose men commute to work, with a similar commuting parish in Yonkers. In the matter of dissimilarity, he suggested the pairing of an inner-city parish with a wealthy suburban one.

"The matter of Common Concern," he then explained, "might well mean that a parish in Newburgh and a parish in the Bronx join together to provide the total support of one of our clergy involved in the difficult ministry to narcotic addicts. Whichever criterion is used, the all-important thing is that the parishes so paired shall decide on their program jointly and that each shall be prepared to receive from the other.

"To that easy question, 'What could a wealthy suburban parish possibly receive from an inner-city one —apart from an impression of how the other half lives?' I would point out that narcotics, alcohol and delinquency do not recognize city limits and that the 'other half' may well provide the knowledge and wisdom necessary to save some teenagers whose parents never heard of the inner-city.

"As to the concrete aims of such pairing, may I again remind you that it is not a scheme for making the Episcopal Church of the Anglican Communion richer and more effective in ministering to itself. Mutual Responsibility means sharing abilities and gifts and knowledge and prayers to the end that our specific family in Christ may save the whole of God's people everywhere.

"At the last General Convention the Episcopal Church committed itself to making available to the Anglican Communion one million dollars this year, two million dollars in 1966, and three million dollars in 1967. Above and beyond this, a Mutual Responsibility Fund has been established by the Diocese of New York and your Bishops and others are contributing regularly toward it. . .For too long a time, there has been independence on the

Annual Reports Given By All Departments on Year's Activities

Among the most important business on the agenda of the Convention are the reports from the Council of the Diocese and its component departments. Here, in summary, are the high points of these reports.

THE COUNCIL

This report was delivered by Archdeacon Richard E. McEvoy on behalf of Bishop Boynton, Secretary of the Council. Bishop Boynton's report gave a detailed synopsis of the various departmental actions at their meetings during the year. He reported that the Council by-laws were brought into conformance with canonical amendments adopted at the last Convention.

One of the meetings dwelt at considerable length on the matter of quotas. One of the main concerns was the reduction of the total budget adopted by the last Convention. The necessary reduction in the budget was accomplished by reducing the asking totals of various departments. Mr. Edmund J. Beazley, Administrative Assistant to the Bishop, underlined the fact that many parishes did not meet their quotas, and asked the Council to consider the question of quotas and ways of improving quota giving. It was pointed out that there was a great deal of concern that the 1965 budget might have to be cut since quotas are not being met.

The Convention's attention was directed to a request to parish Treasurers to make their payments on a regular basis, preferably monthly. The 1966 budget was presented to the Council, which adopted it and recommended it to the Convention.

DEPARTMENT OF MISSIONS

Archdeacon McEvoy continued with the report of the Department of Missions. He noted that the Church is presently involved in the life of 38 missions, or aided parishes in various neighborhoods, where the property responsibilities devolve upon Mr. William Crapo, Diocesan Coordinator of Missions, and his assistant, Mr. H. R. Foltz. Once again, because of quota failures, a budgetary cut proved to be necessary. In Mr. Crapo's report, he pointed out that the repair and maintenance of the missions is a task of considerable magnitude, since "they must be kept safe, sanitary, weather-proof, warm and neat-appearing, and must conform to a vast number of restrictive building codes," in addition to the necessary insurances.

The need for new construction to keep abreast of dynamic population trends was recognized. Some of the projects for future contemplation are a new church building for Holy Communion in Lake Mahopac, a parish hall extension for the Church of the Good Shepherd in Greenwood Lake, parish hall extensions for St. Augustine's in Yonkers and for All Saints in Valley Cottage, renovations to St. Ann's in the Bronx, and a church for St. Ann's for the Deaf in the Undercroft of All Angels in Manhattan.

Archdeacon McEvoy suggested that the two great problems of the Diocese are money and communications, with the latter being more important. "In every area of the world's life," he said in closing, "we must expect more central planning, and at the same time seek the understanding, cooperation and participation of persons and congregations where the redemptive work goes on most significantly. We are all involved in one mission; we are indeed workers together with Him who is the author and finisher of our faith."

DEPARTMENT OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

This report was delivered by the Chairman, the Rev. Clarke K. Oler, who began by enumerating the six large areas in which the Department was concerned. These are the Children's Division, the Youth Division, the Adult Division, the Division of Boarding and Day Schools, the College Work Division and the Leadership Training Division. Speaking briefly on the activities of each, he indicated the breadth of the Department's work. The Chairman noted that a relationship of mutual responsibility and interdependence exists between the Department of Christian Education and the parishes of the diocese. The Department must call upon leaders from the parishes to provide personnel for its programs and projects. The parishes are then able to participate in programs which they might not be able to provide for themselves. This working together makes the most efficient and imaginative use of the resources at hand.

The Rev. Mr. Oler then announced a new program for the training and education of the clergy, sponsored by the Department of Christian Education together with Bard College. The program, which it is hoped will be an annual event, will be a two-week seminar designed to help the clergy better understand the forces at work in our society which make for cultural and theological change. The first seminar, to be held in January, 1966 will be at the invitation of the Bishop; those who are unable to attend the first will be invited to a later session. The cost of the conference will be borne by the vestries as an investment in their own futures. The Rev. Mr. Oler closed by expressing his thanks to the hundreds of men and women who have assisted in the program of the de-

DEPARTMENT OF CHRISTIAN SOCIAL RELATIONS

The Rev. J. Norman Hall, Chairman of this Department, noted that the efforts of the Department are reflected in several of the resolutions offered to the Convention. Two of the resolutions dealt with civil rights, one focused on the Church's stewardship of its resources, the other on the right to vote. Four other resolutions, those dealing with New York State divorce laws, the New York City Housing Code, dissemination of birth control information and off-track pari-mutuel betting, also emanated from the work of this Department.

"Witness of the Church's concern for social justice", Mr. Hall noted, "is a function of the total church, and of each priest and of each congregation. The Department's role is that of catalyst, stimulant, resource and enabler. It exists to serve the Diocese and the parishes in their own witness, and in their own teaching about the great social and moral issues of our time."

The Rev. Mr. Hall also announced the establishment of a new committee on Diocesan World Affairs, to be headed by the Rev. Robert Pollard of All Saints, Valley Cottage. The purpose of the committee is to help the Diocese and the various parishes to turn more attention in the context of our faith to international problems of grave concern to us all. Mr. Hall also expressed his thanks to the leadership and help of John V.P. Lassoe, Jr. Executive Director of the Department.

STEWARDSHIP

The Rev. George F. Regas, Chairman, reported to the Convention for the first time on behalf of this new Department. The primary effort in the Stewardship Program has been directed toward involving the maximum number of lay people in strengthening the church at the parish level, and through this strength, extending the work of the church in the community, the nation and the world. Seventy-three congregations are already involved, numbering 36,000 persons.

Under the Executive Directorship of Eric Ley, Mr. Regas said, the Stewardship program has been highly successful. One of the desired results has been an increase in attendance at worship by many who before had been practicing the Christmas and Easter version of Christianity.

Another result of the stewardship mission has been a "feed-back" of information, sometimes critical of the clergy, the parish program, the vestry, but always an honest response to the program. The department is also working on programs designed to involve more leading laymen in Seminars and Workshops on Stewardship philosophy and technique conducted by members of the Department and hopes to do so on a regional basis.

Efforts are being directed toward making parish vestries more sensitive to their obligations in connection with the Missionary Quota. There is a desperate need for work here. There are 86 out of the 201 parishes of the Diocese which fail to meet this minimum obligation to the mission of the Church outside of their own walls. We know that no fruitful and meaningful program for MRI can possibly emerge until there is a basic understanding of Stewardship—and a commitment to it.

"We know that some time soon the MRI Commission will come forth with a program, and at that time our Department will be of even greater use to the Diocese," he concluded.

INFORMATION & DEVELOPMENT

In the absence of Mr. Brooke Alexander, this report was presented by Archdeacon McEvoy. The Department was created last May, and now consists of six laymen and two clergymen who are conversant with matters of information and development. The purpose of the Department is to provide the membership of the Church, within this Diocese, and the general public as well, with information regarding the aims, plans and programs of the Council. Preliminary work has been begun on a presentation showing the work of the Diocese, which will be available in September for vestries, lay groups and other interested organizations, together with a qualified speaker to answer any questions which might arise.

The Department is also undertaking research into foundations and other sources which might be interested in Diocesan projects and needs, and presentations have already been made to two foundations for specific projects.

A new format for the Diocesan publication is being considered, along with the issuance of a clergy news letter on a regular monthly basis. Further efforts are also being made to provide both lay and clerical speakers for radio, television and Diocesan groups, and a closer relationship with the press is being

"Our Ministry To Higher Education"

by the Rev. John D. Cannon, Acting Chaplain, Columbia University

Let us entertain a rather fanciful introduction to one of the Church's thorniest problems and greatest opportunities—the ministry to higher education. A children's rhyme comes to mind as a fitting expression of the problem. Perhaps its use in this context will illustrate the fact that our efforts have not grown with the task, that the Church which gave birth to higher education in Western civilization must now recognize that the University has "come of age" and that we are in danger of being regarded as an unwanted parent.

Little Bo-Peep has lost her sheep.
And can't tell where to find them.
Leave them alone, and they'll come home,
Wagging their tails behind them.

To many people in the academic community, the Church seems sadly like a worried but benevolent mother who insists on intepreting her relationship to the contemporary campus in terms of Bo-Peep's quandary. In the first place, Mother Church seems to suspect that her students are lost sheep, who have ventured into some unknown and dangerous land — the "groves of academe". She fears that many learned professors are wily "wolves" who thrive on pliable young minds. She suspects that many classmates, coming as they do from different "backgrounds", are "black sheep" who will threaten the morals of their Anglo-Saxon Protestant peers. No longer needed to nurture the intellect or the passions of her young, Mother Church suspects that she "has lost" or "is losing" her flock; and she is "at a loss" to know "where to find them." Nevertheless she feels responsible and perhaps a bit guilty, so she half-heartedly sends a few venturesome shepherds to the campus to show that she still cares and to lead the "lost" back to the fold. She is satisfied if they do no more than stake a claim for Canterbury, a home away from home, in the midst of this alien land. More often than not, however, Mother Church seeks comfort by singing Bo-Peep's doleful refrain to herself: "Leave them alone and they'll come home, Wagging their tails behind them." So she sits and waits, convinced that her flock will someday return, having tired and hungered, having learned shame and docility.

If we are to discern our present opportunities and to discover anew our mission to the University, we must begin with the recognition that our present attempts to relate the Church significantly to our academic communities are inadequate. It is no longer sufficient to speak simply of "student work": our ministry today is not only to the residential undergraduate who identifies himself as an Episcopalian but also to faculty, graduate students, administrators, maintenance and supervisory personnel, commuters, the unchurched, to all who share in the life of a college or university. Nor is it meaningful to speak of "college work." Our mission is, in many instances, to "multiversities"—vast complexes of undergraduate residential colleges, graduate faculties, research teams, professional schools, study centers, and teaching hospitals. When the Church addresses herself to higher education it is imperative that she see beyond a pastoral and sacramental ministry to her own members. We must be mission-minded, recognizing that the love and truth of God are being manifested in the secular University; and that Christians are called to appreciate and to proclaim and to interpret the work which He is doing there—even in the research laboratory, the library, and the classroom. Do we see that these are indeed green and fertile pastures? Can we be glad that students and faculty alike—even when they don't know it—are serving Him there? And can we help them to know it? We do not commend the Gospel to the sophisticated intellectual, to the disaffected student or the disaffiliated scholar by behaving like a worried mother in the face of something new and unknown. The academic institution calls its members to the frontiers of knowledge, and requires that they scrutinize and criticize all that has been known about men and about reality. Surely, those of us who are bearers of that which is new will not expend our efforts simply defending that which is old; we too must call our members in the academic community to the service of truth, and we must encourage them to examine and to understand the traditional in the light of this truth.

At Columbia University, the Diocese of New York has committed itself to work cooperatively with other Protestant denominations in an attempt to discover new ways of implementing the mission of the Church to higher education. Columbia is primarily a post-graduate institution, secular in nature, and reflecting the urban and pluralistic

WHAT YOUR DIOCESE IS DOING IN COLLEGE WORK

With a budget of $20,480 for 1965 we have

- one full time priest at New York University
- one half time priest at Columbia University
- one part time woman worker at Columbia-Barnard
- one part time woman worker at Vassar College
- a share in the time of a woman worker at Hunter College

In addition, the Diocese provides financial and staff support to the Protestant Foundation at Columbia, the New York University Christian Foundation, and the Protestant Association at Hunter College. In this way, we are able to take advantage of office facilities and programs far larger than we could provide on our own.

Much of the campus work in the Diocese of New York is done by priests and faithful laymen in parishes located near colleges and universities. The budget of the Diocese provides financial help to the parishes for this work. Most of it is spent directly on the students: refreshments for their gatherings, rental of films for their programs, conference and retreat costs, and transportation for them.

Bishop Issues Pastoral Letter Concerning MRI

A Pastoral Letter from the Bishop on M.R.I. was recently sent to all rectors, vicars and priests-in-charge, with the request that it be read to all wardens, vestrymen, and members of advisory boards.

To explain the purpose of the letter, Bishop Donegan wrote: "In all the great movements of the spirit, no matter how grand the theme or how high the vision, nothing has really come to fruition in Christian action until it has become specific."

The four page letter is devoted primarily to the Pairing of Parishes, "not that one might give and the other receive, but that there might flow a warm expression of Christian concern across barriers which under normal circumstances are exclusive and defeating."

Enclosed with the letter was a questionnaire. Rectors were asked to complete the first half, which is largely statistical. Vestrymen were asked to hold a special meeting to arrive at group answers to the second half relating to attitudes about the problems and opportunities of each parish.

19 Elected to Council Boards and Delegates

The Diocesan Convention of May 11 elected six men to the Council of the Diocese and two to the Standing Committee. Four others were named Deputies to the Provincial Synod, with four additional Provisional Deputies to that body. Three trustees of the Cathedral were also elected.

Elected to the Council (an executive committee of the Convention that exercises its powers between conventions and directs the work of the diocesan departments): The Rev. David Johnson, Rector of St. Martin's, Manhattan; The Rev. George F. Regas, Rector of Grace Church, Nyack; The Rev. David B. Weden, Rector of Grace Church, White Plains; Frederick G. Atkinson, business executive, Heavenly Rest, Manhattan; Charles R. Lawrence, Ph.D., educator, St. Paul's, Spring Valley; and William A. McRitchie, banker, Christ Church, Bronxville.

Elected to the Standing Committee (a council of advice to the Bishop): The Rev. John M. Krumm, Ph.D., S.T.D., Rector, Ascension, Manhattan; and Andrew Oliver, attorney, Resurrection, Manhattan.

Elected Deputies to the Provincial Synod, Class of 1968 (the legislative body of the Province, which consists of eight dioceses): The Rev. Howard O. Bingley, Rector, St. John's, Staten Island; The Rev. Hugh D. McCandless, D.D., Rector, Epiphany, Manhattan; George A. Casscells, engineer, Zion Church, Wappingers Falls; and Godfrey R. deCastro, attorney, Crucifixion, Manhattan.

Elected Provisional Deputies to the Provincial Synod: The Rev. Basil G. Law, Rector, St. James', Bronx; The Rev. Leonel L. Mitchell, St. Luke's, Beacon; Edward Maguire, Jr., attorney, Resurrection, Manhattan; and Bradley M. Walls, attorney, St. Mary the Virgin, Manhattan.

Elected Trustees of the Cathedral, Class of 1971: The Rev. Canon John Heuss, S.T.D., D.D., Rector, Trinity, Manhattan; Walter C. Jago, architect, Christ Church, Tarrytown; and Charles G. Proffitt, publisher, Grace Church, Manhattan.

ECW Convocation and Diocesan Boards Hold Two Day Meeting at Tuxedo Park

Climaxing a two day meeting of the Executive Board of Episcopal Churchwomen May 18 and 19 at the Bishop Donegan Center, Tuxedo Park, members of Convocation Boards were the guests of the Diocesan Board on Wednesday. A cordial welcome was extended by Mrs. Howard W. Weale, Diocesan President.

The morning was devoted to Round Table discussions for Chairmen of Standing Committees and other officers.

Following luncheon a panel presented a review of major New York State legislative concerns in 1965 under the title "The Church and Legislation." The panel included Mr. Beekman Pool, Director of the Legislation Information Bureau, State Charities Aid Association; the Rev. Benson Fisher, a member of the Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations; and Mr. John V. P. Lassoe, Jr., Director of the Diocesan Department of Christian Social Relations.

Of immediate concern was a bill to repeal the present law inhibiting dissemination of birth control information. Petitions urging favorable action in the State Senate and Assembly were circulated and signed.

It was announced that Mrs. Harold C. Kelleran, Associate Professor of Pastoral Theology and Christian Education at Virginia Theological Seminary, will be the Keynoter for the Episcopal Churchwomen's Conference September 29 and 30 at Lake Minnewaska. ■ one hand and dependence on the other, but very little interdependence called for by Christian concern. It is my most sincere hope that this Diocese and all congregations within it will take seriously the opportunity and challenges now before us all."

In discussing other urgent matters, the Bishop announced that the offerings of parishes and missions for the Church's missionary endeavor have again shown growth. The total payments for last year were $1,112,728, the largest amount ever reached in the history of the Diocese. As always, the Diocese gave away more than it spent upon itself; 54% of the total payments went to the Executive Council and 46% were designated for Diocesan needs. Although expressing encouragement at the increase in missionary giving, he reminded the Convention that the obligation to the National Church was not met, nor, because 86 congregations failed to meet their quotas, was the required amount given for the Diocesan program.

Speaking of the Church's schools, the Bishop said, "I urge all those to whom God has provided the means of financial support to remember our Church schools and support them generously. And I express the hope that when our people are considering sending their children to private schools, they give first consideration to the schools of the Church. In this Diocese we have eight day schools, six boarding schools and five kindergartens all directly connected both by history and present practice with the Bishop and Diocese of New York."

Speaking briefly of capital punishment, he pointed out that the bill (since passed) before the legislature did not provide for the total abolition of capital punishment, and thus meant that the Church's efforts must not end if it were passed and signed. "It does, however," he added, "represent a significant step toward total abolition of this immoral practice."

With regard to alcoholism, the Bishop reminded his listeners that it is the nation's third most serious health problem and a fearful and tragic illness. "Recovery is possible," he explained, "difficult but possible, and hundreds of thousands have managed to find sobriety and, in a very real and spiritual sense, to experience re-birth. The Church can play a significant role in this rehabilitation and re-birth process if we care enough to try.

"Our clergy must equip themselves to take their place with Alcoholics Anonymous and the medical profession in a combined healing ministry to alcolohics, and of course many of our clergy are doing this and have done it for years. But there is a role for congregations as well. All Church people must accept their Christian responsibility to develop in the Church and in the community the healing environment within which alcoholics may be helped, and within which they and their families may find strength and love and understanding. To turn from alcoholics

As Bishop of New York, it is my duty to take official and public notice of the retirement of one of the truly great servants of our Diocese

DR. THEODOR OXHOLM

Dr. Oxholm has served us with nothing less than sacrificial devotion for nearly a quarter of a century. When he came to us, the Diocesan structure was antiquated and so completely out of date as to be dangerously inefficient. It was my privilege, with approval of Convention, to set in motion its complete modernization. As Assistant-Treasurer and as Treasurer, Dr. Oxholm was able to make this concept work.

He served Bishop Manning and Bishop Gilbert faithfully. His service to the Diocese during my Episcopate has been marked by an equal faithfulness. It would, however, be less than a complete picture of the man were I to stop on the note of faithfulness. His vast ability, his untiring labours, his profound personal concern for the welfare of all the Clergy of the Diocese, his absolute integrity, and his shy sensitivity, have rendered his services invaluable.

Yet there is more. He made it possible for me to assume my responsibility with some genuine comprehension of the situation and some real insight into the task which lay before me.

He means much to us all, as must one who has served us so well. He means very much to me, not only as one who has supported and counselled me wisely, but also as one who is, and for ever shall be, my friend.

Bishop of New York

Bishop's Message

in their sickness, as we sometimes do, mocks the Faith that calls us to minister to all who are in need."

The Bishop also repeated his conviction that it is the Church's business to involve itself in civil rights. "I trust," he said, "that any of you who are moved by the Holy Spirit to witness to the Church's concern for racial justice in other parts of the country will first witness to that concern in your own community. We do not want the Church or its representatives to be accused of acting forthrightly where it has nothing to lose.

"I am not saying that we should not make our witness in other parts of the country, nor am I suggesting that there is no element of personal risk in that distant witness. We know only too well that it can lead to death. But Christian witness is not entirely personal. We witness also for the gathered Church, and the Church—at least the institution—risks little when its members carry their witness to distant places without first having spoken out against injustices at home. That makes it entirely too safe for the Church, and safety, which may be a legitimate institutional concern, is always a threat to Christian mission.

"There is a constant tension between the Church as the Body of Christ and the Church as an institution of society. And it is a tension with which we must never learn to live too comfortably. Like all institutions, the Church is tied to structure and organization. So has it been and so probably will it always be. But we have a special responsibility to remember that the institution is for us the means, not the end. We must never allow its demands to overshadow our greater commitment to the Body of Christ. For the truth is that the primary mission of the Church is something much greater than the preservation of the institution.

"We are obligated to make every resource at our command work in every way possible for the advance of the Kingdom, but proper stewardship of our resources does not mean that we always employ those resources as prudently or as self-servingly as other institutions might. We must be prepared to sacrifice institutional interests to the Kingdom's call. You know from experience, as I do, that Christian witness in areas of social controversy, especially one as fraught with emotions as the civil rights struggle, loses financial support for the Church. And I say to you that is financial support that the Church can ill afford not to lose. This is the element of risk that must always be present in our witness and our mission if they are to count for anything at all."

In other portions of his address, The Bishop announced the appointment of Harold Mock as Director of the newly-formed Department of Information and Development. He also congratulated the new churches of All Saints, Richmond, and Resurrection at Hopewell Junction on their handsome new structures, and welcomed the admission of All Saints Church, Manhattan, as a parish of the Convention.

Commenting on the increasing growth of the Diocese, the Bishop said, "During the past year, 3,242 persons have been added to the Communicant strength. I have ordained thirteen candidates to the Diaconate and ordained eleven Deacons to the Priesthood. There are 534 clergy in the Diocese and 446 are canonically resident. Eighty-eight are officiating under my license. There are 51 postulants and candidates for Holy Orders. There are five Deaconesses and twelve Certified Professional Woman Church Workers, and 202 Lay Readers."

In conclusion, the Bishop said, "On the first of this month I commenced the 33rd year of my ministry in this Diocese, and on St. Simon and St. Jude's Day next October, D.V., I shall celebrate the eighteenth anniversary of my consecration as Bishop and conclude my fifteenth year as your Diocesan. I can think of no greater privilege and honor than to have served in this Diocese both as Rector and as Bishop. Whatever has been accomplished has been possible only because New York is the sort of Diocese it is: it is not only the largest Diocese in the American Church, but it is also, even if I sound a little prejudiced, the largest minded and the largest hearted.

"You have trusted me all these years, and I have tried to serve you to the absolute best of my ability. You have had, and you will have, greater Bishops than I, but you will never have one who loves this Diocese more. "I thank you; God bless you!" ■

Higher Education

character of New York City. We have therefore had to recognize that the price of putting our major efforts into a denominationally oriented ministry to undergraduates is isolation from the main streams of University life.

Our initial efforts have been simply to acquaint ourselves with the University itself, to appreciate its complexity and diversity, and to establish "points of contact" with administrators, faculty, and students. Out of these contacts emerge significant conversations in which we are able to articulate and to share our particular perspective and, when possible, to relate it to the concerns and interests of the various intellectual disciplines. In many instances, the "point of contact" becomes an occasion for counseling, but we do not address ourselves to the University or to its members as if they were in need of counsel, or of conversation, or even of a "good Christian conscience." Rather we address the University as friends who have come to share in its life, to appreciate its work and its problems, and, whenever possible, to serve. Occasionally, we are constrained to criticize and to seek to chasten and to correct, not as a parent corrects a wayward child but as a friend whose investment in a common culture is considerable and whose interest in the service performed by higher education is crucial. We are called, for instance, to add our voices to those that are criticizing bureaucratization and depersonalization in higher education, to those that are trying to understand the fragmentation and "explosion" of knowledge, to those that are speaking out against the powerful business and governmental interests which are increasingly inclined to direct the resources of the University away from teaching to contracted research. And we are compelled to call for a word from faculty and students alike whenever they seem inclined to silence in the face of pressing social issues—race relations, war and peace, problems of housing and education in the University neighborhood. These interests and activities comprise what we speak of as our "unstructured" ministry at Columbia. We believe that they are a natural and necessary extension of the Church's pastoral, prophetic, and teaching roles to a new situation.

We continue and implement a "structured" program which, at present, involves primarily residential graduate and undergraduate students. We sponsor three lecture series during the year in which visiting scholars are invited to address themselves to current theological and ethical issues. A monthly program of Interdisciplinary Conversations brings together graduate students with faculty members from two or more disciplines. We engage regularly with representatives from other religious groups in Interfaith dormitory discussions, and in other programs which are designed to enable us to appreciate religious pluralism.

Our undergraduate program has two foci: the Community of Lay Scholars and the Postcrypt. The lay scholars undertake a disciplined program of study and discussion in weekly group meetings. The intention of this community is to provide a context in which students can examine the Biblical, theological and historical resources of Christianity, and in light of this study come to a reasoned and well-articulated understanding of the faith and life of the church and of their place in the contemporary Christian community. The Postcrypt, a coffeehouse located under the portico of St. Paul's Chapel, provides an atmosphere in which students can gather informally for recreation, refreshment and conversation with the stimulation of significant art forms. It provides as well an opportunity for those with creative and artistic ability to develop and to share their talents. The coffeehouse also serves as a place where the religious counselors can meet and converse with students who would otherwise not be accessible to them.

In addition to these programs, we continue to address ourselves to the particular needs and interests of those of our own denomination. With the assistance of Seminarians, we carry on an extensive program of visitation in the dormitories. Episcopal students hold two celebrations of the Eucharist during the week, one of which is followed by informal discussion. This provides us with an occasion when we can consider our own particular traditions and our common ministry as Episcopalians in the University community. In most cases, however, Episcopal students choose to involve themselves in those aspects of our program and ministry which are ecumenically oriented.

Although we are beginning at Columbia to realize a significant response to our ministry, we must still conclude that our resources are too limited to enable the kind of mission that we envision as a possibility. Except for occasional contacts, we have virtually no ministry to the professional schools (law, business, medicine, social work, etc.). Teachers College, which includes some three hundred and fifty Episcopal students, is at present largely beyond the scope of our efforts. The commuting student remains a stranger to us. And we have not yet opened up significant channels of communication with faculty members—with few exceptions. These are just a few of the areas where we must effectively extend our ministry in the future. In the meantime we should not expect a "return to religion" on the contemporary campus. It is the Church which must return to higher education.

Three New Members Named To E.M.S. Board of Managers

Mrs. Austin

Mrs. Buchanan

Mr. Lindstedt

Three new members have been named to the Episcopal Mission Society's Board of Managers, it was announced by Bishop Donegan and the Rev. Ralph Bonacker. At the same time, it was also announced that Mr. Theodore Baumeister had resigned from the Board.

The new members are Mrs. Joyce Phillips Austin, Mrs. Albert B. Buchanan and Mr. Harold M. Lindstedt.

Mrs. Austin, who holds a Law Degree from Fordham University, is a member of St. Philip's Church and is an assistant to Mayor Wagner.

Mrs. Buchanan, who has served on the Saint Barnabas House Committee since 1960, was named this year Chairman of that Committee. She is the wife of the Rector of Calvary Church.

Mr. Lindstedt, a member of St. Mary the Virgin, is a Trustee and the Treasurer of that parish and a Trustee and the president of The Midnight Mission. He is an Assistant Vice-President of the Chase Manhattan Bank. ■

Fr. Larsen to Preach in Two English Cathedrals

The Rev. Lawrence B. Larsen, Rector of Christ Church, Pelham, has been invited to take part in ceremonies commemorating the 750th anniversary of the Magna Carta. The festal service takes place in Lincoln Cathedral on July 24, at which time the historic document will be placed in a special vault for its preservation and safe keeping. The following Sunday Fr. Larsen will preach at the cathedral.

For the week-end of July 18 he and Mrs. Larsen will be guests of the Lord Bishop of Southwell in Nottinghamshire, and he will preach at the cathedral there on Sunday.

The couple also plans to spend a week in London, where they have been invited to stay at Lambeth Palace.

"Get Out Into Your Neighborhood" Judge Marshall Tells ELNY Conference in June

Asserting that we all are fully aware of the injustice that now exists, the Honorable Thurgood Marshall urged a conference sponsored by the Episcopal Laymen of New York to "get outside their church buildings, study the problems of their neighborhoods, and get to work on these problems." The speaker, well-known as former Chief Counsel for the N.A.A.C.P., is now a Justice of the U.S. Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, a member of the Standing Committee of the Diocese, and one of six lay delegates of the Diocese to the last General Convention of our church.

Judge Marshall, keynote speaker for the ELNY conference on the theme, "Christian Obedience", held at St. Peter's School, Peekskill on Saturday, June 12th, was joined at the afternoon session by a panel of experts, who responded to questions developed during the earlier discussions by more than 150 priests and laity in attendance. Members of the panel were Mr. John V.P. Lassoe, Jr., Director of Christian Social Relations of the diocese, Dr. Charles P. Lawrence, Professor of Sociology, Brooklyn College, and the Rev. Arthur Walmsley, Executive Secretary for Christian Citizenship of the Executive Council.

The group discussions were held on such questions as: "What areas of life are the church's proper concern and what areas are not?" "If Christians disobey the law of any state, are any civil laws secure?", and "Can an obedient Christian remain aloof from the problems of his community?"

Many were the favorable comments about the ELNY event from an audience that often responded warmly to Judge Marshall's incisive remarks, sense of humor, and gracious manner. As one discussion leader remarked, "How can I have a discussion when no one disagrees?"

Keynote Speaker and panel leaders at ELNY Conference, (from l. to r.) the Hon. Thurgood Marshall, Charles P. Lawrence, John V.P. Lassoe, Jr., the Rev. Arthur Walmsley.

The Very Rev. Mother Ruth, principal of St. Hilda's and St. Hugh's School, Manhattan, gratefully accepts a $3,000 contribution to the school building fund from St. Michael's Church, Manhattan. Making the presentation are the Rev. William Corker, Rector and Hans Kessler, Treasurer. Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new building were held on May 24.

Annual Reports

fostered to help in the dissemination of information concerning the Diocese.

EPISCOPAL MISSION SOCIETY

In the report presented by the Rev. Ralph D. Bonacker, special attention was given the Parish Case Work Project. The program has been financed by grants from the Home Department of the Executive Council, the Girls' Friendly Society and the parishes of St. James and St. Thomas in Manhattan. A trained caseworker, Miss Kathleen Yost, works with three inter-city parishes, St. Matthew and St. Timothy, St. Peter's, Chelsea and St. Mary's, Manhattanville. The most significant lines of development in this project have been 1) that multi-problem families have made up the bulk of referrals; 2) one of the major needs in providing effective service to these families has been fuller use of existing community services; 3) in other cases the parish caseworker has carried responsibility for the direct casework needed while still using the resources of other agencies; and 4) the development of genuine effective working relationships between clergy and secular agencies. The Society is willing to extend its service to other parishes, Dr. Bonacker said, but the cost will be approximately $12,400 per year for all expenses.

The Rev. Mr. Bonacker noted the building of a new Edgewater Creche Camp for 6 to 8 year old children, which will cost approximately $350,000, of which $194,000 is still needed.

During 1964, the total number of persons provided direct service by the Society reached a new high of 36,000. It is probable that as many as 100,000 are now served, since the larger figure includes institutional staffs and other members of families of persons listed as active cases, and the many persons served by the Women's Council Volunteers.

EPISCOPAL CHURCHWOMEN

Mrs. W. Stanley W. Edgar, Jr., President, offered this report, pointing out that her group was unusual in that it came not to ask funds but to report on the use of its time, and noted that the Triennial Ingathering of the United Thank Offering was a record $4,790,921, of which the Diocese of New York contributed $217,215. Listing some of the group's numerous activities in the areas of social reform, Mrs. Edgar announced that the Christian Social Relations Service Pledge for 1965 will go for work with narcotics addicts, migrant workers and juvenile delinquents in deprived areas.

Supply work continues to be the largest project, working with 26 missions, schools and hospitals throughout the world, as well as Diocesan missions, and certain interdenominational agencies, such as Church World Service and Interchurch Medical Assistance. The Church Periodical Club divided its support among Diocesan, national and overseas projects, with substantial grants to libraries in the Philippines, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica and Nigeria.

Further contributions were made by the Youth and College Fund of Episcopal Churchwomen, and others to the New York Liturgical Conference, scholarship aid to American Indian children, work with migrants in New York, toward the support of St. Martin's Hospital of the Church of South India, and toward the purchase of a machine to make building blocks from earth, to be used in South Africa.

EPISCOPAL LAYMEN OF NEW YORK

Delivered by Mr. Carlos Munoz, the report emphasized the dynamic work accomplished by ELNY since its establishment five years ago. During this year, a conference was held on "The Old Gospel in a New Order," led by Bishop John A. T. Robinson of Woolwich, England, with highly gratifying results, and a conference on Christian Obedience was planned for June 12 of this year, with the Hon. Thurgood Marshall as speaker.

Other activities sponsored by the Seven Convocation Councils included a Laymen's School in Dutchess, and volunteer work at the Rockland State Mental Hospital in Ramapo. An ELNY Leadership Conference held in Tuxedo Park in February resulted in the recommendation to the Diocesan Board of five more major changes in structure and program of the group, keeping its activities and membership fluid and lively. Mr. Munoz stated, quoting from the new handbook, that this program "is to assist congregations in their efforts to challenge men to a more complete commitment to their ministry, and thus inspire greater allegiance to our Lord."

Celebration of 50th Anniversary Held At Intercession Chapel

A festal celebration of the 50th anniversary of the consecration of the Church building of the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity Parish, Manhattan, was held on Whitsunday, June 6, at the Chapel with The Rev. Canon John Heuss, Rector of Trinity Parish the preacher. Parishioners and their friends attended an anniversary Reunion Dinner at the Concourse Plaza Hotel in the afternoon.

The Chapel of the Intercession is American Gothic and is considered by architects as one of the ten leading Gothic structures in this country.

The consecration of the building was on Whitsun Tuesday 1915, by the Rt. Rev. David H. Greer of New York.

The Chapel of the Intercession was erected by Trinity Church on grounds which Trinity Corporation had purchased in 1842 and had set apart a portion of as Trinity Church Cemetery. An exterior wall of the Chapel bears a bronze tablet marking it as part of the site of the Battle of Washington Heights, 1776.

Camping - Conference Facilities Available During Summer Months

The facilities at St. John's-in-the-Wilderness in Harriman State Park near Stony Point will be available to parish groups for family camping and parish conferences for a major portion of this summer. Facilities include two tent areas (the tents are on wooden platforms), a building containing shower facilities, and a converted barn used for kitchen, dining and recreation purposes. The beach at Lake Welch is one mile away.

The camp supervisor will be available to help with the leadership of any programs, if so desired. The church is adjacent to the camp.

The charge for the use of these facilities is $15 per day for any size group. Specific information may be obtained from the Rev. Richard J. Kirk, Department of Christian Education. ■

Annual Presentation Service

The procession of choirs, acolytes and clergy pass in review before Bishop Donegan and (l. to r.) Dean Butler, Bishop Boynton, Bishop Wetmore and Archdeacon McEvoy. Climaxing the Service which followed, one representative of each parish presented the children's missionary offering for the year.

A picnic luncheon on the Close preceded the 55th annual Presentation Service held in May at the Cathedral.

By The Rev. Dr. Edward N. West

Q. My son is now in high school and is becoming interested in the ministry as a profession. How can I encourage him? Can you suggest some good books or pamphlets that he could read?

A .There are several excellent things in print. One is the Road To The Ministry which was published in The Bulletin a year or so ago and is available as a reprint. Another is a book entitled What Is The Priesthood which was written by Dr. Butler, the Dean of our Cathedral, and Prof. Norman Pittenger of the General Theological Seminary. The Episcopal Seminaries and the Episcopal Church Center, 815 Second Avenue, New York 17, N.Y., have two excellent pamphlets ("Live Option For You" and "Are You a Many-Sided Man?") which are available free.

As to encouraging the boy, may I stress just a little caution in the matter. He ought to be responding to a call from God, but one of the hardest things in the world for interested parents and other grown ups to do is to avoid interfering with God. Nothing must be put in the way of the call; on the other hand no slightest pressure must act on the young man in place of God's call. This is probably highly gratuitous, but the Bishops and the Examining Chaplains as well as all the men associated with our Seminaries could give rather tragic examples of people who confuse either coercion or one of the inevitable products of coercion, rebellion, as an adequate reason for entering the ministry.

Cathedral School Will Become a Day School Beginning in the Fall

When the Cathedral School celebrates its 64th anniversary this fall, it will accommodate the largest number of boys in its history.

The change from a boarding school to a day school and the resulting renovations will increase the capacity from 58 boys to a minimal 75. Since the number of choir boys will remain at about 45, non-singers will have a much better chance of being admitted.

Tuition at the school is $450 for choristers and $800 for non-singers. Some scholarships are available in both categories.

The choristers devote ten 40 minute periods a week to music, and a rich and varied cultural enrichment program is provided for the other boys during these periods.

The school has a new library containing more than 1,500 volumes, a gymnasium, playing field, and garden. Instructional and recreational swimming are offered through arrangement with Columbia University.

Canon Harold Landon, who became Headmaster in April, 1964, still teaches a course in mathematics "just for the fun of it." But he has a staff of nine teachers because he is a firm believer in small classes and personalized instruction.

For the present the school will continue to offer grades four through eight, but plans are underway to add lower grades, perhaps in time for the fall, 1966 opening. ■
